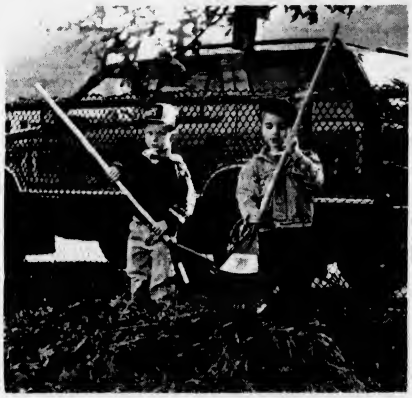
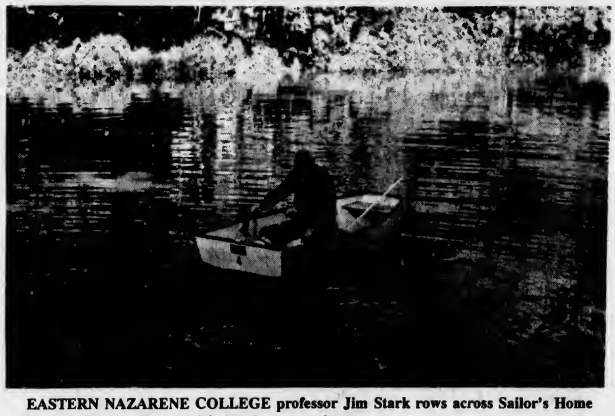
THE AHERN FAMILY, Kathryn, Susan and Jim, were there to do their part at Sailor's Home Pond.



BEVERLY CADORETTE, senior associate of Comprehensive Environmental, Inc., and Mary Helen Mahoney plant Sago pond weed that helps absorb excess phosphorus, a pollutant that causes unsightly algal blooms.

DWP, ENC Residents Team For Sailor's Pond Cleanup



On a gorgeous fall morning, when many would have preferred to sleep in, the residents around Sailor's Home Pond showed how much they cared about their community and the environment.

Twenty-nine adults and children arrived at the pond early on a recent Saturday morning to clean up garbage, rake leaves, and plant new pond vegetation. The cleanup was sponsored by the City of Quincy Department of Public Works, and was supported by both Commissioner David Colton and Major James Sheets.

The DPW provided the tools and materials to clean up the area and transplant the new vegetation. The project was coordinated by the Quincy DPW 2nd Professor Jonathan Twining of Eastern Nazarene College, who has been working with the DPW on restoration plans for the pond since the fall of 1998.

HELPING TO CLEAN up Sailor's Home Pond were Nicholas and Patrick Frasso.

EASTERN NAZARENE COLLEGE professor Jim Stark rows across Sailor's Home Pond in search of floating debris to be removed.

Participants from the local community included:

Jim Ahern, Kathryn Ahern, Susan Ahern, Barbara Blake, John Fagerlund, Michael Frasso, Nicholas Frasso, Patrick Frasso, Lindsay Harris, Barbara Johnston, Peter Johnston, Page Kistler, Mary Helen Mahoney, Dan Minton, Sarah Minton, Matthew O'Malley, Paul O'Neil, and Ken Reichel. It was especially gratifying to see so many parents bringing their children to teach them the value of environmental stewardship. Beverly Cadorette, Senior Associate of Comprehensive Environmental Inc. also volunteered to join with the community in Saturday's efforts. Comprehensive Environmental is the firm working with the Quincy DPW and Eastern Nazarene College to remediate the pond.

Among the participants were six professors and staff members from Eastern Nazarene College. In addition to Professor Twining were Dr. Lowell Hall and his wife, Dorla; Dr. James Stark; Laura Constantine, and Lenora Ngutter; all residents of Quincy. Two students, Amanda Grignon and James Hope also participated. The Environmental Science Program at the college believes that students and faculty should put environmental stewardship into practice in local community, and several students have been working on projects with the DPW in the past year.

Participants collected several bags full of trash, pulled old tree limbs from the water, and raked leaves along the intersecting streets. Over 1,500 Sago pondweed tubers were planted, as well as 100 arrowhead tubers, 100 pickerelweed, 50 sweet flag, and 50 bottlebrush sedge. These plants will help to absorb excess phosphorus in the pond, a pollutant that causes unsightly algal blooms. Many of these plants were planted near storm drainage outfalls that enter the pond in four locations.

Many of the participants have fond memories of Sailor's Home Pond over the years. Some have enjoyed the peaceful atmosphere as they walk past the pond. Others come to see the birds and wildlife that frequent the area, including ducks, egrets, herons, and turtles; even the occasional osprey. One man even said that he had proposed to his wife by the shores of Sailor's Home Pond. These stories convey the importance of these natural treasures to our urban communities.

Rosemary Nolan, Program Director for the Quincy DPW, said she was very pleased with the turnout, and the active participation by community residents. She said she and the Quincy Department of Public Works would like to thank all of those that participated in taking the next step toward the restoration of Sailor's Home Pond.

Additional cleanups are planned, and community residents will be kept informed of the times and dates for these events, she said.

'Will Make Food Shopping Fun Again'

Victory Opens New North Quincy Store Friday

Victory Super Markets will open its newest store at 475 Hancock Street in North Quincy Friday, Oct. 22 at 7 a.m.

Called the Market Square at Victory, the new store will offer the modern conveniences and services of today's supermarket, plus the sights, smells and tastes of an old-world, European-style market under one roof.

"Our North Quincy store will make food shopping fun again and take stress out of deciding what to serve for dinner each night," said Victory President Arthur (Jay) P. DiGeronimo, Jr. "This store will meet consumers' basic food shopping needs and provide an array of ethnic and specialty food products, fresh produce, meats, seafood and prepared foods for every occasion."

The newly remodeled 54,000 square foot store will offer busy consumers a convenient one-stop-shopping option for all their meal planning, entertaining and household needs.

Shoppers with little time to cook will find countless great-tasting meal ideas at the center of Market Square in the Courtyard Cafe. Here, shoppers will find an assortment of freshly prepared made-to-order foods including pastas, pizzas, sandwiches, soups, stir-fry dishes, sushi and grilled selections. Customers can enjoy a cup of fresh brewed gourmet coffee or a specialty coffee drink at the Courtyard Coffee Bar. In addition, an appetizing selection of prepared entrees, side dishes and desserts will be available to take home and eat.

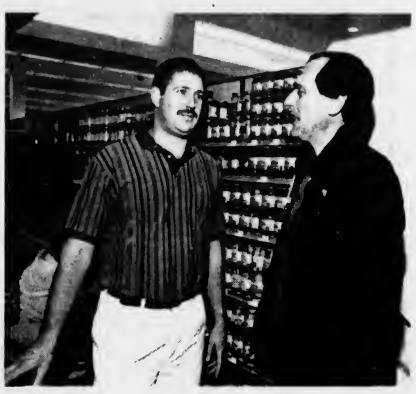
"The Courtyard Cafe is like a restaurant or specialty store within a supermarket," said DiGeronimo. "Customers can visit the Courtyard Cafe as part of their regular shopping trips or just come in for quick meals." As an added convenience, shoppers can pay for their orders right in the Cafe.

The Market Square will offer a variety of fresh foods including produce from around the globe, an old-world bakery, specialty butcher shop, fresh fish and seafood department, deli department, specialty cheese shop and floral shop.

Throughout the rest of the store, shoppers will discover an extensive selection of traditional and specialty food items in the grocery, dairy, and frozen food aisles, plus a variety of household and personal care items.

"North Quincy has a very diverse population," says DiGeronimo. "Victory will strive to provide the right products and services to meet the needs of all our customers."

For example, shoppers with large households will find many family or value packed items throughout the store. Single or two person households will find individual size and small packages in every department. Customers will also find a wide selection of international products including Asian, Hispanic and Kosher foods, to name a few.



The North Quincy Victory Super Market will employee more than 240 full-time and part-time people. The store will be open Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. and on Sunday, from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Victory Super Markets is a third-generation, family-owned and operated business founded in Leominster, MA in 1923. In July of 1999, the company purchased five stores from Shaw's Supermarkets, including the North Quincy location. By year's end, Victory Super Markets will operate a total of 20 stores in Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire.

British, Irish Chaplains To Visit Correctional Center

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti will welcome more than a dozen chaplains from England, Wales and Northern Ireland, including the director of Prison Chaplain Services for England and Wales, to the Sheriff's Office and Correctional Center on Friday, Oct. 22.

The group, made up of Catholic and Protestant chaplains, will arrive at the Correctional Center at noon, take a tour of the facility, followed by lunch and a discussion with other chaplains from Norfolk County about their work. The press is invited to attend.

"We welcome this opportunity to share information with other ministers from overseas," Bellotti said. "Our correctional center and the chaplains who conduct outreach here will be enriched by this visit."

The Irish Studies Program at Boston College is sponsoring the visit. Robert Savage, the associate director of the Irish Studies Program, said the tour would give the chaplains a chance to exchange views with their American counterparts.

The ministers will also have sessions with students from the Graduate School of Social Work at BC.

MSPCC To Honor Bellotti As 'Village Hero'

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (MSPCC) has selected Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti as a "Village Hero."

The "Village Hero" distinction comes as part of MSPCC's largest annual "A Family Affair." The theme for this year's "A Family Affair" is "It Takes a Village." MSPCC is saluting individuals across the state who have made significant contributions to the children of their community.

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

Bellotti, a Quincy resident, was chosen as a "Village Hero" from the MSPCC's Metro Region. He and his wife, Gayle, are foster parents, as well as parents of their own two children.

"Sheriff Bellotti has certainly served as a 'Village Hero' in the Quincy community," said Bill Hunter, regional administrator for the Metro Region. "His efforts have greatly impacted the lives of countless children and families in the area. It is our pleasure to honor Sheriff Bellotti--not only do we view him as a true hero, but so do the children he serves."

"A Family Affair" is MSPCC's largest fundraiser of the year. Each year, families are honored for their commitment to each other and for the contributions they have made on behalf of children.

The 13th annual "A Family Affair" celebration will be held Tuesday, Oct. 26 at the Marriott Hotel Copley, Boston.

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is a private, non-profit child welfare agency with a long-standing commitment to the children of Massachusetts. Since 1878, MSPCC has served as a leading advocate for children and families, providing programs that prevent child abuse, treat the victims of abuse and neglect, and strengthen families.

Rabbi Mann Dinner Site Shifted To Randolph Because Of Crowd Size

The site of the dinner celebration for Rabbi Jacob Mann and Beth Israel Synagogue has been changed to accommodate the large number of those who want to attend.

The dinner will be held Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at Temple Beth Am, 871 North Main St., Randolph instead of Temple Beth El in Quincy.

Rabbi JACOB MANN

Committee member Rita Needel said the move had to be made because Temple Beth Am is larger than Temple Beth El. Over 250 are expected to attend.

The dinner will celebrate Rabbi Mann's 90th birthday and the 80th anniversary of Beth Israel Synagogue.

Rabbi Mann is in his 57th year as spiritual leader at Beth Israel. It is believed to be the longest anyone has so served a Quincy house of worship.

Rabbi Mann was born and ordained in Jerusalem. He came to the United States in 1930 and served as a rabbi in Torrington, Conn. for eight years before coming to Quincy.

He became rabbi at Beth Israel in 1942 during World War II at the age of 33.

Rabbi Mann married Leah Balban, who was also born in Jerusalem, in 1932. They had three children: Rabbi Jonah Mann now of Flushing, N.Y.; Rabbi Abraham Mann of Manhattan and Ester Mann Snyder of Israel.

Mrs. Snyder will fly in from Israel to join her brothers and children of the family at the dinner.

Mrs. Mann died in 1962. In 1968, Rabbi Mann married Isabel Marantz, who was a principal in the Quincy public school system. They were married for nearly 22 years until her death in 1990.

Rabbi Mann has eight grandchildren and 16 great grandchildren.

For more information about Sunday's dinner, contact Rita Needel at 472-0582.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

INGROWN TOENAIL

An ingrown toenail develops when the nail's edge grows into the skin of the toe. The skin surrounding the toenail can become red and infected if dirt or sweat enter the area. An infection causes the skin at the nail's tip or side to become red, swollen and tender. Sometimes a small amount of pus exits the area. Ingrown toenails can occur on any toe but usually affect the big toe. Curved toenails, improperly trimmed nails or poorly fitting shoes can lead to ingrown toenails. If the toe becomes infected, soaking it frequently in warm, soapy water is recommended. Serious infections often require antibiotics. In chronic or severe cases, surgery is done to remove part or all of the nail.

Ingrown toenails very often occur from improper trimming, but poor foot structure, heredity, injury and infection can be contributing factors. Whatever is causing your feet to hurt, we hope you'll turn to the best, most dedicated, professional foot care available. At our office at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, we offer foot care for the family, in an atmosphere of calm compassionate concern. Please call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. To prevent ingrown toenails, cut nails straight across without tapering the corners.

Morrissey Announces HMO Open Enrollment Assistance For Seniors

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announced Sept. 29 that legislation he co-sponsored to prod Massachusetts HMOs to hold open enrollments prompted talks with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts and the eventual adoption of a voluntary open enrollment on the part of Blue Cross.

Morrissey said that that Senate Bill 1994, requiring open enrollments for Medicare HMO's, helped broker a solution to ease this health care crisis.

According to Morrissey, seniors throughout the state enrolled in Medicare HMOs have been asking for months what could be done about their shrinking health care coverage. Many hospitals in Massachusetts have terminated their relationships with the state's largest Medicare HMOs. Seniors who are members of those Medicare plans face not only the inconvenience of having to find a new doctor, but the serious problem of potentially being without access to health care providers for a number of months.

The bill would allow the division of insurance to order special "open enrollment periods" during certain times when seniors are being cut off from their health care providers.

Sen. Morrissey emphasized that, "The special open enrollment period would help seniors enroll sooner into a new health care plan offering access to the health care provider the senior is losing access to."

Sen. Richard T. Moore (D-Uxbridge), the chief sponsor of the bill, thanked Sen. Morrissey for his support. "By co-sponsoring this legislation Senator Morrissey helped create an environment where we could begin discussing the crisis that seniors are facing and how best to respond. The seniors in Sen. Morrissey's district should be proud to have such an effective advocate."

Project Bread Awards 800 Books To Quincy Schools

Project Bread, Massachusetts' leading anti-hunger organization, has donated 800 books to Quincy elementary schools to use as part of Quincy's School Breakfast Program.

Project Bread's gift will be used to increase participation in school breakfast by developing creative educational programs during the breakfast period.

"Superintendent Eugene Creedon understands the important link between child nutrition and educational achievement," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread. "He has provided outstanding leadership with Quincy's School Breakfast Program. I hope this will support this critical program."

Quincy Public Schools' School Breakfast Program is available in all Quincy elementary schools. Because of the success of Quincy's program, Massachusetts Commissioner of Education David Driscoll has tapped Superintendent Creedon to help lead DOE's Superintendents' School Breakfast Program as a critically important tool to ensure that all students arrive in class well fed and ready to learn.

Project Bread is supporting Commissioner Driscoll's campaign because it recognizes that the School Breakfast Program is an important resource for the thousands of families who, for a variety of reasons, are unable to provide a nutritious breakfast at home. In some families, working parents do not have the time to prepare a full breakfast at home: only 11 percent of children eat a meal comparable in nutritional value to a school breakfast. In other families, children are not yet hungry when they leave home in the morning. Finally, a substantial number of families simply do not have enough money to afford a nutritious breakfast: one in five Massachusetts children under twelve is hungry or at risk of being hungry.

There is a substantial body of research that identifies the School Breakfast Program as an important educational tool. More than fifteen studies have shown that participation in the School Breakfast Program can raise standardized test scores, improve student attendance and make students more alert in class.

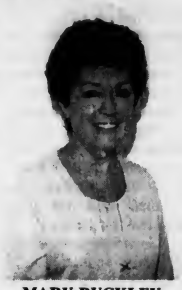
20th Century Christmas Memories Theme For This Year's Parade



The theme for this year's Quincy Christmas Parade, is Christmas Memories of the 20th Century.

A record number of marching and float entries are expected to participate in the parade which will proceed along a three mile route from downtown Quincy beginning at 12:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov 28.

Each year the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee conducts a contest along the South Shore to select an appropriate theme around which the marching units, floats, and specialty units focus.

This year's theme allows each entry wide latitude on which to focus and be judged in competition for prizes in various classifications.

This year's theme contest winner is Mrs. Mary Buckley of Weymouth. She and her family will ride as honored guests in the parade and she will also receive an appreciation gift from the Festival Committee. She and her husband, retired Quincy Police Sgt. Richard Buckley, have 15 grandchildren.

MARY BUCKLEY

More than 90 units will participate in the parade which is the climax to a three-day festival of holiday events. On Friday evening the turning on of the Christmas lights in front of Quincy City Hall will take place and on Saturday at noon Santa and his assistants will make their visit to Quincy by parachuting over Faxon Field nearby Quincy Police headquarters.

McCauley Opposes Phase Two Of Quincy Center Concourse

City Councillor Francis McCauley says he is opposed to the second phase of the proposed downtown Concourse.

McCauley said Tuesday:

"While Phase One, which will bridge the MBTA tracks and provide access and egress to the Ross Parking area makes a lot of sense, Phase Two which would continue the road across Hancock St. to Mechanic St. and Revere Rd. does not."

McCauley noted that the roadway would become one-way from Mechanic St. to Hancock St. and said that is a major reason for his opposition. Traffic proceeding westbound would be forced to detour onto Hancock St. to either Elm St. or Revere Rd. he said.

McCauley also said Mechanic St. would become a two-tiered road and that the building at Revere Rd. and Mechanic St. housing Quincy Legion Post, the city's first chartered American Legion post, would be demolished along with several other buildings in the area. He called Legion Post an historic building.

McCauley also pointed out that the Phase Two plan included the taking of approximately 84 spaces in the Hancock Parking area.

"The John Hancock lot is already filled to capacity almost every day and we can't afford to lose these spaces," McCauley said.

McCauley, who is seeking re-election as a city councillor at-large, said he was making his position known in response to many inquiries about the project from Quincy residents.

"While the cost of Phase Two will be paid from state funds, the city council must first approve the taking of land and buildings," he said.

HAVING TROUBLE SLEEPING?

It is estimated that 12% to 25% of healthy adults over age 65 suffer from chronic insomnia, defined as difficulty falling or staying asleep most nights for at least a month. According to researchers at Laval University in Quebec and the Medical College in Virginia, these insomniacs may be better off adopting simple lifestyle changes than taking sleeping pills. Researchers found that study subjects who were taught such lifestyle changes as only going to bed when tired and avoiding watching television, reading or eating in bed slept better then they previously had. Moreover, they maintained the improvement longer than people who took sleeping pills. The study shows that older adults can learn to sleep better by making certain lifestyle changes.

If you are having trouble sleeping, sometimes there are solutions other than medication such as finding new ways to relax before going to bed. Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers sea breezes, boardwalks and lovely sunsets, all with the security of knowing you have help nearby if you require it. Questions? Call 617-770-3264. We're at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. Older adults also learned to conquer insomnia by avoiding long naps, by getting up at the same time every morning by exercising regularly and cutting back on caffeine and alcohol.

Swanson Opposes New QHS Site As A 'Toxic Dump'

Rev.. John Swanson, candidate for School Committee, takes issue with the site the city has selected for a new Quincy High School.

Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, speaking at a recent tea in Wollaston, cited past history of the proposed building site as a taxi waste dump for Bethlehem Steel and later General Dynamics.

Swanson said he is strongly opposed to the site.

"No matter how well the area is cleaned up," he said, "the fact remains that we would be building a new high school on a superfund toxic waste dump."

Finn Receives Labor Endorsements

Joe Finn, 15 Williams St., a candidate for councillor-at-large, recently received a number of endorsements from organized labor.

The endorsements include:

The Norfolk County Central Labor Council of the AFL-CIO, the Building and Construction Trades of Quincy and the South Shore, the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades District Council No. 35, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Boston Lodge No. 264, the Sheet Metal Workers #17, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 103, and Iron Workers Local Union #7.

"I am proud to be endorsed by organized labor," Finn said. "Quincy is a town of working families and organized labor is a voice for all people struggling to make ends meet. My commitment to labor goes beyond this election.

"When you consider that manufacturing job losses in the U.S. now total almost half a million since March of 1998 and that the average American worker is earning only 25 cents more per hour than he or she was earning 10 years ago, then you realize how important these issues are."

Finn said the cost of housing in Massachusetts is also an issue of local concern. He cited a MASS Inc. study from last year that indicated the cost of housing is driving people to seek careers and housing outside of Massachusetts. Wages have not kept pace with the escalated cost of housing.

"Labor has become identified with those issues that impact all working families," Finn said. "As I door knock throughout the city I've noticed many elderly and working families that feel they are on the brink. There has to be more to a good economy than rising stock prices."

Finn is proposing the creation of a plan for sustainable development. Sustainable development is a strategy by which communities seek economic development approaches that also benefit the local environment and quality of life.

"I am committed to doing everything necessary to preserve and expand those things that make Quincy a wonderful place for working people to live and raise a family," he said.

Conway Brokers Sales For Quincy, Marshfield CVS Sites

Conway Commercial Group represented the buyer of two sites in Quincy and Marshfield that will be developed into CVS stores.

The Quincy parcel, 5.02 acres at 636 Southern Artery, includes the historic Souther Tide Mill, which will be donated to the City of Quincy for restoration. Local historic groups have long sought to preserve the structure, which is one of the oldest mills of its kind in the country.

Conway procured the buyer, Coffman Realty of Brockton, in the $3.5 million transaction, while Historic Bostonian Properties represented the seller, Quincy Lumber Co. Construction of the CVS store is under way on the site, which is near the intersection of Pond Street.

Woonsocket, R.I.-based CVS also has plans for a new location on Route 139 in Marshfield, at the site of the former Feinberg's department store. Conway represented the buyer, Coffman Realty, in purchasing 2.06 acres at 1884 Ocean St. from B.M. Feiberg, Inc. for $1.1 million. Conway also brokered Coffman's purchase of three adjoining parcels from Reading Realty Trust to complete the CVS development site. Those properties, totaling more than 30 acres at 1874 Ocean St., sold for $625,000.

Mass Bay Associates represented Feinberg and Bay State Properties represented Reading in the Marshfield transactions.

'Raise The Roof' Day Highlights Need For Affordable Housing

Mayor Sheets and the Quincy community came together Saturday, Oct. 16 to "Raise the Roof" in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The event's goal was to raise awareness of the need for affordable housing not only nationwide, but in people's own back yard.

The event took place at Granite Village on Bower Rd. in Quincy. It began with the planting of bulbs and shrubs around recently built SSHH homes in the neighborhood. Following the planting there were remarks by a wide range of speakers.

Mayor James A. Sheets, City Councillors Tim Cahill and Paul Harold, Planning Director Richard Meade, HUD Secretary Cuomo's Regional Representative Mary Lou Crane, HUD Community Builder Juan Evereteze, Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services and South Shore Habitat board members, Habitat families and other volunteers all attended the event.

Common themes of the speakers were that people are becoming aware of the lack of affordable housing on the South Shore and that something has to be done about it. Mayor Sheets said, "It is critically important to make the community aware of the various strategies and programs the city and HUD are undertaking to address affordable housing needs."

Councillor Cahill urged the families of Granite Village to "become part of the community. Register to vote; get your children involved in the local activities. We want to be there for you."

NATIONAL RAISE THE Roof Day was observed recently at Granite Village, 110 Bower Rd., near the Quincy-Braintree line. Volunteers from the City of Quincy, HUD, Neighborhood Housing Services (QNHS) and South Shore Habitat for Humanity planted shrubs and bulbs around three units of Granite Village. Among those participating were, from left: Normand Grenier, executive director of QNHS; Mayor James Sheets, Mary Lou Crane, HUD regional representative; Quincy Planning Director Richie Meade; Julie McKinney, president of South Shore Habitat for Humanity and daughter Amy; Juan Evereteze, HUD community builder; Angelito Santos, Quincy's community development director; Nancy Callanan, city housing planner with her two granddaughters, Ella (1 1/2) and Devin Lanagan (3 1/2).

Curbing Clutter: Backyard Shed Helps Keep Tools In Order

When getting to your lawn mower becomes a bigger job than the work you plan to do, you probably need to build a storage shed.

No matter if you bolt together a kit or build something from scratch, constructing a shed can be a fairly simple and inexpensive project and will give you a place to store tools, equipment and children's toys.

While putting a garden shed together is easy enough, choosing the right one may take some homework.

Kit Or Construct?

Unless you're a skilled carpenter, exhaust all your kit options before building, recommends Tony Orozco, with The Home Depot. With a variety of basic styles on the market, you will probably be able to find one that meets your needs. Kits are cheaper than doing original construction, and they always come with instructions.

Depending on the materials you choose -- wood, metal or plastic -- the only tools you will need are a hammer and a couple of screwdrivers. All the building materials and fasteners are supplied in kits. Assembly might take longer than an afternoon, but easily be finished in a weekend.

If you have special storage needs you're probably better off building your own shed. Draw out a detailed plan to make the project go quicker, especially when it comes to building roof trusses.

Use pressure-treated lumber for the flooring, two-by-four studs and either T1-11 plywood, fiberboard or cedar siding on the walls. If you use fiberboard, make sure you seal, caulk and paint it immediately to prevent weather damage. Even with plywood or cedar siding, which are slightly more weather resistant than unpainted fiberboard, you should caulk and paint quickly.

You won't need to wire the shed for electricity or install a window unless you plan to use it for a workroom or mini-greenhouse.

Size Wise

Standard shed sizes range from 6'x8' to 10'x16', said Orozco. Unless your yard is very small, go with at least an 8'x8' shed because it will hold a lawnmower, wheelbarrow and decent assortment of household and garden tools, said Orozco. To make sure you buy the right size, measure a few of your largest tools before visiting stores, and then shop for shed kits where you can look at full-size displays. Small metal sheds will last eight to ten years before the bolts give way and the galvanized interior begins to rust. If taken care of, wooden sheds should last as long as the house. The least expensive option, plastic, will last five years.

A Firm Foundation

All sheds, whether prefab or homemade, require a foundation. For a small shed, you may be looking at a pair of wooden skids or precast concrete piers. For a unit that is larger than 100 square feet, you will need to pour a concrete slab. At that point, you may want to consider an oversize pad for storing such things as firewood.

Building a shed is like erecting a small house. A base structure of beams and joists supports a subfloor of plywood panels. Walls are framed and raised like house walls, with space left for doors and windows added later. The roof goes on last.

Racks and stacks

Good organization within a shed, no matter the size, allows you to maximize space. A wall of pegboards can hold hand tools, shovels, rakes and ladders. Shelving units are also effective -- especially for jars of screws, boxes of nails, oil cans and other materials that can't be hung.

Before beginning, check local building codes. These codes may require the type, size and depth of foundation you will need, the dimensions and the spacing beams, joists and rafters and the size shed you can build and where you can build it.

Small Office Finds Cozy Home In Closet Or Kitchen Corner

Q: My office is now my home, or is it the other way? Since I don't have a lot of room and deep pockets to devote to a home office, what's your recommendation?

A: You may want to consider removing the doors from the guestroom closet and turning it into a compact home office, using closet organizers and a makeshift desk. If this isn't possible, consider incorporating a portion of your kitchen into a workstation. Take specific measurements of everything you want to store in the desk space to your local home center. You'll need to measure the length and width of your computer monitor, keyboard and any peripherals because you may be able to retrofit kitchen cabinets into the space. James Jones, with The Home Depot, recommends a minimum width of 24 inches for a simple phone desk, although 30 or 36 inches is even better. Make sure that there are at least three feet of passing space behind the chair. Even with limited room, there still are a lot of options for extras like under-counter lighting, hutch tops, pencil drawers, corkboard backsplashes and file cabinets which can be incorporated into your new home office, he says.

eral Contractors, said that construction should be completed by mid-January.

The mayor, city officials, and representatives from CVS used silver shovels at the ceremonial groundbreaking. Mayor Sheets, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi, Council President Peter Kolson, and state Sen. Michael Morrissey made remarks

Morrissey emphasized the additional tax revenue of the project as well as increased public access to the area and the Souther Tide Mill itself. He promised to work with the various groups, including the Friends of the Souther Tide Mill, to make the mill "a jewel of the city."

While thanking the mayor and the council for their work, he said that he also wanted to "light a fire" under them to name a non-profit agency to begin mill restoration work because grants given for the mill are due to expire soon.

Mayor Sheets praised the efforts and cooperation of all those involved in preserving the historic site and developing the Southern Artery. Raymondi, whose district the new building was in, said how happy he was to see an area underutilized for so long become an attractive destination for residents of Quincy Point. Kolson welcomed the new CVS into the community but joked that, since CVS' old location was in his district, the news was like a "bouquet with a brick in it."

An actual bouquet of flowers, and special thanks, were given to Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to the mayor, for her work on the project.

"This project would not have happened without her," Schiavone said.

$2.4M Bond Proposed For School Renovations

tunity," Sheets explained. "Now, next year we can have a bond for Sterling Middle School. It will be a two year period before we're ready to begin construction of the new high school."

At Tuesday's meeting Councillors D'Amico and Raymondi expressed concern that Sterling Middle School was not part of the proposed bond issue. At their urging, Council President Peter Kolson made a formal request for John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, to update the council on the projects and clarify the mayor's revised timetable.

Councillor Tim Cahill, among others, postponed the discussion date from Nov. 8 to Dec. 7 so that the School Building Needs Task Force, which had stopped meeting during the hospital crisis, could have a chance to meet again.

It would be unwise, Cahill argued, to not have their input since the new high school project affects all other projects.

According to David Colton, DPW Commissioner, the timetable now calls for a roughly $50 million new Quincy High School to be ready by September of 2003. The school will be located off Quincy Avenue adjacent to Faxon Park. Although the design of the school is still in progress, Colton said it will be "state of the art" in terms of handicapped accessibility, elevators, gymnasiums, and its new auditorium. Colton also said that the vocational school will be included in the design of the building. "It's everything you'd expect in a high school brought up to today's standards," said Colton.

Colton emphasized that the current Central Middle School is over 100 years old and that moving it to what is now Quincy High School, built in the 1920's, was a driving factor in building a new high school. He also said that the new high school was only the finishing touch on what will be major renovations to all elementary and middle schools. He pointed to the recently opened Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, and the Clifford Marshall Elementary School as examples.

"We're gradually adding capacity," Colton said. "This is a comprehensive package that addresses all our needs over a ten year period."

Curbing Clutter: Backyard Shed Helps Keep Tools In Order

When getting to your lawn mower becomes a bigger job than the work you plan to do, you probably need to build a storage shed.

No matter if you bolt together a kit or build something from scratch, constructing a shed can be a fairly simple and inexpensive project and will give you a place to store tools, equipment and children's toys.

While putting a garden shed together is easy enough, choosing the right one may take some homework.

Kit Or Construct?

Unless you're a skilled carpenter, exhaust all your kit options before building, recommends Tony Orozco, with The Home Depot. With a variety of basic styles on the market, you will probably be able to find one that meets your needs. Kits are cheaper than doing original construction, and they always come with instructions.

Depending on the materials you choose -- wood, metal or plastic -- the only tools you will need are a hammer and a couple of screwdrivers. All the building materials and fasteners are supplied in kits. Assembly might take longer than an afternoon, but easily be finished in a weekend.

If you have special storage needs you're probably better off building your own shed. Draw out a detailed plan to make the project go quicker, especially when it comes to building roof trusses.

Use pressure-treated lumber for the flooring, two-by-four studs and either T1-11 plywood, fiberboard or cedar siding on the walls. If you use fiberboard, make sure you seal, caulk and paint it immediately to prevent weather damage. Even with plywood or cedar siding, which are slightly more weather resistant than unpainted fiberboard, you should caulk and paint quickly.

You won't need to wire the shed for electricity or install a window unless you plan to use it for a workroom or mini-greenhouse.

Size Wise

Standard shed sizes range from 6'x8' to 10'x16', said Orozco. Unless your yard is very small, go with at least an 8'x8' shed because it will hold a lawnmower, wheelbarrow and decent assortment of household and garden tools, said Orozco. To make sure you buy the right size, measure a few of your largest tools before visiting stores, and then shop for shed kits where you can look at full-size displays. Small metal sheds will last eight to ten years before the bolts give way and the galvanized interior begins to rust. If taken care of, wooden sheds should last as long as the house. The least expensive option, plastic, will last five years.

A Firm Foundation

All sheds, whether prefab or homemade, require a foundation. For a small shed, you may be looking at a pair of wooden skids or precast concrete piers. For a unit that is larger than 100 square feet, you will need to pour a concrete slab. At that point, you may want to consider an oversize pad for storing such things as firewood.

Building a shed is like erecting a small house. A base structure of beams and joists supports a subfloor of plywood panels. Walls are framed and raised like house walls, with space left for doors and windows added later. The roof goes on last.

Racks and stacks

Good organization within a shed, no matter the size, allows you to maximize space. A wall of pegboards can hold hand tools, shovels, rakes and ladders. Shelving units are also effective -- especially for jars of screws, boxes of nails, oil cans and other materials that can't be hung.

Before beginning, check local building codes. These codes may require the type, size and depth of foundation you will need, the dimensions and the spacing beams, joists and rafters and the size shed you can build and where you can build it.

Small Office Finds Cozy Home In Closet Or Kitchen Corner

Q: My office is now my home, or is it the other way? Since I don't have a lot of room and deep pockets to devote to a home office, what's your recommendation?

A: You may want to consider removing the doors from the guestroom closet and turning it into a compact home office, using closet organizers and a makeshift desk. If this isn't possible, consider incorporating a portion of your kitchen into a workstation. Take specific measurements of everything you want to store in the desk space to your local home center. You'll need to measure the length and width of your computer monitor, keyboard and any peripherals because you may be able to retrofit kitchen cabinets into the space. James Jones, with The Home Depot, recommends a minimum width of 24 inches for a simple phone desk, although 30 or 36 inches is even better. Make sure that there are at least three feet of passing space behind the chair. Even with limited room, there still are a lot of options for extras like under-counter lighting, hutch tops, pencil drawers, corkboard backsplashes and file cabinets which can be incorporated into your new home office, he says.

Durkin Candidate For Re-Election In Ward 5

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin officially announced his candidacy for re-election at a recent campaign fundraiser.

STEPHEN DURKIN

"As someone who was born and raised in Ward 5," Durkin, 43, said, "I have been proud to serve as councillor for all the neighborhoods of Ward 5." He called holding public office "an honor and privilege" and said it would be "an honor and privilege to serve Ward 5 voters for another two-year term."

Durkin, a lifelong Quincy resident, has served as Ward 5 councillors since 1996. Prior to that he served 12 years on the Quincy School Committee.

In summarizing his accomplishments on behalf of Ward 5 residents, Durkin pointed to his efforts to control traffic and speeding throughout Ward 5 residential neighborhoods. He cited his proposal last year to create senior citizen "safety zones" to allow cities and towns to reduce speed limits near senior citizen complexes.

Durkin said public safety remains his top priority and noted his efforts in fighting for the most effective Enhanced 911 system for Quincy, which he termed the "best 911 system in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Durkin said one of the primary roles of a ward councillor is to protect neighborhoods from overdevelopment or bad development. He cited his leading role in preventing the High-point development project, the largest residential development in the city's history, from going forward. Durkin, along with other councillors, was sued by the developer for his opposition to the project.

Regarding education, Durkin pointed to his service on the School Building Needs Committee, which committed to a comprehensive and long-range capital improvement plan, including a new Quincy High School. He has also supported funding to Central Middle School, Bernazzani, and Beechwood Knoll Elementary Schools, and to North Quincy and Quincy High School for various school needs over the last four years.

Durkin noted he created a Ward 5 Councillor's scholarship for two graduating high school seniors each year. To date, he has award seven scholarships for $250 each to Ward 5 residents.

Durkin also said he was instrumental in installing state of the art tot lots for Beechwood Knoll and Bernazzani Schools, and for the Bethany Teen Mothers' program.

Noting the attractive appearance of the Wollaston Business District, Durkin cited his allocation of funding for the wrought iron benches and trash receptacles. He noted his persistence in persuading the Wollaston Theatre owner to accept Quincy 2000 funding to renovate the theatre's marquee.

For the past two and a half years, Durkin has served as chairman of the Wollaston Beach Task Force, whose goal it is to improve water quality at the beach. The task force issued its recommendations this past spring. Durkin praised the efforts of task force members.

A Quincy attorney, Durkin lives with his wife, Maureen, a pediatric nurse and figure skating instructor, and their two daughters, Mollie, age 12, and Bridget, age 5.

Eastern Nazarene Dedicates Cecil R. Paul Center

Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) Tuesday dedicated the Dr. Cecil R. Paul Center for Business at the Adams Executive Building, 180 Old Colony Ave. in Quincy.

Rev. Dr. CECIL R. PAUL

The Center is named for a former president of the college, Dr. Cecil Paul whose long-term association with the school and South Shore community was ended by his untimely death in 1992. Dr. Paul was also the founder of the Beechwood Community Life Center.

The Paul Center for Business includes offices and conference areas for the college's popular Leadership Education for Adults (LEAD) program, offices for the Business faculty, fully equipped classrooms, a video-conferencing classroom, a computer lab, and faculty preparation area.

The site in which the Center resides is part of a larger reclamation effort by the college of three acres of land along Old Colony Avenue which includes two historic buildings of the original Howard Johnson facility: the former Executive Offices and the Candy Factory. The people of Quincy remember fondly the days when the Howard Johnson operation thrived in its neighborhoods. ENC hopes, as a part of its new business and education center, to preserve this heritage for the people of Quincy.

When fully completed and occupied, the site will contain 80,000 square feet of space, including 35,000 square feet available for lease to South Shore businesses.

At the dedication, the college's trustees, faculty, staff and administration representatives received greetings from Mayor James Sheets, a 1958 graduate of ENC, and from Mrs. Judy Paul, wife of Dr. Cecil Paul, and their three sons, Bruce, Wesley, and Jonathan.

Two other dedication events are being planned. On Nov. 11, LEAD alumni/ae will be invited to a 5:30 p.m. Networking Reception at the site, and on Nov. 17 the Quincy Business Community will be hosted at an 11:30 a.m. luncheon.

For more information, call Krista Casler at the ENC Events Office, (617) 745-3714.

BACTERIOPHAGES: WHAT ARE THEY?

Antibiotic resistance has been a "hot" topic recently in the medical world. Many health professionals are voicing their concern about serious infections caused by bacterial organisms that are just not responding to previously effective antibiotics. There are numerous reasons why this may be happening, probably in itself a good topic for a future article. It is frightening especially when doctors can only watch helplessly as some patients get worse and worse and eventually succumb to infection that only a few years ago were easily curable.

Bacteriophages were discovered in the early 1900's. They are essentially viruses that can penetrate and destroy specific bacteria, like E. Coli which can cause food poisoning among other infections. These viruses can be taken by mouth, destroy the target bacteria and then cleared by the body without causing harm to the patient. Research has been done and tested for many years in the republic of Georgia (part of the former soviet union). Viruses can be designed" to treat wound, ear and blood infections for example. This promising but yet not proven treatment could be an answer to antibiotic resistance in the future. The coming years should answer questions about the future role of these bacterial killers, like helping to eliminate serious skin and bone infections podiatrists sometimes deal with.

Practice Sun Safety Techniques Year Round

(NAPS)—Skin cancer has reached epidemic proportions in America, with over one million new cases detected each year. It's especially important for seniors, as role models to children and grandchildren, to practice good sun safety techniques year-round.

"Skin care has never been more important. Rates of skin cancer, and its most serious form—melanoma—are soaring," said Dr. Arthur Balin, of the Balin Medical Center for Dermatology in Philadelphia. "Everyone, especially seniors, should follow these simple tips: avoid midday sun, wear a wide-brimmed hat, seek shade and wear a full-spectrum sunscreen with an SPF of at least 29 every day."

"It's never too late for seniors to be concerned about skin care," said Stephanie Lederman, executive director of the American Federation for Aging Research (AFAR). "One in five Americans develops skin cancer in their lifetimes. With a little precaution, you can reduce your chances of becoming one of those statistics."

For free information on leading a healthier lifestyle, write to AFAR at: Radio City Station, P.O. Box 2000, New York, NY 10101 or call toll-free (888) 582-AFAR.

For seniors, practicing sun safety techniques is a smart way to protect against skin cancer.

Computerized Chemotherapy Program At Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology

To help ensure patient safety and optimize quality of care, Massachusetts-based Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology has become the first private practice in New England to use a computerized chemotherapy order system in a clinical setting.

Called IntelliDose™, the program is a critical tool in preventing errors in chemotherapy order writing such as those that resulted in two highly publicized deaths at Dana Farber Cancer Center in 1994 and 1997.

IntelliDose enables care providers to document drug dosages accurately and efficiently, according to Walt Kagan, M.D., Ph.D., president of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology. "IntelliDose uses an individualized dosage approach that assures the right treatment with the correct doses," Dr. Kagan said. "A back-up system checks the patient's weight, diagnosis, treatment plan, allergies, blood test results and prevents against giving the wrong dose or too high a dose.

"At Commonwealth Hematology, we continually look for ways to improve quality and assure that our standards of patient care are among the highest," Dr. Kagan said. "The tragedy of the chemotherapy overdoses in Boston spurred the entire medical community, including us, to look more carefully at eliminating dosage errors and optimizing patient safety. IntelliDose has enabled us to significantly enhance our standards of patient care."

As cancer survival rates continue to rise, more individuals than ever are receiving chemotherapy. Reimbursement trends have resulted in decreased lengths of stay for inpatients and a tendency toward treatment in ambulatory settings. An article published in the December, 1997 issue of Oncology Pharmacotherapy, confirmed that in 1996, approximately 75 percent of all chemotherapy dosages were administered in physician's office, in clinics and via home infusion--and not in the hospital.

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology began implementary IntelliDose last year in its Quincy, Weymouth and Dorchester offices, and had been developing the program with IntrinsiQ Data Corp. of Waltham, since 1996. IntrinsiQ Co-founder Brent DuBeshter, M.D., selected Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology as a clinical partner to create a program that was effective and easy to use -- key ingredients that were missing in the handful of existing chemotherapy administration programs.

"No one should die because of a math or decimal point error," Dr. Kagan said. "IntelliDose software catches errors before they happen and assures accuracy and patient safety."

While ease of use is one of IntelliDose's central features, the menu-driven software program uses highly sophisticated automatic safety-checking algorithms that support single-dose, multi-dose and cumulative-dose checking.

Despite considerable start-up expenses, which included the purchase of several computers, implementing the new software will not increase the cost of patient care, according to Dr. Kagan. "Care costs will ultimately decrease because of the system's ability to automatically record treatment information. This ensures better reimbursement data and saves time and money."

"Whether cancer patients are treated in community-based private practice or in a large academic research setting, the practice of medical oncology demands precision and accuracy at all levels," said Charles Rosenbaum, M.D., president of the Massachusetts Society of Clinical Oncologists (MSCO). "This new program offers a systematic approach that minimizes the risk of errors and reduces the cost of patient care."

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology, the largest private practice cancer care group in Massachusetts, handles more than 100,000 patient visits per year via 18 offices throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire. For more information, call its headquarters in Quincy at 617-479-3550.

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

Why do my hearing aids whistle?
This is probably the most frequently asked question about hearing aids.
The most common reason is that the aid is a bit loose in your ear, allowing the sound to leak out of your ear and re-enter into it's own microphone, hence the term "feedback".
Solution: If the aid is under warranty have it recased, if not have it coated with Ultra Violet plastics (preferred material) or something comparable in order to tighten the fit.
The other reasons for "feedback" are a malfunction in the aid itself or the ear may be impacted with wax. Remember this, your hearing aid should not whistle at your comfortable listening level unless you cover it, make exaggerated jaw motions or have a profound loss. Have a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist take care it, because when it whistles you are losing out on what you want to hear!

Preparing Automobiles For Winter Weather

As the first cold front of the season descends on the U.S., Pennzoil reminds vehicle owners to take a moment to make sure that their automobiles are prepared for unpredictable winter weather.

Cold temperatures, particularly those below freezing, significantly influence vehicle performance. October is National Car Care Month, the ideal time to make a few common-sense preparations to help protect your vehicle against harsh winter conditions and avoid an untimely breakdown.

"Engine fluids play a vital role in a car's ability to stand up to harsh winter weather, particularly engine oil and antifreeze," said Mike Maddox, national manager of technical service for Pennzoil.

What should be done to get your car or truck ready for winter? Pennzoil offers these basic tips and suggestions:

•Belts and hoses: Check all belts and hoses for signs or cracking or wearing. If necessary, have them replaces.

•Motor oil: Make sure you are using a multiviscosity motor oil. These oils, such as Pennzoil® with PureBase®, are identified with a "W" in the grade designation, which stands for winter. A multiviscosity motor oil contains a viscosity modifier that helps oil flow well, even at temperature extremes. Cold winters usually require a light-viscosity motor oil, but as a general rule, always consult your owner's manual and follow the manufacturer's recommendation according to the reading on your thermometer.

•Antifreeze: Antifreeze level, cleanliness and concentration are very important when cold weather rolls around. Visually inspect the coolant level, as well as its color to check for dirt or rust. Also have the antifreeze concentration checked; most manufacturers recommend a 50/50 mix of antifreeze and water, which provides protection to -34 degrees Fahrenheit. With the exception of some new vehicle systems, most vehicle owners should consider flushing and changing their coolant once a year.

•Battery: Batteries, even new ones, will lose power in cold weather. When temperatures drop below freezing, a battery could lose as much as 15 percent of its starting power. Below zero, starting power is further reduced. A strong battery can help avoid problems.

•Tires: To insure that your vehicle's tires are prepared for potentially hazardous driving conditions, visually inspect each tire to make sure it is properly inflated and that its treads are at least 1/4 of an inch deep. Additionally, it might be necessary to monitor tire pressure throughout the winter months, as cold temperatures tend to deflate tires. If your vehicle is not equipped with snow tires, Pennzoil also urges motorists to keep a set of tire snow chains in the trunk.

What to do if stranded

Even properly maintained vehicles break down on occasion or get stuck in a sudden storm. Pennzoil suggests that you pack a winter survival kit in your car for such emergencies. Include water, heavy blankets, snacks, jumper cables, flares, a first aid kit, a flashlight, a small shovel, an ice scraper, a small bag of sand or cat litter for traction and other items needed in case of a breakdown. If you own a cellular phone, be sure it is fully charged and take it with you in case of an emergency. Remember, do not leave you car unless you know exactly where you are and the distance to possible help.

Pennzoil® brand products are manufactured by Pennzoil-Quaker State Company, a leading automotive consumer products company. Pennzoil-Quaker State Company markets premium quality lubricants and some 1,300 other car care products, and is the parent company of Jiffy Lube International, the world's largest franchiser of fast oil change centers. Red Raiders Regroup, Aim For Second Win

By CHRIS POISSON

It was like Taunton's John Carr was running around tackle dummies. How else do you explain his four touchdowns and 193 yards in the first quarter?

The senior running back simply shredded apart North Quincy's frozen defense, finishing with 316 yards on 13 carries and five touchdowns in Taunton's 41-7 rout Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"He's a good back," said head coach Peter Chrisom. "Nothing against him. The kid's a good athlete. But we made him look real good. You have to make tackles. That's the only way you stay in this game. If you don't tackle people, well, you saw the result."

But his impressive ground performance may be overlooked by an incident after the game. Members of the coaching staffs exchanged heated words as North Quincy (1-4-1 overall, 1-2 OCL) accused Taunton (3-2, 2-1) of running up the score.

SENIOR MIKE KEDDY (80) has tight coverage on Taunton's Chris Clesluk (17) as the ball sails just out of his reach.

There was strong evidence to support that claim. Taunton attempted a fake field goal with a 34-7 lead, and didn't remove its starters, even with a 41-7 lead, until five minutes left in the game. And it would have had another touchdown in the final minute had it not been for a clipping penalty.

Obviously, North Quincy had reasons to be upset. Chrisom would not comment on the post-game events, only to say, "We have to stay together as a group. It's important for these kids to stick together. And they will."

North Quincy will try to pick up its second win of the season when it travels to Plymouth South (3-2, 1-2) Friday night.

As for the game, it was decided by the end of the first quarter. Carr had a 60-yard punt return with 7:15 left to put Taunton up 7-0. After North Quincy went three-and-out, Carr took his first hand-off off the game and raced 55 yards into the end zone.

North Quincy responded, though. Senior back Steve Minukas, who missed a tackle on Carr's TD run, returned the ensuing kickoff 33 yards to Taunton's 48. Three plays later, quarterback Max Repoff connected with wideout Jody Bravo for a 38-yard TD strike, pulling the team within seven.

But Taunton put the game out of reach 27 seconds later. On Carr's second carry, he ran a sweep to the outside and jetted 80 yards, untouched, for a touchdown.

"They took it to us outside," Chrisom said. "We tried to make some adjustments, but obviously they didn't work."

Again, North Quincy went three-and-out on its next possession. And yes, Carr followed by reeling off another long TD run. He scampered 55 yards along the right sideline to score with four seconds left in the quarter. The PAT failed and Taunton had a 27-7 lead.

The second quarter was just as ugly. North Quincy went three-and-out on its first series, Minukas fumbled on its second possession and it punted on its third series.

Taunton added a score in between North Quincy's offensive debacle. Quarterback Jim Brown tossed a short pass to halfback Derek Sanchez in the flat for what should have been a 4-yard gain. But Sanchez turned it into a 74-yard touchdown as he outran defenders down the sideline.

Sean Adams replaced Repoff in the second half but he couldn't jump start a stagnant offense. Neither team scored in the third. In the fourth, Carr, who was still in the game, tacked on his fifth touchdown with a 72-yard run.

"Some came ready to play," Chrisom said. "Others didn't. Simple as that."

Granite Post First Post-Season Victory

Showdown Saturday With NEFL Champs

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy Granite may be rookies to the New England Football League, but don't let them hear you say that.

In their inaugural season, the Granite blitzed their way through the NEFL, finishing the regular season with a 6-2 record to earn the No. 2 seed in the South Division of the playoffs.

And in its first postseason game, Quincy (7-2) stumped the Boston Bandits, 25-12, Sunday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium to advance to the next round.

Quincy will travel to Lynn Tech Stadium Saturday afternoon in a showdown with No. 1 Mass Havoc (8-1), who were the 1996 and 1997 NEFL champs.

"We're a first-year team," said captain David Harris. "People look at us a rookies, but many of us have played for years. So we know how to play ball. I wouldn't call us rookies."

Well, then, the first-year phenoms used an attacking defense and an aerial offense to knock off the Bandits for the second time in three weeks.

On Oct. 3, Quincy crushed the Bandits, 27-7, behind Liam Higgins' four touchdown passes. The Bandits were determined to get revenge. If they called that first game a fluke, what do they make of this.

"The Bandits were more into talking than playing the game," Harris said. "They gave me a headache with all their trash talking."

The Granite jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the first quarter when Higgins hit tight end Scott Spaulding for a 55-yard TD bomb. Wideout Bill MacDougall hauled in a 25-yard TD catch for a 12-0 halftime lead.

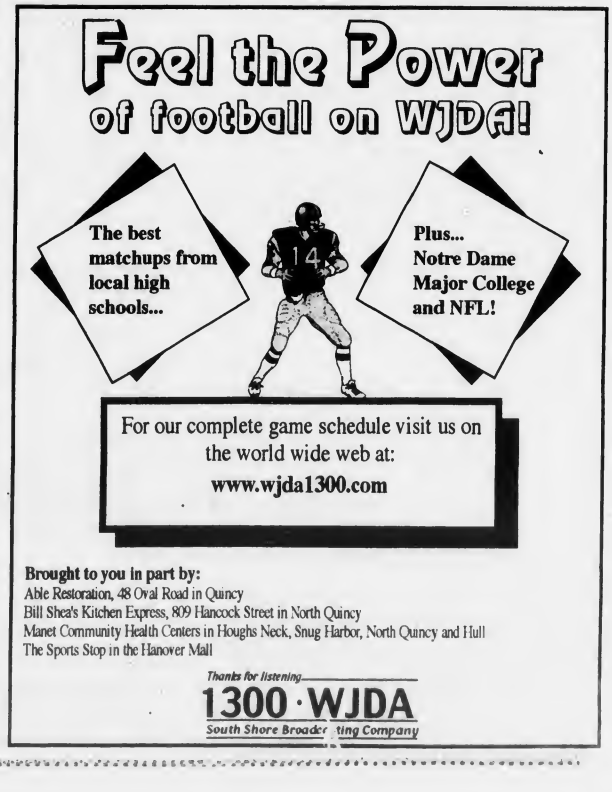
The Bandits cut the lead to 12-6 on a 30-yard interception return for a touchdown. But on the first play in the fourth, running back Dan Abraham broke four tackles as he rumbled his way for a 17-yard TD run and a 19-6 lead.

Higgins secured the win when he connected with wideout Derrick Epps for an 8-yard TD pass with 5:14 left in the game. Higgins has 11 TD passes this season, seven against the Bandits.

"Our offense has definitely improved a lot over the last couple of weeks," Harris said. "Liam has been the leader. He keeps his cool out there and that's important. He's definitely in a groove."

The Bandits returned the ensuing kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown to close out the scoring.

Quincy's defense, which has been solid all season, came up big once again led by defensive end Al Casey.



"Our defense shut them down," Harris said. "Al Casey and the rest of the linebackers were unbelievable. It was taking three or four guys to block Casey. He was tremendous. He was killing them. They couldn't stop him."

The Havoc, which finished one game ahead of the Granite in the South Division, blanked the Bay State Bulldogs, 45-0, in their playoff game on Saturday.

Earlier in the season, the Havoc beat the Granite, 27-18, at Lynn Tech Stadium. The Havoc blew out the Granite it that game as they had a 27-2 lead in the fourth before Quincy put together some scoring drives.

It was a 7-2 game in the third before the Havoc scored 20 points to put the game out of reach. The Granite struggled with its special teams, botching back-to-back punts which the Havoc took advantage of.

But that was back in August. Two months have passed and the NEFL newcomers have made a name for themselves. And it's not rookies.

Quincy Hosts Taunton Friday

Presidents Haunted Again By Penalties

By CHRIS POISSON

For the Quincy faithful, who were hoping their team could pull of the upset against Patriot League powerhouse Rockland Saturday night, the game looked too familiar.

The Bulldogs (4-1, 2-0) scored on its first four possessions as it walked into Veterans Memorial Stadium and strutted away with an easy 35-0 win against the Presidents (0-6, 0-2).

Penalties haunted Quincy once again as it committed six in the first quarter to kill its drives.

Like the North Quincy-Taunton match-up, this game was over after 11 minutes when Rockland built a 14-0 lead.

Quincy's schedule doesn't get any easier when it plays a tough Taunton squad Friday night at home at 7 p.m.

"The penalties in the first quarter really hurt us," said head coach Bob Noble. "Like I said before, how many great calls are there on third-and-20? Not many. They know what you're going to do."

Junior running back Bob Murphy reeled off a 57-yard TD run with 7:31 left in the first for Rockland's first score. Murphy, one of the best backs in the state, set up Rockland's second score with some nifty runs on its next possession.

Senior back Jon Baar scampered in from 16 yards out with 3:40 left and the two-point conversion by senior back Matt Robbs made it 14-0.

Murphy also made his presence felt on the defensive side with two interceptions. On Quincy's next series, he picked off quarterback Dan Kelly and returned the ball to the Bulldogs' 32.

Rockland capitalized as it marched 68 yards down the field to go up 21-0. Sophomore running back Adam Mahoney plunged in from the 3 for the score with 8:35 left in the half.

On Quincy's next possession, senior back Russell Mullens fumbled on the first play and Rockland once again took advantage. Junior quarterback Ken Keefe threw a 27-yard strike to senior captain Jason Jacobs for a 28-0 halftime lead.

Senior back Dave Cifelli added a two-yard TD run late in the third to close out the scoring.

Both coaches put their junior varsity players in the game during the fourth quarter.

Burke Sparks Storm To 6-6 Tie With Elks

FOOTBALL

The Squantum Storm football program has had a rebirth this year with a record number of participants. Each of their three teams are working hard and making steady improvements.

The varsity squad got off to a slow start but has been playing solid football as of late. Jimmy Burke broke several tackles in an electrifying 65-yard second-half kickoff return to spark the Storm to a 6-6 tie with the West Quincy Elks.

The Storm defense was outstanding as they shut down the Elks' offense and recovered numerous fumbles. Tom Peterson, Ryan Banter, Mike Rooney, Jonathan O'Driscoll, Steve Kelley, Mike Dolbeare, C.J. Stwaletta and Mike Faherty led the defensive effort.

The offense was led by Dave Jaehnig and tight end Zack Mantius who connected on a nice pass play. Offensive linemen Jon O'Connor, Bobby Olson, Brendan McNeil, Scott Flaherty, Kevin Barry and Rob Gardner played well and tailback Paul Graham ran hard.

Steve Ohlson was a one-man wrecking crew for the Elks, as he recorded four sacks and made many tackles.

In the first quarter he broke through the line untouched to pick off a pitchout, which he ran 40 yards for a defensive touchdown to give the Elks a 6-0 lead.

The Storm junior varsity defeated the Elks, 18-0, as Jeff Ruggiero broke away for two long TD runs.

Ricky Schiffone was a defensive star as he was all over the field. He was helped out by teammates Dennis Magaldi, Steve Spring, Dylon Thornton, Michael Lohnes and Tom Pasquantonio.

The offense was led by John and Tony Black, Ross Pasquantonio, Mike Barter, Mike Powers and Mike Nee.

The Freshman squad as been outstanding with 2-0-2 record. The Storm used some last-second magic to defeat the Elks, 18-12.

Kevin Bossart caught his second touchdown pass of the game on the final play to give the Storm the win.

Chris Rooney ran for over 100 yards, many of which came on hard-nosed, second effort running plays.

Matt Jaehnig threw two TD passes and played a solid game at quarterback. Dan McDougall scored a defensive touchdown as he returned an interception for a score. Jay Lewis and Rick Pengo also played well defensively.

The Jaehnig-Bossart connection clicked again as the Storm scored on the final play of the game to tie the previously unscored upon Panthers, 6-6.

Nick Brown, Nash Winters, Jon Glennon, Zack Deegan and Roger Cufaude were strong on the offensive line, and MacDougall ran well.

Mike Garland scored on a long TD run as the Storm tied a very strong Milton Mustang team, 6-6. Leading tackler David Guerrerro sparked a goal-line stand to preserve the tie.

Shaun Bonter, Rickey Bjork, Matt Martin and Andrew Block also played well.

Garland exploded for three TD runs including one on the games final play to lead Squantum to an 18-12 win over the Elks. Rob DeAngeles had a nice block to spring the run.

Apaches Down Panthers, 14-12

The match between the Apaches and the Panthers featured two division rivals battling for first place, both of which have quick strike offenses paired with solid defenses.

The Apaches, led by the throwing arm of quarterback Tim Watson and receivers Bill Cosgrove and Andy MacAllister, came out on top, 14-12, in recent Quincy Youth Football action.

Watson started the scoring in the first quarter. On fourth-and-one at the Panthers' 35, Watson ran a QB sneak through the middle of the defense and out raced Panther defenders to the end zone. The two-point conversion failed but the Apaches had the early 6-0 lead.

In the second quarter Watson would again come up big, as he intercepted a pass at the Panthers' 30 and ran in for another Apaches' touchdown. The Apaches used the swinging gate-formation to make a successful two-point conversion as Watson passed to Billy Cox for a 14-0 lead.

The Panthers came back as quarterback Justin Thorley connected with J.J. Naimkey for a 65-yard TD pass on the ensuing possession. The two-point conversion failed and the score was 14-6 at halftime.

In the fourth, the Apaches had to rely on their defense to hold off the Panthers and eventually save the victory. The Panthers scored in the fourth to cut the lead to 14-12. Apaches' defensive lineman Kyle Carmody stepped up and made a big defensive stop to hold off the game-tying, two-point conversion.

Later in the quarter, the Panther offense was again moving the ball well and beginning to push the Apaches' defense back. But MacAllister came up with a pick and then the offense ran the ball to run out the clock.

Playing well defensively for the Apaches were Watson, MacAllister, Carmody, Anthony Wall, Pat O'Donnell, Josh Hersey and Dan Cosgrove. On offense, center Tim Chiaccio, Cox, Carmody and Vicenzo Prisco gave strong performances.

Due to a rainout last week, the make-up games were played at the Stadium yesterday. The Apaches faced the Storm, followed by the Panthers against the Milton Mustangs and the Manets against the Elks.

NQ Girls, Boys Cross Country Bow To Barnstable

The North Quincy girls' cross country team's hopes of a title took a serious blow at the hands of Barnstable last Tuesday. The Capers got the better of the Red Raiders, winning 21-34 at Pageant Field.

Lynda Wilson was the top runner for North Quincy with a second-place finish. Both Wilson and Barnstable's Amy Lyon beat the course record of 20:18. Lyon clocked in at 19:27 and Wilson at 20:05.

Barnstable took the next three spots to secure the win, but North Quincy's Natalie Caron, Sarah Houghton and Linda Nguyen were right behind. Genevieve O'Brien and Christine Marre also ran season bests

North Quincy falls to 4-2 and Barnstable remains undefeated. It took on Falmouth Monday to decide the OCL dual meet title.

The boys showed some bright signs with Brian Breslin and Jeff Bartoloni taking 1-2 in their meet. But Barnstable grabbed the next five spots en route to a 25-34 win.

John Fidalgo, Frank Alibrandi and Steve Barkowski continue to improve.

At Saturday's Ocean State Festival, hosted by Brown University at Pawtucket's Slater Park, the boys placed 10th in the Varsity Large School division. Bartoloni finished second and Breslin 10th.

In the girls' championship race, Wilson placed 14th to lead the girls to a ninth-place finish. Wilson, Caron and Houghton all ran career bests.

The freshmen also ran well in the race. William Setow, Jason Fidalgo and Norman Yuen led the boys, while Lauren Ready, Amy Lee and Jennifer Wong paced the girls.

In jayvee girls, Meghan Haines finished 72nd out of 200, recording her fastest time over five kilometers with a 26:47.

North Quincy girls hosted Quincy and Fontbonne Tuesday and the boys took on Quincy and Foxboro.

Magic Number One For NQ Girls

SOCCER

Trying to make it three tournament appearances in a row, the North Quincy girls' soccer team needs only one more win to qualify after beating Falmouth, 2-1, last Wednesday.

The Red Raiders swept both games from Falmouth this year.

Using the wind in the first half, North Quincy scored when senior captain Kristin Coughlin fed senior captain Caitlyn O'Donnell 10 yards out. O'Donnell left-footed a shot past the Clipper keeper for her fifth goal of the season.

Sophomore goalie Kathryn MacRitchie was immense in goal, turning back 15 shots, several were spectacular saves.

Freshman stopper Erin McFarland scored the eventual game-winner when she one-timed a shot from the midfield center circle and over the startled Falmouth goalie's head.

Falmouth scored its only goal midway through the second half on a controversial penalty kick.

The Red Raiders' defense, playing their best game of the season, turned back every Falmouth counterattack. Stacy Szcesuil, Kelly Rice, Jen Conley and Kathlyn Gates stood out on the back line while Ashley Murphy, Casey Ridge and Maureen Holleran controlled play at field.

Last Friday, North Quincy lost to Bridgewater-Raynham by a forfeit when head coach Paul Bregoli received a red card with 15 seconds left in the first half. B-R was leading 1-0 when an incident in the penalty area led to the ejection.

Prior to that North Quincy played B-R even with Lauren Sleeth and O'Donnell pressuring offensively, and Gates, Allie Lacey and Rice leading the defense.

North Quincy played Barnstable Tuesday and plays at Plymouth South today (Thursday). It will take on rival Quincy Saturday at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium and then travel to Taunton on Tuesday to close out the regular season.

North Boys Bump First-Place B-R

The North Quincy boys' soccer team defeated first-place Bridgewater-Raynham, 2-1, last Friday for the second time this season to improve its record to 4-5-2.

B-R scored in the first half, knocking home a loose ball in a scramble in front of the net. Sophomore midfielder David Rochon scored the equalizer just before halftime when he blasted home a direct kick from about 22 yards out.

During the second half, senior captain Bill O'Toole scored his fourth goal of the season, skipping the ball past the B-R goalkeeper after receiving a nice through pass from senior striker Stephen Rochon.

North Quincy dominated the second half but missed two excellent scoring chances. Senior defender Rick Loughmiller did an outstanding job of covering Old Colony scoring leader Orestes Tillidrus, not allowing a single clean shot by the senior forward.

Junior goalkeeper Ryan Graeber played another strong game between the pipes, making several difficult saves on B-R scoring attempts.

"We've had a somewhat inconsistent season so far," said head coach Bob Dano. "We're playing the top teams very well, but struggling against some of the weaker teams. Hopefully, we'll finish the season strong like we did last year and get into the postseason."

North Quincy plays Plymouth South today (Thursday) and then faces home-town rival Quincy Saturday at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. It closed out the season with three non-league games next week.

Be Health Smart

What's Lurking In Your Locker?

(NAPS)—Sometimes we get sick of working out, but what about when our workout makes us sick? Since the gym is filled with surfaces that everyone shares, germs can easily spread in the gym through cross-contamination, the transfer of germs from one surface, food or person to another. The following tips from the Georgia-Pacific Health Smart Institute can help protect you and your family from illness while working out.

- Gym equipment can harbor bacteria from constant contact by hundreds of users. Use alcohol and paper towels, like Sparkle® or Coronet®, to wipe down gym equipment rather than previously used cloth towels that can re-contaminate hands or equipment.
- Wear flip-flops or "shower shoes" when using the gym shower facilities and walking around the locker room.
- After handling shared equipment, wash hands with soap and rinse under warm running water for at least 20 seconds. Dry your hands using clean paper towels.
- Use a gym bag that is machine washable. Wash it regularly. Do not leave sweaty clothes or damp towels in your gym bag, where the moist, warm environment can cause them to sour and mold.
- Do not share towels, as use of communal towels can result in the spread of numerous bacteria, viruses and fungi.

For more information on how to avoid germs in the gym and other Health Smart™ topics, please call 1-877-GPCLEAN.

STEERING IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Do you know how rack-and-pinion steering works? To begin with, the rack is a shaft with gear teeth that meshes with the pinion, a gear at the end of the steering wheel shaft. The rack is positioned horizontally between the front wheels and is connected by a tie rod at each side to a steering knuckle, the pivoting structure to which each front wheel is attached. Each end of the tie rod has a flex joint that allows it to flex and pivot when steering wheel motion is transferred from the rack to the knuckles. As the steering wheel turns to either side, the pinion rotates and moves the rack to that side, pivoting the wheels in the same direction.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Someone once said, "A ship in a harbor is safe but that is not what ships are built for." . . .No ship ever left its harbor, but what its mariners were taking a chance - a chance that their skills were more potent than the stormy waves.

For that matter, we would never have had a country if there had not been brave, adventurous souls who were willing to take a chance to see if there really was "a pot of gold at the rainbow's foot." In taking this chance . . . using their opportunities . . . they founded and helped make a nation . . . Charles F. Kettering put it this way - "There will always be a frontier where there is an open mind and a willing hand."

What do you want most out of life? Take a chance on going after it. "Set sail gallantly." And make the most out of your life and your talents and your opportunities. Your are at the helm of the ship of your life . . .and only by taking a chance - well-thought out in advance - can you make "port at the rainbow's foot."

"There is no security on this earth. There is only opportunity."
– General Douglas MacArthur

QMC's Doran Says Changes In Place, More To Follow

For Quincy Medical Center's CEO Jeff Doran, the future is now.

Doran says that the much touted clinical affiliation with Boston Medical Center "has already begun" and reflects a relationship between the two institutions that's been developing for years.

"We're building on existing relationships," says Doran. As examples, he points to QMC's Cardiac Catheterization Service, which BMC has been overseeing for roughly five years, and the Emergency Department Physician Residency Program, where for two years now BMC doctors have done their residencies at Quincy's emergency room. Doran also said that, in the days when Quincy Hospital had a maternity ward, BMC handled neonatology coverage.

Doran added that many QMC doctors were trained at Boston Medical Center.

Then what's new at Quincy Medical Center?

According to Doran, a lot.

Jack Ansell, MD, QMC's newly appointed Chief of Medicine and Vice Chairman of BMC's Department of Medicine, and Timothy Babineau, MD, the new Chief of Surgery at QMC and BMC's Chief of Gastrointestinal and Minimally Invasive Surgery, are already on site and have begun their work.

The two head the more than 25 BMC physicians who are taking on caseloads at Quincy Medical Center.

Chief of Surgery Babineau will not perform actual surgeries at QMC until a 30-day transition period is complete.

That, said Doran, is because much of the legal paperwork necessary for the doctors to perform all their duties was put on hold while the hospital struggled for survival.

"There's a process of credentialing, of administrative make-up work, that we normally have done but didn't do because of the crisis situation," said Doran. "We're doing that now."

Doran said that a Clinical Planning Committee was put in place six weeks ago to see where exactly Boston Medical Center could improve QMC. "The Clinical Planning Committee is the mechanism by which we will sit down together and, over the next several weeks, evaluate what are the clinical opportunities which present themselves," said Doran.

Doran pointed to three specific areas the committee might review. First, Doran sees a possible need for the expansion of QMC's trauma services. Second, Doran sees opportunities for QMC to perform neurosurgery. Lastly, Doran envisions increased in-house medical coverage, where more staff could treat patients at all hours of the day.

Although Doran emphasized that these goals were preliminary, his focus seemed evident. "This is where we're looking," he said.

Council Adopts Plan To Retain CARD Status For North Quincy

The City Council wants the North Quincy section of Hancock St. to keep its CARD status.

Tuesday night the council voted 8-0 to adopt a business plan for the area proposed by the Planning Department.

City adoption of the business plan, said Principal Planner Liz Harrington, meets an important federal criterion for CARD status.

A district's CARD (Commercialization Area Revitalization District) status allows it to receive a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

Harrington and Planner Gregory Maul spoke before the council, listing the improvements from past block grants and detailing the new business plan.

One change in the new plan, said Harrington, is that the northern border of the CARD district has been extended. Where the old boundary was Glover Ave., the proposed district would run to East and West Squantum streets.

Harrington explained that the area's current Card status began in 1995 and was renewed in 1997. The status is due to expire again this year.

According to Harrington, $1 million in CDBG money has been invested into the North Quincy business district. The burying of utility poles, landscape and streetscape improvements, new trees and benches, the widening of sidewalks, increased handicapped accessibility, and the new colonial style lampposts were all funded by CDBG grants.

Councillors Ayers and McDermott were especially enthusiastic about the revitalization of North Quincy and praised Harrington and the entire Planning Department for their work.

If approved, the new CARD status would go into effect Nov. 1 and last three years.

Your Horoscope

by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Beware of making judgments based on inconclusive evidence. You may be seeing what you want to see rather than listening to what someone is telling you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Now is not the time to cut corners, particularly since your boss may be watching you closely. Bulls with partners should make sure they are not neglecting their beloved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Isn't it time that you stopped hiding your light behind the proverbial bushel? Give your self-confidence a makeover and dare to get out there.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Look for the pattern behind a puzzling series of recent events. It may be that the universe is trying to tell you something really important.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Make sure that you're not substituting wanting for doing. Someone you care about deeply may be feeling alienated from you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's about time your hard work paid off! You deserve a vacation, even if it's just a day off. Treat yourself to one of your favorite luxuries.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Ask to hear the uncensored truth; just be sure that you're prepared to hear it. Don't neglect to help a friend who needs your assistance.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Look before you leap, and you may prevent yourself from making a huge mistake. It may be time to take off those rose-tinted glasses

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 22) A dichotomy is likely to arise between home and office. Now is not the time to push the buttons of authority figures.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Perhaps it's time to treat yourself to that luxury item you've been craving. Just don't blow your budget on it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be patient with someone who is having a hard time in overcoming his or her apprehensions. Rushing matters will only make things worse.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Don't waste your current happiness worrying about what the future might have in store. Relax and have a marvelous adventure.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Because you are a balanced, down-to-earth individual, others often look to you for advice and guidance. You approach every task with diligence and endless reserves of patience. The only time you are not apt to act a bit foolishly and impetuously is when it comes to romance.

Patriots Join United Way, Quincy Salvation Army In 'Hometown Huddle'

TOM O'DONNELL (right), board chairman of UWMB, presents Ted Johnson a plaque honoring him as the 1999 New England Patriots/United Way Player of the Year.

By CHRIS POISSON

Not all of the New England Patriots had the day off Tuesday afternoon.

Several players teamed up off the field with United Way and the Salvation Army of the South Shore in Quincy for the first ever "Hometown Huddle."

The event took place at the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., as part of its Adult Day Health Program, which has served the South Shore community for 20 years.

The program provides nursing care, social services and recreational activities for elders with healthcare needs, Alzheimer's disease, or related disorders, and for adults with disabilities.

"This is kind of a coming together today in the "Hometown Huddle" by the Patriots supporting the Salvation Army and United Way," said Hugo Wiberg III, director of the Adult Day Health Program. "This is a big highlight for the participants."

"It's terrific to see their support for this program, coming down here on their day off," said Tom O'Donnell, United Way of Mass Bay board chairman. "They, along with team owner Bob Kraft and wife, Myra, have been supporters of the United Way for many years. They've given us the time, attention and love."

Ted Johnson, Willie McGinest, Kevin Faulk and Steve Israel, along with wife, Lorae, swapped their uniforms and pads for aprons, as they served lunch and visited with 22 senior citizens and adults with disabilities.

"I've had a blast," Johnson said, who has been involved with United Way for two years. "There's a special kind of interaction between them. It's a lot of fun. They are just so genuine and they've seen it all. The thing that I notice is that it's the simple things that make them happy. And people my age can always learn from that."

"I'm excited and I think they are," McGinest said. "Hopefully by us coming here we've brightened up their day."

The participants anxiously awaited for their hometown heroes to show up, and were thrilled when they finally popped up after a late arrival. They dressed in their Patriots' attire, made signs and even had the Patriots-Chiefs game from Week 5 on in the background. Of course, they scrambled to get autographs and pictures with the players.

"I'm excited, but I'm actually a New York fan," said 73-year-old Charlie Kislowski of Quincy. "I like the Jets and Giants, and the Giants won [Monday] night. But I like them both. Drew Bledsoe is a good quarterback."

Michele Germain, 34, of Quincy heard Kislowski speak of New York and after the Red Sox-Yankee series, quickly jumped in to show her support for the home team.

"I'm a Pats fan. I like them a lot. I think they'll make the playoffs. Maybe even the Super Bowl."

Before the players dined and chatted with the participants, O'Donnell honored Johnson as the 1999 New England Patriots/United Way Player of the Year.

"What I tell players is there's an opportunity to thank people in your community," Johnson said. "A lot of guys don't think it's part of the job description but it is. People look up to you. If you can have any kind of impact, it's very rewarding."

"You have to give back to the community," McGinest said. "Some people are not as fortunate as we are. We always have to remember where we come from and how blessed and fortunate we really are. You're never above anyone and you always have to remember that and give back."

The "Hometown Huddle" continues a 26-year partnership between the United Way and the NFL, the longest running sports/charity partnership of its kind. O'Donnell said that in this region the partnership with the Patriots has helped United Way raise more than $850 million dollars over the past 25 years.

Three Firefighters Injured In Quincy Point Plant Fire

By CRAIG SALTERS

Three firefighters were injured Monday when a two-alarm fire broke out at Twin Rivers Technologies Inc., 760 Washington St.

An employee, Joseph Conti, died in an earlier fire at the plant in March.

Gorman confirmed that there have been three fires and several industrial accidents at the plant since that March tragedy. One of the fires caused an employee to be sent to Mass General with burns to the hand.

The firefighters --Deputy Chief Paul O'Connell, Steven Grazioso, and Louis Ruiz -- suffered from heat exhaustion battling Monday's fire. They were treated at Quincy Medical Center and released.

Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the fire took roughly one half hour to contain but that firefighters stayed on the scene for several hours. He estimated the damage at $10,000.

The fire, Gorman said, broke out in a pipe used to transport fatty acids. Twin Rivers Technologies, located in the former Proctor and Gamble plant, is one of country's largest producers of tallow and fatty acids.

"We're concerned and the company is concerned," Gorman said, adding that the QFD would meet with Twin Rivers in the next few days to address the problem. Gorman said that the company had been very cooperative in the past and would be sending more protection engineers to the plant.

"It's a new industry, and there are a lot of unknowns," Gorman said. "Proctor and Gamble had a lot of similar accidents, which were handled in-house because P&G had their own fire brigade. But today, due to the liability, companies want to call the fire department as soon as possible."

Twin Rivers Technologies took over the plant in the mid-90's after Proctor and Gamble left.

Postal Service Buys Maple St. Building To Raze For Parking

The U.S. Postal Service has purchased the building at 18-22 Maple St. in Quincy Center and plans to raze it for additional parking, confirms Robert Cannon, a Postal Service spokesperson.

The new lot's 22 parking spaces will be used for mail delivery and mail transport trucks to ease the space problem at Quincy's main post office located at 47 Washington St, said Cannon.

Although no timetable has been set, the Postal Service is currently seeking a contractor and Cannon said demolition work could begin by the first of the year.

Boston United Realty, 1212 Hancock St., sold the building to the Postal Service for $300,000. Key Realty of Quincy represented Boston United Realty in the sale. According to Cannon, papers were passed Oct. 5.

The building, once owned by the Patriot Ledger, is 11,617 square feet, according to records. The land area is listed at 5,659 feet.

"The primary purpose of the lot will be to garage the postal vehicles," said Cannon. "Any space left over will be used for employees parking."

Cannon, a former acting manager of the 47 Washington St. site, called the branch "one of the worst parking situations of any Boston area post office."

He made special note of the current traffic jam of mail delivery trucks and the 5-7 ton mail transport trucks. "It creates a problem with daily operations. It's a safety hazard," said Cannon.

The branch, re-named the Congressman James E. Burke building in the early 80's, was built in 1909. An addition to the building was constructed in 1932.

doesn't work, have soured residents to new developments that increase the amount of asphalt and therefore the amount of run-off.

When McKinnon explained that the catch basins were designed to handle a 100 year storm (7 inches in 24 hours) Raymondi joked, "100 year storms happen every two weeks in my neighborhood."

Council President Kolson was also wary of the statistics, and wondered if the catch basins might be manually controlled, or have an electronic time-release. When McKinnon said that he could not recommend such systems, Kolson asked him to reconsider his position, saying, "The question is the time-release mechanism."

Councillor D'Amico said that he would hold another public meeting on the issue and asked that Traffic Engineer Jack Gillen report at the next public hearing because, D'Amico said, traffic concerns were just as great as flooding concerns.

An unusual city council at-large race and ward and school committee contests will take the spotlight in next Tuesday's city election.

Mayor James A. Sheets, 64, already the longest serving Plan A mayor, will seek an historic sixth term running again without a major challenger.

For awhile this summer it appeared he might have one in Councillor Paul Harold who after thinking it over decided to wait two years.

Sheets instead drew as an opponent Robert Boussy, 44, of Farrington St., a school bus driver, who has run unsuccessfully for the Ward 3 council seat.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees 38-to-40 percent of the city's 50,792 registered voters going to the polls. The turnout two years ago was 33 percent.

Shea said that if Harold or someone of his political stature had challenged Sheets this year, the turnout would be around 70 percent.

"A good mayoral race is always the big attraction," he said. "But we don't have one."

The main event Tuesday will be a city council at-large shoot-out of sorts with three incumbents challenged by a veteran ward councillor and two other candidates, one a political newcomer who entered the race late but appears to be picking up yardage.

Timothy P. Cahill, 40, of Grenwold Rd., who is also county treasurer; Paul D. Harold, 51, of Furnace Brook Parkway, former state senator; and Francis X. McCauley, 69, of Manet Ave., a former mayor, seek re-election.

Sample Ballot, Voting Places Pages 24-25

In an unusual political move, Council President Peter V. Kolson, 53, of Palmer St., decided to leave the Ward 1 seat he has held for 10 years to run at-large. Normally, a ward councillor waits for an open at-large seat opportunity.

Two years ago Harold, Cahill and McCauley finished in that order with Harold topping the field for the second time in a row since returning to the council.

Joseph G. Finn, 43, of Williams St., former executive director of Father Bill's Place, a shelter for the homeless, is making his first run for elective office. Observers think he will have an impact on the outcome of the at-large race. And there are some who think he could be this year's election surprise.

Wollaston Beach Water Quality 'Clearly Improving'

The water quality at Wollaston Beach is "clearly improving," announces Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, who serves as chairman of the Mayor's Wollaston Beach Task Force.

The task force recently met to review fecal coliform testing results for the summer of 1999 and issued an overall water quality grade of "B". Following the 1998 bathing season, the task force issued an overall grade of "C."

"The results of testing in 1999 show a clear improvement in the cleanliness of the water at Wollaston Beach," Durkin said in issuing the report. Improvements were most dramatic at Sachem St. and Milton Rd., which went from an "F" to "B" and from "F" to "A-" grade, respectively, in just a two-year period.

Frank Anselmo: He Was One Of A Kind

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Frank Anselmo was asked to say a few words at the Quincy Veterans Day ceremonies in 1995.

The World War I and World War II veteran, then 97 years old, got up stood straight and steady and said in a firm voice:

"If there's a World War III, I'm ready to go again."

The crowd smiled and applauded.

But Anselmo, who died Saturday at age 101, one of the last of the World War I veterans, probably wasn't kidding. He'd have gone if they would let him.

A native of Sicily, he emigrated with his family to Argentina and Chile before coming to the United States to live with an aunt in Boston's South End. He was 14.

Obituary, Tributes Pages 42-43

The youngster fell in love with his adopted country. And as the years went by he wrapped himself in its flag and wore it proudly.

Few criticized this country in his presence without getting a crusty earful from him.

Anselmo became a noted marksman with a rifle, a skill he developed, he said, by shooting tin cans off a backyard fence in 1916 and perfected in time for World War I.

Although he was not a U.S. citizen, he enlisted in the Army in early 1918 and became a citizen. His 33rd Infantry unit was assigned to protect the essential Panama Canal locks.

He set a world marksmanship record in 1922 when he hit 999 bullseyes out of a possible 1,000 with a .22-caliber rifle.

The record reportedly still stands today.

And it might be why when at 42, when many that age were exempt from serving in World War II, he was drafted as a rifle coach.

His son, the late Rene, also served in that war flying combat missions in the Pacific.

After the war, Anselmo became a clerk at the Milton Post office in 1948 and rose to superintendent of the Quincy Post Office where he retired in 1968.

He was elected to the School Committee in 1961 at age 62 and served 29 years until 1991. There was nothing shy or timid about him. He was outspoken, said what he thought and if anyone -- including School Committee colleagues -- didn't agree of like what he said, he'd be happy to say it again.

He was a champion of education, both public

The youngster fell in love with his adopted country. And as the years went by he wrapped himself in its flag and wore it proudly.

Few criticized this country in his presence without getting a crusty earful from him.

Anselmo became a noted marksman with a rifle, a skill he developed, he said, by shooting tin cans off a backyard fence in 1916 and perfected in time for World War I.

Although he was not a U.S. citizen, he enlisted in the Army in early 1918 and became a citizen. His 33rd Infantry unit was assigned to protect the essential Panama Canal locks.

He set a world marksmanship record in 1922 when he hit 999 bullseyes out of a possible 1,000 with a .22-caliber rifle.

The record reportedly still stands today.

And it might be why when at 42, when many that age were exempt from serving in World War II, he was drafted as a rifle coach.

His son, the late Rene, also served in that war flying combat missions in the Pacific.

After the war, Anselmo became a clerk at the Milton Post office in 1948 and rose to superintendent of the Quincy Post Office where he retired in 1968.

He was elected to the School Committee in 1961 at age 62 and served 29 years until 1991. There was nothing shy or timid about him. He was outspoken, said what he thought and if anyone -- including School Committee colleagues -- didn't agree of like what he said, he'd be happy to say it again.

He was a champion of education, both public

Ayers Seeks Smooth Sailing For Tall Ships

Ward 6 Councillor and state Rep. Bruce Ayers is planning ahead when it comes to Boston Harbor's Festival of Sail in July of 2000.

With the Tall Ships event more than nine months away, Ayers wants debate concerning Long and Moon islands settled by the end of the year.

Ayers put forth a resolution at the Oct. 18 City Council Meeting asking Mayor Sheets to negotiate a Memorandum of Understanding concerning the event with his Boston counterpart, Mayor Thomas M. Menino, and report back to the council no later than Dec. 15.

The resolution passed unanimously.

The memorandum would "answer satisfactorily the issues of traffic, noise, access for Quincy residents, crowd control, public safety management and any other issues both may deem advisable concerning the Tall Ships 2000 event."

Calling the resolution "proactive," Ayers explained that he wanted to avoid the Boston/Quincy struggles over the islands that have plagued past Tall Ships events, most notably the incidents of 1992.

In 1992, Ayers said, tensions ran high. Boston, which controls the islands, denied island access to Squantum residents while reserving some of the best viewing sites for Boston VIPs. Quincy residents were forced to endure increased traffic without benefit of the viewing sites, which struck some as an insult.

According to Ayers, about three hundred Quincy residents, led by Ayers and Mayor James Sheets, threatened to storm at various times both the Moon Island and Long Island gates until, after a phone conversation between Sheets and then Boston mayor Ray Flynn, access was finally granted.

Sheets remembers the tensions but also remembered that everything turned out well in the end. He sees no repeat of the battles of 1992.

Sheets reported that he spoke with Mayor Menino two or three months ago about the islands and that Rhonda Merrill, Quincy's special events coordinator, has been addressing the issue.

"We expect to have everything fully worked out by spring," Sheets said.

Ayers summed up Quincy's concern, as well as its clout, on the issue when he said, "Whatever Boston does has to come through Squantum streets."

Sheets Confident On Shipyard Completion

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James A. Sheets hears the whispers of doubt concerning the much delayed Fore River Shipyard project, but he's having none of it.

"I'm not pessimistic, I'm optimistic, and I have been all along that we are going to build ships at the Fore River Shipyard," said Sheets during an interview Tuesday. "The yard is 80 percent complete, it's already the most modern yard in the world, and they will build ships again."

The shipyard has run into such problems as construction delays, contractor disputes, and the failure of its owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries, to nail down definite shipbuilding contracts. The problem was heightened recently by a pessimistic review by the Inspector General and an independent, undisclosed review by Stone & Webster Inc. which said, according to some, that MHI did not have enough money to complete construction.

But Mayor Sheets emphasized that major difficulties were to be expected with a project this size.

"This is an enormous undertaking to take a shipyard that hasn't operated in 10 or 12 years and modernize it," Sheets said. "If it were not for the issues of construction, we would be building ships right now. But MHA will determine how these issues get resolved.

Sheets pointed to that day's article in The Boston Globe which reported a new plan from MHI which, if approved by the federal government, would reopen the shipyard within five months.

MHI's new plan will be discussed this week, but Sheets isn't overly concerned.

"Every crane, including Goliath, is operational in that yard," said Sheets. "And the machinery is there, paid for, in crates, waiting to be installed."

According to Sheets, not finishing the remaining 20%, which includes some buildings, some enormous doors, and the installation of machinery, seems absurd.

Sheets also pointed out that the shipyard issue was quite different from the recent hospital crisis because: the city was not as involved; the city had no direct financial stake; and MHI, O. Ahlborg, etc. were private, not public, organizations.

"You can't compare the shipyard to the hospital," said Sheets. "No city taxpayer dollars go into the shipyard, only state and federal." Sheets explained that the city's major role, of obtaining funding through HUD, was now over. "HUD guarantees the loan to the commercial bank; the city has no loans there," he said.

The city will, said Sheets, give the shipyard a five-year tax break where it will not pay property taxes.

Finally, the mayor did not seem surprised that MHI and the other companies were playing it close to the vest in terms of public statements, given that litigation is involved.

"They are talking at their own risk," said Sheets. "They're not going to answer on private reports. They will behave like Raytheon, State Street, Twin Rivers. You can't operate a private business any other way."

The Big At-Large Question

The big question in next Tuesday's city election centers on the city council at-large race.

Who will be among the missing when the first council of the new millennium is seated in January, 2000?

Tim Cahill, Paul Harold, Peter Kolson, or Frank McCauley?

CAHILL

HAROLD

KOLSON

McCAULEY

In arithmetic you can't put four into three. And in an election you can't put four councillors into three at-large seats. No such political shoehorn.

So, at least one of the four will become a former after the votes are tabulated next Tuesday.

Cahill, Harold and McCauley are the incumbents seeking re-election. Ordinarily they would be on pretty safe ground.

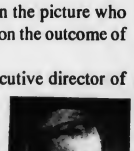
But then Kolson made his move -- an unusual one for a ward councillor -- deciding to leave his Ward 1 seat which he has held for 10 years, to challenge the three incumbents.

Ordinarily, ward councillors bide their time waiting for an at-large seat to open up.

For awhile this summer there seemed there might be one as Harold gave serious thought to challenging Mayor James Sheets.

Kolson was ready to announce for Harold's at-large seat as soon as Harold announced for mayor.

After some serious thought, Harold decided not to take on Sheets this year but indicated he will run for mayor in 2,001 regardless of what Sheets does.



Kolson says he decided he had waited long enough for an at-large seat to open and wasn't going to wait two more years. This is a good year to make the run, he feels, because of the exposure he has had as city council president. And, maybe after 10 years as a ward councillor it was time to move on anyway.

Two years ago Harold, Cahill and McCauley finished in that order. Based on that, McCauley would seem to be the most likely reachable one for Kolson.

But that was two years ago and this is two years later. A brand new ballgame.

But there is another candidate in the picture who observers think will have an impact on the outcome of the at-large race.

That's Joseph Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's Place, a political newcomer and later starter who has been doggedly campaigning all around town.

FINN

Observers say he is going to take votes away from somebody in the Big Four. Crucial votes which could decide who lands that third spot. And there are some who even think Finn could be the surprise of this year's election.

There is something else at stake besides the three at-large seats: the top spot.

Harold has won that in the last two elections since returning to the council after losing his bid for Congress. Cahill has won it before.

Both Harold and Cahill want to be mayor. McCauley has already been there and isn't interested in going back. Topping the at-large field this year would put Harold or Cahill in a strong position for a mayoral bid in 2001.

Three of the at-large candidates--Harold, McCauley and Kolson--are running out of Ward 1. Does that help Cahill who lives in Ward 5?

Cahill's headlined stand against the controversial proposed Highpoint development should do well for him in Ward 4 but how will it play in the rest of the city?

Lots of questions. The answers come next week.

THERE ARE THREE things you can be sure about in next week's election: two new city councillors and a new school committee member are certain to be elected.

In Ward 1 it will be either Gregory Hanley or Russell Patten, III contending for the seat Kolson is leaving to run at-large.

In Ward 6 it will be Joseph Newton or James Stamos, one of which will take the seat Bruce Ayers is leaving to concentrate on his state representative duties.

Sean Barry's decision not to seek re-election opened up a school committee seat which will be filled by either Robert Foley, an engineer; Atty. William Phelan or Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church.

WE RECENTLY mentioned four different races for the Ward 1 City Council seat when it was open and that the four candidates who finished second in the preliminary elections won the final.

The four final winners: Frank McCauley, Edward Graham, Leo Kelly and Mike Cheney. McCauley and Graham each over Leo Hannon, Kelly over Paul Harold and Cheney over Robert Johnston.

Well, there was at least one other from second to first winner.

In 1965 John Della Barba topped Clifford Marshall by 282 votes in the preliminary election for the Ward 2 seat that Joseph LaRaia gave up to run unsuccessfully for mayor against James McIntyre. Marshall came back in the final election to win by 152 votes.

MARSHALL

That election, incidentally, helped hasten the end to the long and colorful political career of Carl Anderson who had held both Ward 2 and councillor at-large seats.

Anderson lost his at-large seat to John Quinn in the 1963 election and was attempting a comeback for his old Ward 2 seat in 1965 but finished third in the preliminary. Two years later he lost another comeback--his last--as a councillor at-large candidate.

ANDERSON

Marshall, of course, went on to become state representative and then built a reputation as an outstanding sheriff of Norfolk County. The Marshall School is named in his memory.

MARYANN MAHONY, runner-up in the Ward 6 preliminary election, has decided to endorse Joseph Newton for that seat. She had a coffee hour scheduled for him Wednesday 7:15 to 9 p.m. at her home, 18 Hummock Rd., North Quincy.

WILLIAM RYAN, who was a candidate in the preliminary election, is supporting Greg Hanley for the Ward 1 city council seat in next Tuesday's final election.

Ryan finished fourth in the five-candidate preliminary field with a vote of 114.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN OLD view of the Squantum post office when it was in the variety store operated by Grace Polson who published this postcard in the 1920's. Located at 735 East Squantum St. the store was first opened in 1912 as Watt's Variety and the post office was there for almost 50 years. Note the trolley stop sign and silver band on the utility pole. Although not readily recognizable, this building still exists in the same location. The porch has been closed in and it is now part of the DiMattia Sail Company.

Congratulations, To Quincy Medical Center

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I read with great interest and pride the wonderful news that Quincy Hospital has been saved and will continue into the next millennium as the Quincy Medical Center. Congratulations to all those instrumental in maintaining and improving such a vital and valuable community health care resource.

From 1969-1976, I "worked my way" through pre-med at the hospital, first as an orderly, then a lab technician and finally as a fledging medical student doing my first clinical clerkships under the watchful eyes of some of the best clinicians in any medial era. The hospital, to me was the place where the foundation of who I am as a physician was laid in the equivalent of solid Quincy Granite. The medical, nursing and laboratory staff taught me standards of professionalism that stay with me to this day and kept me in good stead as I proceeded through my medical career here in New York.

My heart felt praise to all of the staff "on the hill" couldn't be more sincere and enduing. Good Luck!!!

Urges Quincy Voters To Vote

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I urge Quincy voters not to stay home on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 2. We have too many important things at stake here. Don't give your vote to someone else by staying home.

There are several ward council races across the city, including my own Ward 6. The choice is ours as to how we will enter the new millennium. The Quincy City Council and Quincy School Committee do our work in this democracy. We are facing a host of problems including life in the Quincy Medical Center era. Quality of life issues. How we live and what we live with are in our hands to determine.

We can run for office if we think we can make a difference. Many folks are doing just that or we can at least vote which too many folks are seemingly not doing. Finally, we can get involved in our communities through neighborhood organizations.

As a member of the Atlantic Community Association and one of its officers, we work as a team to make the Center work for the people of the Atlantic Neighborhood. Things aren't always easy. Sometimes we can squabble but our bottom line working with our executive director is to improve the quality of life for our neighbors and friends.

Who said life was easy for those who actually lived it? Who said it is easy to live in a democracy? We all just could live our own lives and not worry about what is happening beyond our front lawns or driveways but I don't want to live in a neighborhood that selfish, do you? We elect pols but we are the first line of defense. All of us!

'Queenie' And Owners Looking For A Quincy Apartment

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

After many years as Quincy residents, my husband, my dog and myself have found ourselves displaced and temporarily living with relatives in Dorchester.

Last Monday, one of my nieces let the dog out and "Queenie" became lost in unfamiliar surroundings. I spent six of the most miserable, desperate days that I can recall, thinking all kinds of dreadful. thoughts. Imagine my joy when Frank of Trifone's Litre & Wedge called me to tell me he had seen my precious pooch, here in Quincy. Needless to say, my husband flew and was astounded to find that Queenie, thinner and wiser had managed to make her way back to the only home she had ever known and had gone from Dorchester all the way to Quincy in six days.

My heartfelt thanks and gratitude to all the guys at Trifone's, Frank especially. And it is my fervent hope and plea that some animal loving landlord will soften his heart and rent us an apartment in Quincy that allows pets, so that we can all come back home.

Unemployment Jumps 30 Percent

Oct. 28 - Nov. 3

By PAUL HAROLD

The state Division of Employment Security reported a 30 percent increase in unemployment in the Quincy area compared to the same period in 1956.

Some 3,330 people were receiving unemployment compensation, up from a year ago when there were 2,250 recipients.

The increase was blamed on cuts in federal defense spending that hit electricians particularly hard, and the slow sart in Christmas hiring.

The area's highest recorded unemployment was 7,000 in 1954.

FORTY-FIVE PERCENT TURNOUT PREDICTED

City Clerk Donald Crane predicted a 45 percent turnout for next week's election that featured a hotly contested race for mayor between former Councillor Laurence Curtin and Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa. This prediction was down from the 65 percent turnout in 1955.

In addition to the contest for top spot, there were 18 candidates for nine seats on the council. Council candidates were Carl Anderson, Thomas Burgin, James McIntyre, Joseph Brett, William Ellis, George Fay, John Gillis, Joseph McDonough, Frank Orcutt, John Quinn, Vincent Nobile, Alice Mitchell, Patrick Faherty, Jr., William Burns, Charles Shea, Edna Austin, David McIntosh and James McCormack.

FOUR LIBRARY BRANCHES TO CLOSE

The trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library voted to close four branches on Nov. 15 and discontinue library services at Quincy City Hospital.

Slated for closure were Montclair, General Palmer, Baxter and Manet branches. These areas would be served by the city's new bookmobile.

Hospital library services were ended because of reduced demand. This was as a result of reduced patient days and the growing popularity of paperback books and magazines.

Pasta, Anchovies Plus

Every time my husband and I go out to dinner, and someone orders a Ceaser's salad without anchovies, my husband always tells the waitress to bring the anchovies to him. And so when I found this recipe that includes his favorite anchovies, he was in heaven!

Pasta, anchovies plus
2 pounds fresh asparagus
1 pound angel hair (or a favorite pasta)
1 or 2 cans of anchovies in olive oil.
4 tablespoons olive oil
salt and pepper to taste
grated Romano or parmesan cheese

Prepare the asparagus by cutting off the ends. Cut stalks diagonally in slices.

Add the asparagus to the same water boiling the pasta until the pasta is cooked the way you want it.

While this is cooking, add the oil in the can of anchovies to the olive oil in a pan and on low heat, add the anchovies and blend for about a minute.

Drain the pasta and asparagus. Add to the pan with the anchovies, salt and pepper and heat for a couple of minutes. Serve with grated cheese.

If you don't care for asparagus, I have prepared this entree with spinach which is cooked separately instead of with the pasta. I saute the spinach in olive oil and garlic. Both are delicious.

A Special Tribute To Rabbi Jacob Mann

It was a special birthday party, a special tribute, and a special family reunion representing four generations.

And, a special guest of honor: Rabbi Jacob Mann, spiritual leader of Beth Israel Synagogue for 57 years.

More than 250 gathered at Temple Beth Am in Randolph Sunday to honor Rabbi Mann on his 90th birthday and Beth Israel Synagogue on its 80th anniversary.

His three children were there. His daughter, Mrs. Esther Mann Snyder flew in from Israel. His two sons, Rabbi Jonah Mann and Rabbi Abraham Mann, now of New York City were both there. As were grandchildren and a great granddaughter.

Rabbi Mann told those honoring him:

"Ladies and gentlemen, you are my family. No matter how many years I have known you and you have known me. It's still a short time to what we would like.

"We are not eternal. We are not everlasting. Longevity you can not buy in a jar. Long life and old age you can not shop for. It is a present from Him.

"When He presses the button, when He calls you, you answer his call. It depends on what you leave behind. It depends on what you have accumulated during your lifetime."

Rabbi Mann referred to the "two eclipses" in his life: the deaths of his two wives. Leah Balban Mann, mother of his three children, died in 1962 and Isabel Marantz Mann, a Quincy school principal, died in 1990.

Mayor James Sheets told those attending that the strength of a nation and its people is not its economy, military power or culture but in the quality of its spiritual commitment and dedication.

"No community in this country or any country can be healthy and have the character it gives its people and the best way of life unless beneath it is a very strong and very meaningful commitment to God," he said.

"We have been blessed in Quincy all these many years to have a man like Rabbi Jacob Mann.

"So on behalf of a very grateful city we want to wish you well on your 90th birthday and the temple on its 80th. And we want to say that you have made a tremendous difference in our lives individually and in the history of our city."

Rabbi Jonah Mann marveled at his father:

"I have often thought that the reason my father is still able to perform his duties and responsibilities is that he has learned how to push himself. I do not believe I could do the things he does in services during Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

"Many people have benefited from the partnership between the two institutions we honor today -- Rabbi Jacob Mann and Beth Israel Synagogue. The lives of many people are intertwined with these institutions. There is no doubt my father is an institution in Quincy. His family is obviously very proud of him."

Rabbi Abraham Mann had this praise for his father:

"If you listen to the way my father prays to the Almighty, my father doesn't merely pray. My father has a conversation with God because God is my father's friend.

"My father is unequivocal when it comes to the words in the Bible. God's word remains God's word. My father has taken on every challenge, every single criticism not because it is personal but because my father is a Rabbi for the community.

"He listens but will not violate the principles of the Torah. My father is a defender of the faith just as he is a man who believes in the closeness of God to him."

Mrs. Snyder said of her father:

"I am not comfortable in praising my father because my father is a modest man and, as some of you know, he didn't want to have this party tonight.

"He doesn't necessarily like to be the center of attention. My father is an easy man to honor. It is not a commandment. It is a joy to do that. Actually, we as his children feel honored to have a father like that.

"We live far away. I live in Israel, my brothers live in New York and I think you here and the people in Quincy are our extended family. We feel you are our family and watch over my father and take care of him. We are really grateful to all of you for taking him into your hearts as he has taken you into his."

RABBI JACOB MANN (center) is joined at his 90th birthday celebration by, from left, David Grossman, Adams Shalom Temple cantor; Sumner Goldberg, president Temple Beth El; Rabbi Abraham Halfinger, Rabbi Jonah Mann, son; Rabbi Abraham Mann, son; and Harold Krasnoff, president Beth Israel Synagogue.

From the left, Herb Fine, Sumner Greenberg, Barbara Fine, William Needel, Rita Needel, Marion Needel, Mel Needel, Helen Warshaeur, Irving Isaacson, Bernard Warshaeur and Harold Krasnoff, president of Beth Israel Synagogue who was master of ceremonies.

Sumner Greenberg represented Rabbi David Jacobs of Temple Beth El, Quincy, who was out of state, and brought a message from him which said, in part:

"To Rabbi Mann and the Beth Israel Congregation: I am very appreciative for the work done in this community because you are here to do it. This work is so great and so demanding it will be done only by those who care.

"Rabbi Mann cares and Beth Israel has been inspired by his over half-century of service in our midst. We have been blessed by his devotion.

"A special blessing to you, Rabbi Mann, for all your years of service to the Quincy Jewish community and the entire community at large. May God grant you many years of good health and strength."

State Budget Allocates $12.6 Million For Quincy Schools

The budget agreement reached by the House and Senate includes the Senate's commitment to fully fund the Education Reform Act of 1993, and earmarks more than $12 million for Quincy schools, announces Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The budget will include the full $245 million increase the state promised to provide to city, town, and regional school districts. In return, we set high standards and demand high performance. That is a deal the Senate is committed to keeping, and we have done so by allocating $90 million more than the House budget," Morrissey said.

"While the statewide funding may seem like an abstract concept," Morrissey said for Quincy schools "this funding level will bring tangible and meaningful improvements to the quality of education." He noted that the distribution to Quincy schools is $12,679,625 for this year, which is the same as the appropriation included in the Senate budget. This agreed to amount is $1,310,250 above last year's funding level, and $464,385 above the House education proposal.

"Those additional dollars will surely be put to great use as schools strive to meet our high expectations for the success of the students," Morrissey said. He explained that "we rely on those closest to the schools -- at the local level -- to determine the expenditure of these funds."

Morrissey said the Senate was successful in restoring a $20 million program to help schools meet the MCAS challenge, in addition to the $90 million more for local spending. He added that "our emphasis on education coexists with our fiscal responsibility. This is a balanced budget that is responsible with regard to our obligation to be prudent with the state coffers, and with regard to our obligation to invest in the schools for the Commonwealth."

The final budget, that includes Senate education appropriations, will be finalized in the coming weeks.

$10,200 Presented For Library Children's Room In Memory Of Patricia Toland

A check for $10,200 in memory of Patricia Toland has been presented to the Thomas Crane Library for the new Children's Room.

Gloria Noble, chairwoman of the Friends of Pat Toland, presented the check recently to Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

The money was raised at a March 16 birthday tribute to Mrs. Toland who served as a member of the school committee, the city council and as assistant city clerk. She died in 1994 after a long battle with cancer.

"We are so pleased by those who contributed to the library in Pat's name," McLaughlin said. "Pat, as a teacher, mother, and elected official was always a strong supporter of the library.

The Children's Room will be a fitting memorial to Pat's life."

Mrs. Toland's daughter, Liz Bates and her son, Brendan Toland, said jointly:

"We are grateful to the friends of our mother who so generously gave in her memory. We know how happy she would be that their offerings will make the enjoyment of books more possible for children in Quincy."

Contributions in Patricia Toland's memory may still be sent to the Thomas Crane Public Library Foundation, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

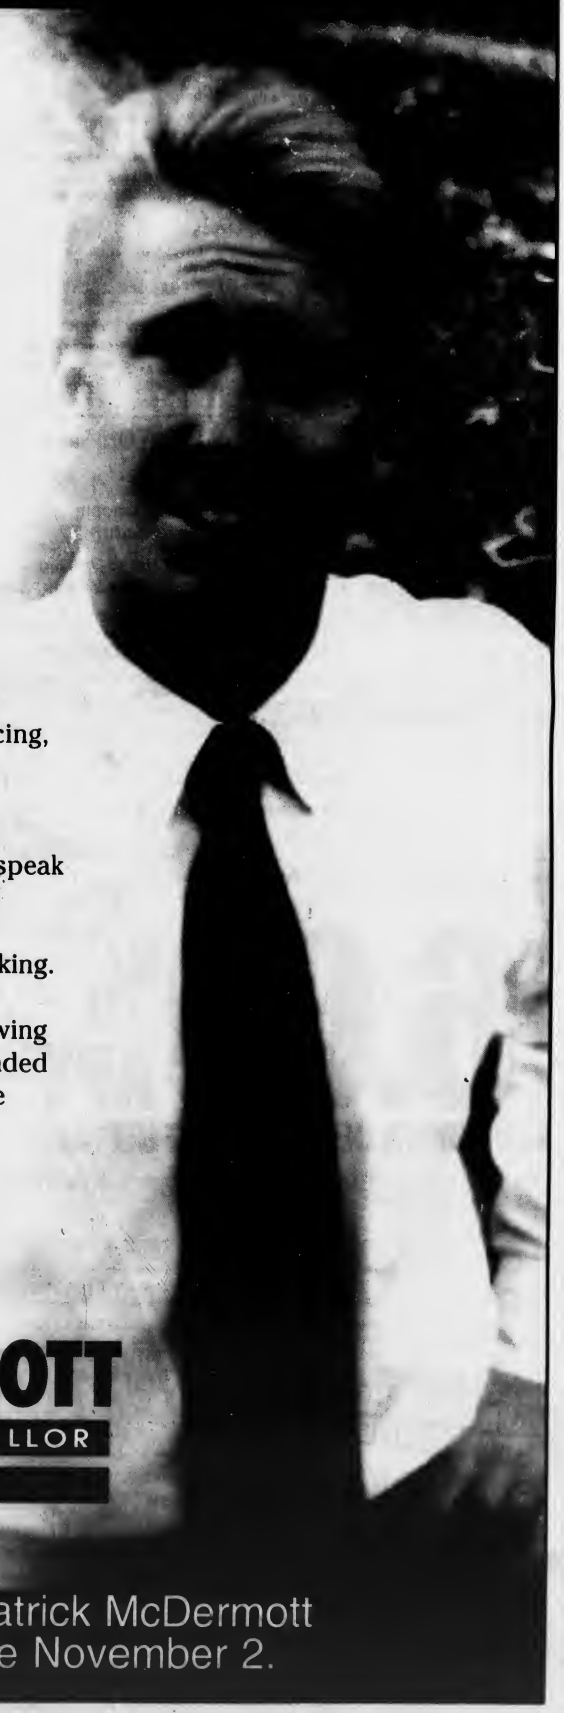
AS TIME GOES BY



If time seems to go by faster the older you get, there may be good reason. During a recent study, subjects between the ages of 19 and 24 were compared against groups between the ages of 45 and 50 and 60 and 65, for their ability to estimate when three minutes had passed, While the youngest group was nearly perfect in its estimates, the oldest group was furthest from the mark. The results show that our internal clocks slow down as we age, making it seem as though time is passing us by in a mad rush. This helps explain why one year feels like ten to teenagers, while oldsters have holidays sneak up on them.

One thing that proves true about time--spending it with friends makes it go faster whereas being alone can make the hours seem long at times. At Marina Place (617-770-3264), a senior living residence, our Memory Impairment Care Program offers a gentle and secure environment in which residents' needs are addressed with compassion by staff trained in Alzheimer's and dementia care. For a tour, stop in at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. The culprit in misjudging time among older people may be declining levels of dopamine, the brain chemical that may act as the "battery" that powers the internal clock.

Canada's Largest Tall Ship To Visit Shipbuilding Museum

The 200-foot, three-masted topsail schooner Empire Sandy, Canada's largest class "A" tall ship, will lay over in Quincy at the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard Saturday, Oct. 30 and Sunday, Oct. 31.

The public is invited to tour the vessel and visit the USS Salem, centerpiece of the museum.

Empire Sandy will be docked at the Harbor Express water shuttle docks within the USS Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at 739 Washington St., Route 3A, Quincy.

Cost to tour the ship is $3 per person, $1 for children under age 10. Tours will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, rain or shine.

Parking is free. Harbor Express water shuttle is available from Long Wharf and Logan Airport.

In addition to visiting the Empire Sandy, youth of a' ages are invited to visit the special Haunted Ship program aboard the USS Salem for an additional charge.

The Empire Sandy is not wheelchair accessible.

The gaff rigged topsail schooner carries more than 10,000 square feet of sail. The hull was built of riveted steel in 1943 in England as a steam powered, open ocean salvage tug for World War II.

Brought to Canada in the 1950s, she worked for 20 years on Lake Superior before she was salvaged from the breaker's yard and converted to her current configuration by her current owner and operator. She sailed for the first time as a schooner in 1981, and has been in operation as a Tall Ship for 18 years in Toronto. This winter will be her third year in operation in Nassau.

She is Canada's largest class "A" Tall Ship, and believed to be the largest capacity day and dinner sailing vessel in the world. Sailing from Toronto during the summer and Nassau, Bahamas during the winter, she can carry up to 275 people for a buffet dinner and entertainment under sail. She also carries trainees aboard for week and multi-week passages through the Great Lakes, St. Lawrence Seaway and Atlantic Ocean while sailing to and from Nassau, stopping occasionally at historic ports in the U.S. and Canada along the route.

Her owners will introduce a second tug-based schooner in 2000, with ice breaking capabilities suitable for more northerly adventure sails.

Service Project At USS Salem

The U.S.S. Salem in Quincy will be the site of a service project the week of Nov. 8-12 as students and staff of Grafton and Westover Job Corps, located in North Grafton and Chicopee respectively, will conduct a service learning project aboard the heavy cruiser.

The project is being sponsored by Joint Action in Community Services, Inc. JACS is a national human service organization of community volunteers helping youth enter the work force and becoming self-reliant adults.

Under the supervision of Job Corps' instructors and U.S.S Salem volunteers, students will be assisting in the ship's restoration using skills which they've developed through Job Corps, more specifically plumbing and painting.

Job Corps is a federal residential program that provides educational and vocational training to young men and women ages 16-24.

This community service project is unique because students are able to practice and use their skills while helping their community at the same time.

The U.S.S. Salem, a post-World War II heavy cruiser built in Quincy, is the centerpiece of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum. The restoration of the ship depends on its volunteers who in the past have been primarily veterans.

In light of the Veterans Day holiday, students will honor veterans by continuing their work on maintaining and renovating the historic vessel for future generations to appreciate.

STICKER-TO-ITIVENESS

Consumers are purchasing cars, minivans and sports utility vehicles at a record pace expected to exceed last year's 15.5 million vehicles. And although cars may be more costly than they were ten years ago, they represent better value. Today's vehicles come with many features that were lacking previously - air conditioning, power everything, rustproofing, better crash worthiness, vastly improved fuel economy and emissions performance and improved reliability. While the average transaction price of a new vehicle will be about $21,000 in 1999 (up from $14,725 in 1989), median family income is $48,423 (versus $34,213). Thus, it takes a smaller percentage of a family's income to purchase a vehicle than ever before.

Look again.

The City of Quincy should take another look at the Highpoint housing development.

As Quincy business owners, we're asking the Quincy City Council to take a second look at the original housing development plan known as Highpoint.

Congress Group Ventures has proposed investing $200 million in 75 acres of land on Quarry Street. This development would create market-priced apartments starting at $1,300 per month. This housing is urgently needed by employees of existing and new businesses.

The original proposal had been approved by the city's Planning Board, based on recommendations from the Traffic Engineer, Public Works Commissioner, and all three of the city's environmental consultants.

What's needed now is the approval of the Council and the support of the Mayor. That approval would obviously be conditioned on Highpoint's compliance with all relevant rules and regulations.

The right Highpoint could produce $2 million in new tax revenue, lead to millions of dollars in infrastructure improvements, employ many construction workers, and draw new customers to the downtown shopping area.

As with any project, careful negotiations are needed. On both sides. But what's needed even more is a spirit of co-operation. On both sides.

This project means a lot to Quincy. In jobs, housing, business climate, customers, tax revenue. But, most of all, in confidence.

We're asking Quincy officials to find a way to make Highpoint work. We may not see another opportunity like this for a long time.

We're asking you to call the City Council and tell them that with this much at stake we should all take another look.

Quincy Partnership's White House Egg Drawing Here Nov. 7

The "White House Egg," designed by Theo Faberge in honor of The White House's 200th anniversary will be raffled in Quincy Sunday, Nov. 7.

The event, to be held from 5-7 p.m. in BankBoston's lobby, 1400 Hancock St., Quincy, is being sponsored by The Quincy Partnership in cooperation with The Adams National Historical Park.

The "White House Egg" is part of The St. Petersburg Collection, and retails for $5,700. The materials used to craft the egg include porcelain, 24 karat gold, and sterling silver. Only 325 of these "White House Eggs" are being produced.

The "White House Eggs" feature the Great Seal of the United States, and portraits of John and Abigail Adams, the first residents of The White House. The two portraits were painted by famed artist Gilbert Stuart. Each of the "White House Eggs" was meticulously hand crafted in accordance with the strict artistic standards of Theo Faberge. Additionally, inside the shell of each of these special eggs, lies a miniature, sterling and gold replica of The White House itself.

During the reception at BankBoston, one of the 325 St. Petersburg Collection "White House Eggs" will be raffled. Tickets are $100 each.

JOHN AND ABIGAIL Adams grace the exterior of the Faberge "White House Egg." The egg, one of 325 from the Theo Faberge St. Petersburg Collection, is crafted of porcelain, 24 karat gold, and sterling silver and honors the 200th anniversary of The White House. The Adams were the first residents of the White House. Quincy Partnership will raffle the egg Nov. 7.

Funds raised will go to the purchase of a fountain to be located at the new entrance to Quincy's Merrymount Park. The Quincy Partnership hopes to raise $50,000 through the egg drawing. The total cost of the fountain is estimated at $100,000.

"The money raised from this event will go a long way," said Quincy Partnership chairman Edward J. Keohane, "in helping to create a magnificent entrance to Merrymount Park. The fountain will be the crown jewel in the completion of the park."

"That egg is beautiful. The winner of the drawing will be the owner of a rare, patriotic treasure which they can cherish forever."

During the reception, a limited number of the "White House Eggs" will also be available for purchase at $5,700 each. In addition, there will be a special selection of St. Petersburg Collection Faberge eggs on display.

For ticket information, call (617) 773-3636.

A GOLD REPLICA of the White House lies inside the shell of the Faberge "White House Egg." The Quincy Partnership will raffle the egg, valued at $5,700, Nov. 7 from 5-7 p.m. in the BankBoston lobby at 1400 Hancock St. Raffle proceeds will benefit the purchase of a new fountain in Merrymount Park.

Dr. Kent Hill Re-Elected ENC President By Trustees

Dr. Kent Hill, who has served Eastern Nazarene College as president since 1992, was unanimously re-elected recently to the presidency by the college's Board of Trustees.

The 11th president of ENC since its move to Wollaston in 1919, Dr. Hill previously served in Washington, D.C. as the president of the Institute on Religion and Democracy.

Over the past seven years of his presidency at the college, Dr. Hill's administration has been responsible for major steps forward in campus improvements, spending some $12 million on the Wollaston campus alone. In addition, the college has been able to purchase and renovate the former Howard Johnson Candy Factory and Executive Offices on Old Colony Ave. in Quincy. The Cecil P. Paul Center for Business, which occupies a major part of the renovated building, was dedicated Oct. 19.

Dr. Dallas Mucci, chairman of the Board of Trustees and District Superintendent of the New York District Church of the Nazarene, said, "Dr. Kent Hill's unanimous re-election as president is a total confidence vote of his leadership in the past seven years, and that is especially significant in this era of short college and university presidencies."

Dr. Hill is among only 50 college and university presidents recognized for their outstanding leadership in the field of student character development in The Templeton Guide: Colleges that Encourage Character Development, a recently release guidebook.

In the same volume, Eastern Nazarene College has been similarly recognized for its overall achievement.

"I am honored to be named to the Templeton Foundation's Presidential Leadership list," Dr. Hill said. "We are also extremely proud of ENC's work in all of our courses to help students develop strong values that will serve them well beyond their college years.

"Character development is a lifelong process, and we believe that colleges and universities have a very important and unique role to play," he added.

Designed for students, parents and educators who believe that character matters, The Templeton Guide contains profiles of 405 exemplary college programs in 10 categories: 50 college presidents who have exercised leadership in character development; and 100 colleges and universities named to the Templeton Honor Roll for their comprehensive commitment and programs that inspire students to lead ethical and civic-minded lives.

Cited in particular for its character building potential were the college's program of sending students to its campus in Romania, its senior-level capstone course entitled Living Issues, the President's Apologetics Lecture Series and the organization of the upcoming June 2000 Conference on Minority Urban leadership Development and Christian Colleges.

Resolution Supports Retirement Buy Back For Nursing School Grads

If graduates of the old Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing want to buy back school time to put towards retirement, the city council thinks it's a good idea.

At its Oct. 18 meeting the city council voted 6-0 to pass a resolution supporting QCHSN graduates who wish to receive credit for the time they spent working in Quincy City Hospital while they were learning in its school of nursing.

The retiring nurses would have to "buy back" those years because they weren't contributing into the retirement system at the time of their schooling.

Councillor Paul Harold, who sponsored the resolution, said that some nurses have made inquiries about the buy-back to the Quincy Retirement Board but have met with resistance.

Although Harold said he understood why the retirement board must act as a strict watchdog wary of exceptions, he then made the case for this being a truly exceptional case.

The greatest reason, said Harold, is that, since QCHSN closed in 1979, the amount of eligible retirees would be finite. "The retirement totals will be very limited because the category ended over 15 years ago," Harold argued. "They will not increase, only decrease. We should carve out a special category based on fairness and consistency with other nursing retirement plans."

Specifically, Harold referred to Boston and QMC's new affiliate, Boston Medical Center. Boston's retirement board allows nurses who attended the now defunct Boston City Hospital School of Nursing to buy back their school time to maximize retirement benefits.

When asked to comment, Mayor Sheets said that he would of course sign the resolution to be passed on to the retirement board, but that it was clearly the decision of the board. He also said he would ask the board to cost out the program so that, if it came to a council vote, the councillors would know exactly what they were voting on.

"If we can do it, we'd all love to do it," Sheets said. "But, basically, we have to look into cost. I'm not sure any of us know what the dollar amount is."

Sheets, who once taught some of the same nurses in the three-year nursing program at Quincy College, said that the number of eligible nurses is "substantial," between 100 and 125.

Harold agrees with that figure as a maximum but said the real figure could be "actually much smaller." He also said that looking into the cost was an expected and welcome part of the process.

"Yes, that's what they have to do," said Harold.

Opening of New High School Delayed One Year

The new Quincy High School, originally scheduled to open in September of 2003, will now open in September of 2004.

That's because, officials say, they want to move cautiously and avoid any major mistakes with the eight year, $43 million project.

Besides the new high school, the renovation of Quincy Public Schools, estimated at $73 million, includes such projects as: the recent construction of Point Webster school; repairs to Adams Shore Library and the Broadmeadows and Atherton Hough Schools; and the moving of Central Middle School to the old Quincy High School, newly renovated for the task.

According to Mayor Sheets, the hospital crisis put school projects on hold for several months.

One silver lining, said Sheets recently, was that the renovation of Sterling Middle School could move ahead of Quincy High School on the priority list. With bonds for the new high school delayed, a smaller bond can be issued to renovate Sterling.

The new high school will be located off Quincy Avenue adjacent to Faxon Park.

"Scott was voted for this award because of the professionalism, reliability and consistency that he shows on the job," said Kevin Nagle, president of the CCOA.

Messina is not only a distinguished himself a Correction Officer, he is also a fine hockey player. He recently returned from Stockholm, Sweden, where he played on the Eastern Massachusetts Lawmakers Hockey Team for the World Police and Fire Games that are held every two years.

"The Norfolk County Correctional Center is proud to have an outstanding officer like Scott Messina," Bellotti said. "He is a model for other officers to emulate. I can't think of a more deserving officer for the Distinguished Service Award."

SHERIFF MICHAEL BELLOTTI congratulates Scott Messina who was recently awarded the Paul Hill Distinguished Service Award by his peers at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and Correctional Center.

Council, School Races Take Election Spotlight

The sixth candidate for council-at-large is Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, 69, of Clay St., retired businesswoman and a member of the Silver Haired Legislature who has run for the city council in the past.

There are contests for four ward council seats, two of them open.

Gregory Hanley, 33, of Shed St., a sales manager; and Russell C. Patten III, 26, of Babcock St., a recent law school graduate, are after the Ward 1 seat Kolson is vacating.

Hanley topped the five-candidate field in the September preliminary election with 830 votes. Patten took the second nomination with 539.

The other open council seat is in Ward 6 with Joseph J. Newton, 32, of Glover Ave., an accountant; and James N. Stamos, 49, of Sonoma Rd., a realtor, the contenders. Bruce Ayers is leaving the seat to concentrate on his duties as state representative.

Newton led the four-candidate field in the preliminary election with a vote of 923. Stamos won the second nomination with 547.

Ward 3 incumbent Patrick McDermott, 29, of Taylor St., is challenged by John C. Cain, Jr., 54, of South Central Ave., who is in the computer business and making his first bid for elective office.

In Ward 5, incumbent Stephen J. Durkin, 43, of Colonial Dr., is opposed by Arline J. Goodman, 59, of Revere Rd., a registered nurse making her first run for office.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, 52, of Elm St., and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, 24, of Willard St., have no opposition.

School Committee incumbents Christine M. Cedrone, 29, of Palmer St., and Linda K. Stice, 51, of Winthrop Ave., are candidates for re-election.

Sean Barry's decision not to seek re-election leaves one of the school seats open this year.

Three candidates hope to fill that seat: Robert L. Foley, 71, of Algonquin Rd., an engineer; William Phelan, 41, of Monroe Rd., an attorney and Rev. John C. Swanson, 42, of Kemper St., pastor of Union Congregational Church.

There are three non-binding questions on the ballot:

Question 1: Are you in favor of using any Quincy shoreline for arrival or departure of casino boats?

Question 2: Shall the city of Quincy take Lot No. 23 in Squantum Marina Bay by eminent domain for the purpose of open space preservation?

Shea said he is basing his 38-to-40 percent voter turnout prediction on the fact there seems to be more interest this year in the council at-large race, open council seats in Wards 1 and 6, contests for the Wards 3 and 5 seats and the open school committee seat.

Polls in the 30 voting precincts will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. next Tuesday. Shea said he hopes to have the final results tabulated by 9:30 p.m.

Nov. 1 Deadline For Obtaining Absentee Ballots

Absentee ballots for next Tuesday's city election will be available at the city clerk's office up until noon Monday, Nov. 1.

City Clerk Joseph Shea reminds those who will be away on election day and plan to take absentee ballots that they must be returned by 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 2 to count in the election.

William Draicchio, a member of the board of the Board of Voter Registrars, has been taking absentee ballots to patients in nursing homes and to other shut-ins who are unable to go City Hall.

CHILDREN AND HEEL PAIN

Have you noticed your child limping and complaining that their heel hurts, especially after physical activities?

In a bone that has not completely "ossified" or matured, physical activities, especially running and jumping can cause the apophysis (the area where the immature bone matures) to become inflamed. This condition is self limiting as the bone matures or ossifies the apophysis disappears and can no longer become inflamed.

The symptoms can be treated until the apophysis matures with rest, ice, medication and even devices for the shoes. If you are concerned that your child is having pain in his or her heel, see a qualified physician for evaluation and treatment.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

He entered Cardinal O'Connell Minor Seminary and also attended Catholic University and the North American College, Rome. In 1989 Msgr. Deeley received a J.C.D. degree in canon law from the Pontifical Gregorian University, Rome.

He has served at St. Bartholomew, Needham; Mary Immaculate of Lourdes, Newton; and St. Brigid, Lexington. Since 1988 he has been chaplain to the Grey Nuns of Montreal at Youville Place, Lexington.

Deeley was ordained a priest in 1973.

Deeley has been involved with the Tribunal of the Archdiocese, which handles church law concerning such matters as marriages or parish boundaries, ever since Cardinal Medeiros selected him in 1978. "I accepted because he felt I was able to do it," said Deeley. "I became interested and I've been interested ever since."

He is the vice-president and president-elect of the Canon Law Society of America and serves on the Ecumenical and Interreligious Committee of the Archdiocese, but makes clear that his full-time responsibility is to St. Ann's Church.

And, although the judicial background and doctorate in canon law may seem imposing, Msgr. Deeley points out that its goal is the same as the parish priest: to touch people's lives.

"Church law is a structure in which the most people can be served," explained Deeley. "The purpose of law, in the church, is the salvation of souls."

Msgr. Deeley joked that his first order of business as Pastor was simply "to find out how the keys work." After that, his goals are to continue what he sees as the strengths of St. Ann's: outreach, faith development, and youth ministry. "I'm building on the work of the previous pastors, Father Keane and Msgr. Scally," said Deeley.

Another strength, said Deeley, was the great tradition of education and faith found at St. Ann's School, which teaches roughly 450 students from Pre-K to Grade 8. Deeley wants work with Sister Catherine, St. Ann's principal, and her staff to maintain the excellence at St. Ann's.

"I'm here to listen to the needs of the people and to serve them," Msgr. Deeley added. "The church offers a wonderful message of hope and I want to be a minister of that hope in this community."

St. Ann's Church is located at 757 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Pub Outside Mural Draws Raymondi's Ire

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Chapter Saloon, the former Point Pub on Washington Street has only been open for about six weeks, and is already running into criticism.

At Tuesday's License Board meeting, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi complained about a mural that was placed on the side of the building without a permit.

The mural depicts someone drinking beer and indicating that the consumption of beer would make them stronger.

Raymondi still echoed the objections he has had for the past several years about the re-opening of the pub citing noisy patrons, walking across Washington Street in the wee hours, and parking on . Joseph's Church parking lot.

After owner Stephen Barrett purchased the site a couple of years ago, the License Board denied his request for a liquor license because of Raymondi's opposition, and a petition signed by abutters.

However, Barrett won two legal victories when he got his liquor license back after the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission overruled the License Board's actions denying the license.

The board later relented and restored the license it had denied.

Barrett has since refurbished the bar and the corner building which houses it. Neither Barrett or his attorney Louis Cassis appeared at the meeting which angered Raymondi.

Raymondi along with the pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Rev. Daniel Graham and John Comer, who represented St. Joseph's Parish Council all reiterated the complaints about the parking at the church lot, and rowdy patrons leaving the establishment in the wee hours.

All of the three men agreed it was "ludicrous for the owners not be in attendance.."

Rev. Graham took offense to the mural which he called "rather offensive," and called the message on the sign as a "reversed message" for those struggling with alcohol addiction.

However, Rev. Graham noted that the renovations to the establishments were well done and cited the landscaping as an improvement.

Comer said the owners of the saloon should be 'hit with a fine" each time they abuse their licenses.

One abutter, Isabella Veno told of noting the bar still open at 1:45 a.m. last weekend and loud patrons getting into their cars. However, Det.. Lt. Robert M. Perchard, the liquor inspector said he had visited the establishment at least once a week late at night since the opening and had not observed either cars parked across the street or abusive patrons.

He also noted that the bartender was "well qualified" and the restaurant "appears to be well run."

He read the guidelines to the board which stated that the bar could serve drinks until 1 a.m. and the patrons could stay until 1:30 a.m. If the employees were going to stay until 2 a.m. or later to clean, they had to notify the police station..

The question of who is managing the building, whether it's Steve Barrett or Patrick McArdle was addressed by Raymondi. Chairman Joseph Shea said he will send notices to all concerned for the continued hearing scheduled for Nov. 9.

Shea told the board that Cassis will file a request to the Zoning Board for a permit for the mural.

Allerton House Residents Take Foliage Trip

Residents at Allerton House at Hancock Park, Quincy, recently traveled to the Sudbury/Wayland area to enjoy the fall foliage at the Wayside Gristmill, a beautiful park and recreation area with a working mill.

The residents brought a "bag lunch" and enjoyed a picnic at the Gristmill's outdoor dining area on a sunny, autumn day. The trip also included a leisurely driving tour of the area, including the Old Wayside Inn in Sudbury.

"The foliage trip was not only a wonderful opportunity for our residents to be outdoors, enjoying a fall day with friends, it also sparked many memories of similar trips that many of our residents had taken years earlier," said Resident Services Director Sarah Anne Frazier.

Business Leaders Call For Cooperation On Highpoint

Several Quincy business owners signed on to an advertisement urging the city to take "another look at the Highpoint housing development."

The businesses -- The Four's Restaurant, Stephen Leigh Jewelers, Presidential Camera, X&O European Trattoria, Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., Kevin's At the Heritage, Agnitti Insurance, Ryder's Curtains, Rogers Jewelry, Key Realty, and Kids Closet -- were listed in full page ads appearing in both The Patriot Ledger and The Sun.

The business owners stated that the new development would invest $200 million in 75 acres of land on Quarry St. and provide much needed market-priced apartments.

They also pointed out that the original proposal "had been approved by the city's Planning Board based on the recommendation from the Traffic Engineer, Public Works Commissioner, and all three of the city's environmental consultants."

Other positives cited were: $2 million in tax revenue, infrastructure improvements, construction jobs, and new customers to the downtown shopping area.

The ad said that careful negotiations were necessary but called on all parties to work in a spirit of cooperation.

The ad directly asked for the support of the city council and the mayor, whose approval is essential to the Highpoint Development.

Congress Group Ventures has made several proposals for new apartment buildings on the former landfill, at one time asking to build over 1600 units, but has been turned down by the city council citing traffic concerns for the West Quincy area.

The development has been plagued by litigation, mistrust, and fierce arguments for many months now.

Ryder's Curtains Adds Gifts, Cards, And Collectibles

By CRAIG SALTERS

In retail, the name of the game is to listen to the customer.

And Charlie and Cynthia Ryder, of Ryder's Curtains, 1489 Hancock St., are doing just that by adding new lines of cards, gifts, and collectibles to their traditional inventory of curtains and home furnishings

The curtains of Ryder's Curtains are still the heart and soul of the business say both Charlie and Cynthia, but the store is now clearly divided with curtains in the back and such items as woven throws, flags, candles, and cards in the front.

"It's a completely new store, at least as you walk in the front," says Charlie Ryder, who along with his wife Cynthia has owned and operated Ryder's Curtains in Quincy Center since 1976. "Customers are amazed at the change."

The Ryders are gradually moving from a strictly destination store (stores where shoppers come specifically for the washer, the oven, etc.) to a mix of destination and impulse-shopping store.

The goal, say the Ryders, is to create traffic, to get people from the street and into the store, and it seems to be working.

"We have a lot more traffic than curtains only. We have a lot more men come into the store," says Cynthia, who handles the merchandise aspect of the store while Charlie handles operations.

Charlie adds that "people are staying in the store longer and they become aware of our curtains."

"In retail you have to always stay fresh, keep changing," Charlie explains. "You couldn't beat the 80's for conspicuous consumption; everybody thrived in the retail business. But in the 90's it became a harder sell. It became more important to focus on customer service, display, finding your niche market. In this day and age you have keep working at the business in retail."

Ryder's began responding to new customer demands early on when they added home furnishings to their curtain inventory. Five or six years ago they added woven throw afghans which became a hot item. The throws often contained images of cats or lighthouses and, over time, the Ryders began adding related items until they now have a variety of collectibles in three proven themes: cats. lighthouses, and firefighters. "Anything we bring in with cats... it sells," says Charlie with a smile.

A bargain basement was added 2 years ago also as a response to customer demand. The new line of greeting cards is a direct result of the closing of Barker's last year. "Someone has to respond to that," Charlie says. "We're trying to cover all the bases."

Charlie Ryder has been working in Quincy Center since 1972 when he was manager of the W.T. Grant Co. He has twice been president of the QCBPA, once in 1977 and again in the early 90's. He received the QCBPA member recognition award in 1988.

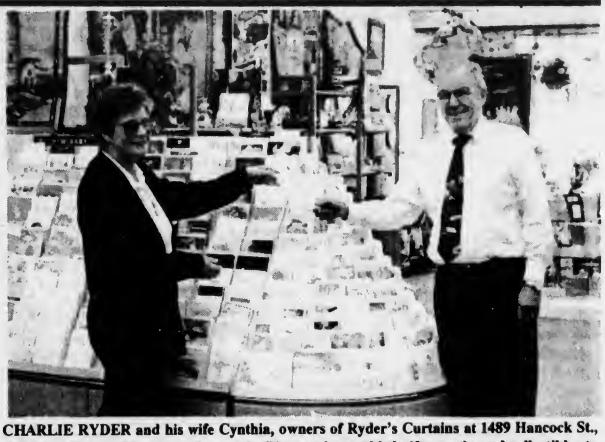
Together, Charlie and Cynthia have witnessed enormous changes in the downtown area. They understand why some people might be nostalgic for the old days but they also see many positives in Quincy's future.

"The Quincy resident isn't shopping downtown anymore," says Cynthia. "They've forgotten what's down here. There's not the mix of stores there used to be and people miss that."

Together the Ryders list names such as Sears, Milton's, Remick's, Child World, Barker's, Lerner's, Woolworth's, Cumming's, and Rite-Aid to underscore their point.

"But our mailing list is still mainly Quincy," Charlie is quick to add.

But on the plus side, the Ryders point to Stop and Shop, President's place, State Street, Crown Colony, and Kevin's at the Heritage as examples of the new downtown traffic: office workers and restaurant patrons, a market which Cynthia believes is "absolutely untapped."



As for the future, Charlie is optimistic about the new Quincy Concourse.

"The Concourse should spur both retail and office expansion and those people are our customers," Charlie said.

And Cynthia would like to see another general merchandise store like Woolworth's or another drugstore return to the downtown.

"Woolworth's is sorely missed. There's no place to buy batteries, floss, paper clips," Cynthia said. Later she asked, "There's a lot of elderly down here, so why don't we have a pharmacy?"

The Ryders, married for 33 years and the parents of Katherine and Cam, are also responding to change at the personal level. They are the proud grandparents of Zachary Santoro, who is all of eight months old.

CHARLIE RYDER and his wife Cynthia, owners of Ryder's Curtains at 1489 Hancock St., display their new line of greeting cards. The two have added gifts, cards, and collectibles to their traditional inventory of curtains and home furnishings to respond to consumer demand and increase customer traffic in the store. (Maralin Manning Photo)

Your Social Security

Social Security In The Next Millennium

By LAURIE ZASTROW

It is clear to most people that the Social Security program, which recently marked its 64th birthday, will change in the next millennium. Over the past 60 years, Social Security has changed to meet the needs of the American people. It must change again to meet the challenge presented by larger numbers of people retiring earlier and living longer.

Whether you're one of approximately 148 million people protected by Social Security or one of the more than 44 million people currently receiving benefits, chances are that you're concerned about how these changes will affect current benefits or future benefits potentially payable to you and your family.

Will there be a Social Security program? What form will it take? How long will the trust funds be sufficient to pay benefits? What's the value of Social Security protection to workers and their families? Will the Social Security taxes you pay be set aside for your future retirement needs? What are some of the options for ensuring the long-term financial stability of Social Security?

We do have the answer to the question, "Will there be a Social Security program" The answer is a resounding yes. We also have answers to trust fund solvency, value of the program, etc.

For help in discussing these and other questions about the future of Social Security, call and ask for the booklet, The Future of Social Security (SSA Pub. No. 05-10055). Copies are available from your local Social Security office or by calling SSA toll-free at 1-800-772-1213. You also can download a copy of typing www.ssa.gov to access Social Security Online, our Internet website.

Finn Steps Down As Chairman Of Mass. Housing Board

Joe Finn has stepped down as chairman of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance's Board of Directors after serving the Board the past four years.

Under Finn's direction, MHSA was instrumental in garnering millions of dollars in resources for homeless people across the state. His work in the state legislature assured a variety of new initiatives to moving people beyond shelter.

"Joe has been a crucial and untiring champion of our poorest neighbors," said Philip Mangano, executive director of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance. "Without Joe's tenacity, dedication and fiscally sound principals, thousands of homeless people would not have the opportunities they have today to end their homelessness."

Finn, former executive director of Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, is now executive director of Shelter, Inc. located in Cambridge.

"We will sorely miss Joe," Mangano said, "but he will continue to serve on the Executive Committee and offer his talents and skills on behalf of our state's poorest citizens."

MHSA is a statewide public policy, advocacy and planning coalition of 71 organizations that operate more than 150 programs across the state serving homeless people. During Finn's tenure as chairman, the organization grew from a regionally based effort in Boston to a statewide initiative, including member agencies from Cape Ann to Cape Cod, and from Boston to the Berkshires.

MSHA's member agencies operate programs which provide housing, shelter, and services to homeless individuals.

Associated Builders, Carpenters To Help Construct Habit Home

Members of the Associated Builders and Contractors' Massachusetts Chapter (ABC) are partnering with South Shore Habitat for Humanity, Inc. (SSHH) and two recently selected families-in-need to participate in the construction of a side-by-side duplex in Quincy.

The duplex is the last phase of South Shore Habitat for Humanity's nine-unit Granite Village development on Bower Road Extension.

They will arrive at Granite Village, a nine-home neighborhood SSHH is building on Bower Rd. in Quincy, in the early morning today (Thursday) and will swing hammers and pound nails until late afternoon Friday, Oct. 29. In these two days they will completely frame the house, from sill to roof sheeting. When ABC was asked what they would need to complete this enormous task, they replied, "Give us the foundations and the power and sit back and watch."

On Nov. 4 and 5, ABC carpenters and supervisors will come to do roofing and siding outside while plumbers and electricians rough-in both units. This will again be a competition to see who can complete the job first.

When the volunteers arrive, they will find only a foundation and building materials on site. When they leave, they will have framed a home that will eventually house two families in need.

The final duplex in Quincy has been made possible by a generous grant from State Street Bank, a matching grant from a donor who wishes to remain anonymous, a bequest from the estate of Eva Thurnstrom, and a donation and support from the employees of Best Buy. Five homes have already been completed in the nine-home neighborhood. This house will be the last home to be constructed, providing safe, decent shelter to two families in need.

SSHH is a nonprofit, ecumenical housing ministry dedicated to building simple, decent homes in partnership with families in need on the South Shore. Granite Village is SSHH's most ambitious construction to date. When completed, nine families will have purchased the homes at cost through long-term, no-interest mortgages. Five out of the nine families have already moved in and have begun to create a neighborhood.

Home Security Tips To Prevent Holiday Thefts

(NAPS)—According to security experts, property crime rates are highest during the holiday season and the summer. As this year's holiday season approaches, homeowners can help protect their possessions with impact-resistant windows and doors made with a new type of glass called KeepSafe. Unlike ordinary glass that will shatter upon impact, KeepSafe glass can withstand multiple hits from common burglary weapons such as crowbars, baseball bats, bricks and even glass cutters.

Generally, windows and doors are the most vulnerable points of entry for a would-be burglar. The FBI says 66 percent of burglaries involve forced entry through a door or window, and often thieves will break glass in order to unlock a door.

KeepSafe glass is laminated glass made by bonding a plastic interlayer between two pieces of glass under heat and pressure. When impacted, the glass may crack, but the shards tend to adhere to the tough plastic interlayer, keeping the window intact and the burglar outside. Windows and doors made with KeepSafe glass can help prevent these kinds of crimes because the glass resists the burglar's blows.

"Reports show that if it takes longer than 30 to 60 seconds for a burglar to break into a home, even the most determined of thieves will go elsewhere," said Michael Betten, Certified Protection Professional with the American Society of Industrial Security. Two of every three burglaries in 1997* were residential, and the average loss per burglary was $1,305.

There is nothing more valuable than your family and home. Ordinary windows are easy access points through which burglars can violate your security. Unlike ordinary glass, windows and doors made with KeepSafe glass can help keep unwanted guests out.

In addition to windows and doors made with KeepSafe glass, the following tips will help protect your home from burglary during the holidays.

Home Security Tips for the Holidays

- Lock windows and doors when no one is home.
- Don't hide a spare key outside.
- Create or update an inventory of your belongings with photos or a video.
- Don't display gifts where they can be seen from outside.
- Ask anyone you don't know who comes to your door for identification.
- If you are going out of town, put lights and a radio on an automatic timer, turn down phone ringers, cancel mail and newspaper delivery, lock the garage and tell as few people as possible that you will be away.

For more information about KeepSafe glass, call 1-800-787-2331 or visit their Web site at www.keepsafe.com.

'JAY' THE CAT and 'Lorenzo' the dog wish pets and their owners a safe and happy Halloween. (Bob Howard Photo)

Keeping Pets Safe On Halloween

While Halloween is a thrilling time for children and parents, holiday festivities may frighten family pets. The Animal Rescue League of Boston asks pet owners to take a few precautions to ensure the safety and security of their animal friends.

On "trick or treat" nights, pets should be kept indoors. Black cats especially tend to be targets of pranksters. Costumes may frighten pets left outdoors as well as create a problem of dogs excessively barking.

The frequent opening and closing of the door may also startle pets. A license and ID tag is always recommended, especially in the event your pet is accidentally let out and becomes lost.

The League does not advocate dressing animals in costumes. Costumes can easily make pets become overheated, stressed or suffer other discomforts. Also keep in mind that costume strings and various accessories can be harmful to pets if ingested.

While no candy is healthy for pets, chocolate can be fatal. Avoid feeding pets candy and keep treats out of reach.

These simple precautions will help to make Halloween a happy holiday for the entire family.

Play It Safe On Halloween

'Trick-Or-Treat' Pointers For Parents

Halloween may be a fun holiday for kids, but parents, trick-or-treat time can be a little troublesome.

Concerns about children's safety -- whether they are out in the neighborhood of back at home with bountiful bags of goodies -- can cast a spell on the evening's festivity. But not to worry! The following are a few safety tips to ensure that Halloween will be a "howling" good time for all.

'Unhaunting' Your House and Neighborhood

• Welcome trick-or-treaters at home by turning on your exterior lights.

• Remove objects from your yard that might present a hazard to little visitors.

• Ask your Neighborhood Watch or citizens' group to patrol the community.

• Involve students from a local college or university to be "witches' helpers." These students help trick-or-treaters cross busy streets and watch out for ghoulish behavior.

• Drive slowly all evening -- you never know what creature may suddenly cross your path.

• Report any suspicious criminal activity to your local police department immediately.

Making Costumes Safe

Dressed Up & Dangerous?

Halloween blood and gore are harmless stuff for the most part. But sometimes dressing up as a superhero, a scary monster, or a slimy alien from outer space -- coupled with the excitement of Halloween -- brings out aggressive behavior.

Even fake knives, swords, and guns and other costume accessories can accidentally hurt people. If these objects are part of a child's costume, make sure they are made of cardboard or other flexible materials. Better yet, challenge kids to create costumes that don't need "weapons" to be scary and fun.

Also:

• Set a time limit for children to trick-or-treat. Together, map out a safe route so you know where they'll be. Remind them not to take short cuts through backyards, alleys, or playgrounds.

• Remind kids not to enter a strange house or car.

• Try to get kids to trick-or-treat while it is still light out. If it is dark, make sure a couple of people are carrying flashlights.

'13 Lucky Tricks' For Safety

As ghosts, pirates and princesses prepare to descend on neighborhoods across on America on Halloween night Saturday, the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay offers parents some safety tips to help prepare their children for a safe and enjoyable trick-or-treat tradition.

The following information is part of Red Cross's annual Safe Families Campaign, an educational program which aims to teach families valuable lifesaving skills such as fire safety, CPR and first aid.

The Red Cross offers the following "lucky 13" safety tips for parents to share with their trick-or-treaters to prevent injuries at Halloween:

Red Cross Halloween Safety Tips:

• Plan your route and share it with your family. If possible, have an adult go with you.

• Wear light-colored or reflective-type clothing so you are more visible. (And remember to put reflective tape on bikes, skateboards, and broom, too!)

• Use face paint rather than masks or things that will cover your eyes.

• Cross the street only at corners.

• Look both ways before crossing the street to check for cars, trucks and low-flying brooms.

• Don't hide or cross the street between parked cars.

• Walk, slither and sneak on sidewalks; not in the street.

• Carry a flashlight to light your way.

• Visit homes that have the porch light on.

• Keep away from open fires and candles. (Keep in mind that costumes can be extremely flammable.)

• Accept your treats at the door and never go into a stranger's house.

• Be cautious of strangers and animals.

• Have a grown-up inspect your treats before eating. And don't eat candy if the package is already opened. Small, hard pieces of candy are a choking hazard for young children.

Top Ten Deck Building Tips

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPS)—Don't let adding a deck on to your home floor you.

Consider the following tips from the deck experts who produce Kodiak™ preserved wood, an innovative new building product that combines the beautiful look of quality, natural cedar without the high price:

• Consider not only the amount of space you have available in your yard but also what items you would like to include on your deck. Many homeowners build beautiful decks only to find their personal items, such as a gas grill, picnic table, or lounge chairs can't fit.

• Decks are no longer built in only the "standard rectangle"—consider alternative shapes, such as ovals and octagons, to maximize the available space.

• Choose a durable wood that stands up to the sun, rain and other elements for the long run. Kodiak preserved wood, for instance, not only resists mold, but is unsurpassed in resisting termites and decay fungi.

• For safety purposes, add a railing and/or fence around your deck. Also, be sure to provide enough lighting—it will be needed for entertaining and also safely defines walkways and the boundaries of your back yard.

• If your home is near a wooded area, leave space between the edge of the deck and the beginning of the wooded area to reduce the invitation to animals and insects.

• Also, add additional fencing underneath the deck to keep animals from "making their home" underneath your home.

• Design your deck so that it slopes slightly away from your house to prevent water damage to your home and deck.

• To avoid having to paint or stain your deck in the future, choose a building material that's easy to maintain. Kodiak preserved wood is treated with a two-step, patented process that provides color saturation throughout the wood, not just on the surface, allowing it to retain its attractive cedar color for years.

• Maximize your available space by adding built-in seating. Benches along the perimeter of the deck don't take up a lot of space, and are very functional.

• If questions arise, consult a professional building contractor or patio and deck builder. Consulting an expert could save you time and money.

Besides its suitability for decks, Kodiak preserved wood is also ideal for playgrounds, walkways, gazebos, sheds and fencing. For the name of the Kodiak dealer in your area, call 1-800-KODIAK.

A properly designed deck provides years of enjoyment and can add value to your home. When building a deck, be sure to choose a wood that lasts.

Earth-Friendly Tips For Fall, Garden Cleanup

Getting the lawn and garden ready for winter can generate a lot of waste and clog land fill sites needlessly. With some gentle prodding, and a little advice, homeowners can help the environment and do their lawn and gardens a favor this fall by following a few simple steps.

The experts at The Home Depot offer the following tips for earth-friendly lawn and garden cleanup:

• Instead of spending time raking up grass clippings, use a mulch mower to cut grass finely enough to be left on the lawn. In addition to generating no waste, this returns essential nutrients to keep your lawn lush and green next year. Look for convertible mulch mowers that can break down both leaves and grass, such as a three-in-one convertible mulch mower.

• Bring in any potted plants to protect them from frost. To keep unwanted insects out of the house, spray first with an environmentally friendly insect spray. Tropical plants which stay dormant throughout the winter months can be pruned. Cut back on watering and don't fertilize until the clocks change to Daylight Savings Time in the spring. A fish fertilizer is the best natural, organic choice.

• Outdoors, leave seed heads on perennial plants over the winter for the birds to eat, and tie burlap sacking around young trees and evergreens.

• When your vegetable garden is finished for the season, turn in composted manure to rejuvenate the soil. It's completely organic and safe for the soil.

• Soil that is made from a composting pile is environmentally friendly and makes for an excellent fertilizer for the garden. Fall is a great time to begin your composting pile. You can put both garden and kitchen waste in the composter, but remember to add only vegetable matter. The composting process also can be speeded up by adding an accelerator or soil between each layer of compost.

It takes between eight months to a full year to develop good soil in a composter. Always remove soil from the bottom first -- it should be jet black in color and not have an unpleasant odor.

AAA Survey Shows:

Most Car Owners Not Properly Maintaining Tires, Belts, Hoses

The majority of respondents to a recent AAA survey are not taking proper care of their vehicle's tires, belts and hoses, leading to additional expenses down the road, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's survey shows that, on average, motorists are rotating their tires every 9,089 miles, 3,000 more than recommended. Many motorists (20 percent) aren't rotating their tires at all.

"Failure to properly rotate tires leads to reduced tire life, loss of traction and alignment problems," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "This not only affects your pocketbook, it affects your safety."

The survey shows similar results for vehicle belts and hoses. Motorists are checking the quality of their vehicle's belts and hoses every 7,930 miles.

"Belts and hoses should be checked monthly for cracking, fraying and missing pieces," Paul said. "Newer vehicles have one belt controlling several of the vehicle's vital functions. If this belt breaks, you're stranded."

Above all, AAA suggests, know your vehicle. October is Car Care Month, and AAA is using the month to help educate motorists on the maintenance needs of their vehicles.

To assist motorists, AAA nationwide in October is distributing materials designed to instruct motorists on how to do a self-check of some of their vehicle's vital components. AAA members can obtain materials at their local AAA office.

Don't Expect Engine Trouble From 'Y2K' Bug

With today's high-tech, computer-controlled automotive systems, it is logical to think that the "Y2K bug" could cause engine management computers to malfunction and wreak havoc on the entire automotive service industry. The good news is that it won't happen. Car companies such as General Motors, Toyota, BMW, and Saturn have systematically tested their vehicles to ensure there won't be any problems in the year 2000.

Virtually all of a vehicle's engine management systems, even most accessories, are operated by computers that don't care what date it is, says AAA. Even cars equipped with reminder systems - that signal the need for oil changes or other maintenance - operate based on calculations made from a combination of the driving demands the car is subjected to (as sensed by the engine computer) and elapsed time. The computers are not programmed to trigger any engine or maintenance functions based on that date.

In fact, the only date information in the computer is found in its own diagnostic circuits, where the computer's manufacture date itself is sometimes stored, along with other codes that are used only by the original manufacturer or a computer repair facility.

Of course, there must be the exception that proves the rule, and in this case, it is fund in the few models that use an electronic dash display to show the date. It's possible that some of these date displays may read incorrectly or refuse to accept "2000" when resetting the year. Consumers should contact their dealers to see if an update is available.

Accidents: What To Do

(NAPS)—In the time it takes you to read this short article, 30 people will have crashed their cars. The statistics are frightening, but the reasons for driving carefully and preparing in case of an accident are compelling. Here are some tips designed to save you time, money, frustration and possibly your life.

• Always carry your insurance card and vehicle registration in your car. Not only can it save you time, but it may save you the cost of a citation later down the road. Saved? Up to $250 and a court appearance.

• Review your insurance coverage. Will it pay for a rental car if yours has been banged up in an accident? For an average of one to two dollars a month, your insurance company will pay for your rental car while yours is being repaired. This coverage could pay off quickly because a damaged car is in the shop for an average of 12 days. Saved? Almost $400.

• Carry a tire iron, jack, spare tire and jumper cables — AND KNOW HOW TO USE THEM! Trying to use these during duress is difficult and can often be nearly impossible in the dark. Saved? A tow bill and at least an hour of time.

• Keep a medical card with you if you have allergies to any medicine, or you have a condition that requires special attention. Remember in an accident you may not be conscious to relay this information on to paramedics. Saved? Possibly your life.

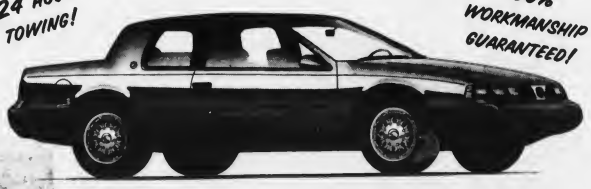
• Keep your vehicle regularly maintained and have safety checks done. The last thing you need is to be responsible for an accident that was preventable. Spared? An accident.

Remember to slow down in bad weather and drive cautiously, not overconfidently.

Check your insurance coverage. Will it pay for a rental car while yours is being repaired?

Replacing Refrigerants

(NAPS)—With chlorofluorocarbons, better known to most of us as CFCs, becoming refrigerant non grata because of the damage they cause to the earth's ozone layer, many motorists have been wondering what will replace CFCs in their car's air-conditioning system.



The answer is R134a, an ozone-friendly hydrofluorocarbon. The new refrigerant needed a different lubricant, however. Fortunately, Union Carbide developed polyalkylene glycol (PAG) lubricants that are compatible with R134a.

The air-conditioning system in all new cars uses R134a. Older cars, however, will have to be retrofitted when their old CFC refrigerant (R12) is no longer available. They simply go to a certified service shop where the car maker's retrofit procedures can be followed. This involves evacuating the R12, making the necessary repairs and any modifications, and then adding PAG lubricant and R134a to the system. These new PAG lubricants are being marketed for retrofits by Valvoline Car Care Products, a division of Ashland Inc., under the Pyroil trademark as RL-244 and RL-488.

Managing Common Problem Can Mean Better Night's Sleep

(NAPS)—Many men over 40 may experience the symptoms of an enlarged prostate, and not realize the cause. Such symptoms include:

- ✔ Frequent urination, especially getting up at night;
- ✔ Hesitant or weak stream; and
- ✔ Urinary urgency or dribbling.

"BPH"—benign prostate hyperplasia or enlarged prostate—results from a normal aging process that shifts the male testosterone/estrogen balance. It will affect 90 percent of men 85 years old and half of men 60 years old. BPH surgical procedures—300,000 per year—make it the second most common surgery performed, costing about $2 billion a year.

Despite the prevalence, only one-third of men over 40 in a national poll knew what "BPH" meant. Many men are uncomfortable talking about BPH because the prostate plays a role in both sex and urination. And yet, 70 percent of men reported feeling "concerned" about prostate health.

"Frequent nighttime urinations disturb an individual's sleep and often leave him feeling exhausted the next day," said Franklin C. Lowe, MD, Associate Director of Urology at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York City. "That's why men over 40 choose to take supplements for their prostate."

Prostatonin is the first and only clinically-tested supplement containing two proprietary extracts—African Plum tree bark (PY102") and nettle root (UR102")—which together inhibit two enzymes that help men maintain normal testosterone balance.

STEPS TO TAKE FOR IMPROVED PROSTATE HEALTH

- ✓ Exercise
- ✓ Reduce caffeine and alcohol consumption
- ✓ Monitor fluid intake
- ✓ Use a clinically tested and standardized supplement, such as Prostatonin
- ✓ See your doctor for routine exams

Not all supplements undergo scientific testing and manufacturing standardization; it is important to choose one that is doctor-recommended and/or clinically proven.

"Prostatonin is manufactured by Pharmaton Natural Health products—a name I already trust when I recommend their other supplements, including Ginkoba and Ginsana, to my patients," said Derrick DeSilva Jr., MD, president of the American Neutraceutical Association and a practicing internist. "I'm confident Pharmaton supplements are well-studied, safe and standardized."

Dietary Supplement Reduces Symptoms Of Osteoarthritis

Glucosamine sulfate, a dietary supplement sold over the counter in the United States and as a prescription drug in Europe, reduces the signs and symptoms of osteoarthritis of the knee, according to research to be presented at the American College of Rheumatology Annual Scientific Meeting Nov. 13-17 in Boston.

"For the first time, we have shown that a compound may be able at least to slow down the progression of osteoarthritis," said lead investigator Jean-Yves Reginster, MD PhD, of the University of Liege in Belgium.

Osteoarthritis, the most common form of arthritis, is the deterioration of cartilage that cushions bones in the joints. The disease affects 12 percent of the population, many of whom eventually undergo total joint replacement or become disabled.

The three-year study compared disease symptoms and average joint space widths, as measured by radiographs, between patients taking a 1500 mg daily dose of glucosamine sulfate and those taking a placebo. Joint space narrowed in patients on placebo but showed no further narrowing in patients on glucosamine sulfate. Symptoms worsened for patients on placebo and improved for those on glucosamine sulfate.

These results must be confirmed by other randomized trials, several of which are underway.

The American College of Rheumatology is the professional organization for rheumatologists and health professionals who share a dedication to healing, preventing disability and curing arthritis and related rheumatic and musculoskeletal diseases. Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

PLANTAR FIBROMATOSIS

Plantar fibromatosis is a benign disorder where nodules form on the plantar fascia, the long tissue running from the bottom of the heel to the ball of the foot. The condition usually occurs around the arch, but it may develop anywhere along the plantar fascia. Nodules begin as pain-free bumps under the skin, but they can become painful during exercise. Redness or swelling may also occur. Most likely a hereditary disorder, plantar fibromatosis is also associated with infection, gout, lead poisoning, some metabolic diseases, or trauma from high-impact activities like running. Because surgically removing the nodules results in high recurrence rates, many doctors now recommend removing the entire plantar fascia if the nodules cause significant daily discomfort.

If you would like more information on plantar fibromatosis, its probable causes and its effects on the feet, please feel free to give us a call at 617-472-3466. There are many solutions today that did not exist even a few years ago for a large number of foot, ankle, and leg conditions. I regularly attend seminars and keep current with continuing education on new techniques. For the most comfortable, efficient and effective treatment for your foot problems, turn to the foot care specialists at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy for friendly, professional help.

P.S. Seek medical advice for any type of growth in the foot, as it could indicate a more serious condition.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

How do I clean my aid?

First you must know that approximately 90% or more in-the-ear style aids needing repair are due to wax entering the receiver. Careful cleaning and office visits can save you $100.00-$150.00!

There is not much that we can do about the ear producing wax. The glands responsible for this in our ear canals have a mind of their own and sometimes produce much more wax than is needed for protection of the ear. Yes, protection. Ear wax is not DIRT! It's natures way to keep out infection, insects and more. Wax should be removed by medical personnel only. Keep out the swabs, bobby pins, pens etc. Your focus should be on wiping off the aid at night and every time you remove it from your ear! A careful visual examination under a bright light and magnifier is the best way to see what your doing. If you see wax, carefully remove it with the tools provided by your specialist, without pushing it in further. When in doubt bring it to a Hearing Instrument Specialist.

Quincy Ready To Strike Up A New Tune

Presidents Host Plymouth S. Friday

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team's season is like a song on continuous play. Just when you think the big plays are going to end, it starts right up again with one big play after another.

Unfortunately, it's the other teams that are making these plays.

Friday night it was Taunton's turn and it took advantage, knocking off Quincy (0-7, 0-3), 41-13, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"It's the same old repeating tune," said head coach Bob Noble. "We give up too many big plays, defensively."

Veterans Stadium has been a home away from home for Taunton this season. Last week it crushed North Quincy, 41-7. That's the Tigers 80, home teams 20. Ouch.

Quincy will host Plymouth South Friday night to cap off a four-week stretch at home.

Team speed has been the Achilles' heel all season. Taunton only reinforced it with seven plays of 35-plus yards, many on runs outside the tackles.

"Their team speed is excellent," Noble said. "We don't have good team speed. Teams with speed hurt us. It's been the bugaboo with us this year. Because of our lack of speed, teams get outside on us and it translates into big plays."

Quincy came out strong at the start of the game, forcing Taunton to go three-and-out on its first possession. And on its first offensive play, Quincy attacked Taunton but quarterback Dan Kelly overthrew wideout Andy Tam on a deep route. A holding penalty later stalled the drive and Taunton took over, scoring on four of its next five possessions.

Quarterback Jim Brown ran the option 68 yards to set up senior halfback John Carr's 15-yard touchdown run with 5:09 left in the first. Sam Aromin missed the PAT.

Taunton moved down the field on its next series with the help of a pass interference penalty. Carr, who has torched Quincy throughout his career, scored his second touchdown when he took an inside handoff, cutback to his left and raced 43 yards into the end zone. Derek Sanchez added the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead.

On its first series in the second quarter, Brown had a 37-yard run on the option and he capped off the drive with a 15-yard TD run, untouched.

Trailing 21-0, Quincy mounted a drive highlighted by senior back Russell Mullen's 34-yard run. But Quincy was forced into a third-and-25 situation and Taunton's Chris Clesluk picked off the pass and returned it 87-yards for a touchdown.

"The interception return for a touchdown was a back-breaker," Noble said. "The guy shouldn't run 87 yards down the sideline untouched."

Quincy didn't fold, however, as it got on the board before the half. Kelly began to heat up, hitting Tam for 27 yards and Chris Regens for 22 yards on a third-and-20 play. He then connected with Mullen for 18 yards on a Brett Favre-like shovel pass down to the 1-yard line. He punched it in one play later on a QB sneak with 28 seconds left.

The momentum carried over into the second half. Junior defensive back Mark Robertson intercepted Brown on a deep throw and Quincy capitalized.

On a play-action pass, Kelly threw a 28-yard TD strike to Tam with 3:56 left in the quarter. The PAT was blocked and Emerson Cunningham almost took it the other way, but Tim Pezzulo tracked him down to save two points.

Carr scored his third touchdown on the next series when he broke a tackle in the backfield and scampered 51 yards into the end zone to make it 34-13.

Kelly followed with an interception on the first play of the next series, but Quincy's Gregg Walsh got the ball back when he read Brown's short drop perfectly and stepped in front for the pick.

With the ball at the Taunton 33, a touchdown would have made it a 14-point game entering the fourth quarter. But Noble made a questionable call when opted for a halfback pass. Mullen's pass was intercepted and that pretty much sealed the game.

"In the third quarter we played well," Noble said. "We got back in the game, and then we turned the ball over twice on interceptions. That kind of took us out of it at that point.

"We didn't capitalize. That's my fault. We shouldn't have thrown the balls that were thrown. You have to try stuff to get back in the game. And that's my call. There's no one to blame for that but me."

In the fourth, Sanchez tacked on a 45-yard TD run to close out the scoring with 9:24 left in the game.

Despite the loss, Noble saw some improvements, noticeably in the running game.

"At times, on both sides of the ball, I thought we played really well," Noble said. "We ran the ball well in spurts. Russell Mullen had a couple of nice runs. Hopefully, that's something that's going to get better as the season goes on."

Red Raiders Pull Out Victory

North Quincy Seeks Third Win Friday At Silver Lake

By CHRIS POISSON

For a change, the North Quincy High School football team made the clutch plays.

The Red Raiders (2-4-1, 2-2) pulled out a tough 10-7 victory Friday night on the road against Plymouth South (3-3) in what was a defensive battle.

"We came up big when we had to," said head coach Peter Chrisom.

North Quincy will remain on the road when it takes on Silver Lake Regional Friday night.

"They're a good team," Chrisom said. "They're big, strong and come right at you. It was big for us to get this win before we go there. Hopefully, we can keep it up."

North Quincy led 3-0 at the half, but it could've been more. It had the ball at the Plymouth South 4 but senior fullback Brian Deptula wasn't able to cash in on three chances.

On fourth down the Red Raiders were whistled for a delay of fame and had to settle for a 22-yard field goal by senior Mike Reidy with 37 seconds left.

In the second half, Plymouth South senior Jake Andrews returned the opening kick off 77 yards for a touchdown and a 7-3 lead, which seemed like more than enough to pick up a win.

North Quincy had to punt on its next series, but the defense came up big when sophomore defensive back Pat Bregoli picked off his third pass of the night and returned it to Plymouth South's 13-yard line.

"That was a big part of the came," Chrisom said. "That was a big turnover."

On the first play, junior quarterback Max Repoff tossed a 13-yard strike to senior wideout Jody Bravo with 8:44 left in the third. Reidy kicked the PAT for the 10-7 lead.

"Pat Bregoli came up huge with three interceptions," Chrisom said. "Our secondary was great. [Senior defenseive tackle] Joe Donahue also played great with three deflections at the line of scrimmage."

Granite Drop 17-7 Decision

The Quincy Granite's inaugural ride through the New England Football League was finally derailed Saturday afternoon.

No. 2 Quincy (7-3) dropped a rematch with No. 1 Mass Havoc (9-1), 17-7, in the second round of the playoffs at Lynn Tech Stadium to close out what has been a successful season for the first-year club.

The Havoc will face Lowell Nor'easter Saturday night for the NEFL championship. The Havoc captured the crown in 1996 and 1997.

"It was a dog fight like it was suppose to be," said captain David Harris. "We had a couple of penalties that cost us late in the game. We shot ourselves in the foot. It was very frustrating."

One of them was when Quincy was called for an illegal man down the field, nullifying Liam Higgins' 40-yard pass to Bill MacDougall down into the red zone.

In the second quarter, Quincy was unable to crack the end zone from one foot out as the Havoc came up with a huge goal-line stand to preserve the lead.

"It was a tough game," Harris said. "Our offense was moving the ball down field, but those two plays changed the momentum."

Quincy jumped out to the early lead when Farouk Brown plunged it in from a few yards out for a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

But the Havoc returned the kickoff for a touchdown to tie the game at seven. In last week's game against the Boston Bandits, the special teams' unit gave up a 99-yard kickoff return late in the game as the Bandits tried to make a comeback.

Wideout Bunny Jefferson hauled in a touchdown pass with two defenders draped all over him for what turned out to be the game-winning catch in the second quarter.

The Havoc added a field goal in the third to make it 17-7.

The defense was once again strong. Linebackers Sean Halpin, Ryan Craig, Frank Calabro and Gary Rowdon played well, as well as defensive backs John Skiebekis and Bob Chiavaroli.

"The biggest thing was our defense," Harris said. "The linebackers and secondary came up big. They shut it down."

Despite the tough loss, Harris was pleased with how Quincy played throughout its first season.

"We had a great year," Harris said. "Of course, I was miserable after the game, but you have to take it. There's no whining. We played some good football this year. We accomplished more this year than some teams that have been around a long time. That's a plus.

"All the guys dedicated their time and that's how you make it work. I'm proud we had a great group of guys. They play for the love of the game."

Manets' TD, Conversion Ties Apaches

The Apaches and Manets battled to a 14-14 tie Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Earlier in the season, the Apaches edged the Manets, 6-0, in another hard fought game.

The Apaches opened the scoring late in the first quarter when Tim Watson passed to offensive lineman Kyle Carmody on a tackle eligible play. The Manets responded with an 18-yard touchdown run by Roger Palermo later in the quarter to tie the game at 6-6.

In the second, the Apaches faced third and nine at midfield and Watson threw a 40-yard pass to wideout Bill Cosgrove, who made a spectacular catch near the end zone. On the next play Watson plunged into the end zone on a QB sneak. Watson tossed a flair pass to Josh Hersey for the two-point conversion and a 14-6 lead.

At the end of the first half, the Manet offense was driving again, pushing the ball down to the Apaches' 4-yard line. But a tough goal-line stand by the Apaches turned away the threat as they held on to the lead at the half.

On their first possession of the second half, the Apaches fumbled and the Manets took over near midfield. Several plays later the Manets scored to cap a time-consuming drive and tied the game with the two-point conversion.

For the remainder of the game both defenses played tough as the teams couldn't reach the end zone.

Fury Open With 2-1 Thriller Over Framingham

The Quincy Fury opened their 1999-2000 season with a thrilling 2-1 victory against Framingham in recent Quincy Pee Wee B's action.

Stevie "Smiley" Maggio scored the first goal of the year with an assist from Mike MacPherson.

The Fury's defense was a great support to netminder Pat "The Toaster" Maloney, who had an exciting game.

Steve "The Speedster" Bythrow netted the game-winner with an assist from Pat "The Bull" Malone.

Quincy knocked off Dorchester, 4-1, with the help of Malone's hat trick. Bythrow and Kevin Shinnick picked up assists. The fourth goal was scored by James "Don't Call Me Jimmy" Sheehan with an assist from Matt Tobin.

Once again the defensive plays by Rose Devlin, MacPherson, Paul "Noodles" Noonan, Kevin French and Paul Fasoli gave Maloney the help he needed in the cage.

Against Needham, the Fury was on fire with a blazing 9-0 win. Tobin led the Fury with a hat trick and Maloney recorded his first shut out of the season.

Bobby Newcomb and Ed Laura each tallied a pair of goals, and Malone and MacPherson each netted one. It was the overall passing game that led the Fury to victory, as Laura, Maggio, Bythrow, Shinnick, Malone, Michael Arrafat and Fasoli each had assists.

Recreation Basketball Program Begins Monday

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces the Department will supervise a Men's Drop In Basketball Program at the Atlantic Middle School gymnasium on Monday evenings.

Quincy Ready To Strike Up A New Tune

Presidents Host Plymouth S. Friday

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team's season is like a song on continuous play. Just when you think the big plays are going to end, it starts right up again with one big play after another.

Unfortunately, it's the other teams that are making these plays.

Friday night it was Taunton's turn and it took advantage, knocking off Quincy (0-7, 0-3), 41-13, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"It's the same old repeating tune," said head coach Bob Noble. "We give up too many big plays, defensively."

Veterans Stadium has been a home away from home for Taunton this season. Last week it crushed North Quincy, 41-7. That's the Tigers 80, home teams 20. Ouch.

Quincy will host Plymouth South Friday night to cap off a four-week stretch at home.

Team speed has been the Achilles' heel all season. Taunton only reinforced it with seven plays of 35-plus yards, many on runs outside the tackles.

"Their team speed is excellent," Noble said. "We don't have good team speed. Teams with speed hurt us. It's been the bugaboo with us this year. Because of our lack of speed, teams get outside on us and it translates into big plays."

Quincy came out strong at the start of the game, forcing Taunton to go three-and-out on its first possession. And on its first offensive play, Quincy attacked Taunton but quarterback Dan Kelly overthrew wide-out Andy Tam on a deep route. A holding penalty later stalled the drive and Taunton took over, scoring on four of its next five possessions.

Quarterback Jim Brown ran the option 68 yards to set up senior halfback John Carr's 15-yard touchdown run with 5:09 left in the first. Sam Aromin missed the PAT.

Taunton moved down the field on its next series with the help of a pass interference penalty. Carr, who has torched Quincy throughout his career, scored his second touchdown when he took an inside handoff, cutback to his left and raced 43 yards into the end zone. Derek Sanchez added the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead.

On its first series in the second quarter, Brown had a 37-yard run on the option and he capped off the drive with a 15-yard TD run, untouched.

Trailing 21-0, Quincy mounted a drive highlighted by senior back Russell Mullen's 34-yard run. But Quincy was forced into a third-and-25 situation and Taunton's Chris Clesluk picked off the pass and returned it 87-yards for a touchdown.

"The interception return for a touchdown was a back-breaker," Noble said. "The guy shouldn't run 87 yards down the sideline untouched."

Quincy didn't fold, however, as it got on the board before the half. Kelly began to heat up, hitting Tam for 27 yards and Chris Regens for 22 yards on a third-and-20 play. He then connected with Mullen for 18 yards on a Brett Favre-like shovel pass down to the 1-yard line. He punched it in one play later on a QB sneak with 28 seconds left.

The momentum carried over into the second half. Junior defensive back Mark Robertson intercepted Brown on a deep throw and Quincy capitalized.

On a play-action pass, Kelly threw a 28-yard TD strike to Tam with 3:56 left in the quarter. The PAT was blocked and Emerson Cunningham almost took it the other way, but Tim Pezzulo tracked him down to save two points.

Carr scored his third touchdown on the next series when he broke a tackle in the backfield and scampered 51 yards into the end zone to make it 34-13.

Kelly followed with an interception on the first play of the next series, but Quincy's Gregg Walsh got the ball back when he read Brown's short drop perfectly and stepped in front for the pick.

With the ball at the Taunton 33, a touchdown would have made it a 14-point game entering the fourth quarter. But Noble made a questionable call when opted for a halfback pass. Mullen's pass was intercepted and that pretty much sealed the game.

"In the third quarter we played well," Noble said. "We got back in the game, and then we turned the ball over twice on interceptions. That kind of took us out of it at that point.

"We didn't capitalize. That's my fault. We shouldn't have thrown the balls that were thrown. You have to try stuff to get back in the game. And that's my call. There's no one to blame for that but me."

In the fourth, Sanchez tacked on a 45-yard TD run to close out the scoring with 9:24 left in the game.

Despite the loss, Noble saw some improvements, noticeably in the running game.

"At times, on both sides of the ball, I thought we played really well," Noble said. "We ran the ball well in spurts. Russell Mullen had a couple of nice runs. Hopefully, that's something that's going to get better as the season goes on."

Red Raiders Pull Out Victory

North Quincy Seeks Third Win Friday At Silver Lake

By CHRIS POISSON

For a change, the North Quincy High School football team made the clutch plays.

The Red Raiders (2-4-1, 2-2) pulled out a tough 10-7 victory Friday night on the road against Plymouth South (3-3) in what was a defensive battle.

"We came up big when we had to," said head coach Peter Chrisom.

North Quincy will remain on the road when it takes on Silver Lake Regional Friday night.

"They're a good team," Chrisom said. "They're big, strong and come right at you. It was big for us to get this win before we go there. Hopefully, we can keep it up."

North Quincy led 3-0 at the half, but it could've been more. It had the ball at the Plymouth South 4 but senior fullback Brian Deptula wasn't able to cash in on three chances.

On fourth down the Red Raiders were whistled for a delay of fame and had to settle for a 22-yard field goal by senior Mike Reidy with 37 seconds left.

In the second half, Plymouth South senior Jake Andrews returned the opening kick off 77 yards for a touchdown and a 7-3 lead, which seemed like more than enough to pick up a win.

North Quincy had to punt on its next series, but the defense came up big when sophomore defensive back Pat Bregoli picked off his third pass of the night and returned it to Plymouth South's 13-yard line.

"That was a big part of the came," Chrisom said. "That was a big turnover."

On the first play, junior quarterback Max Repoff tossed a 13-yard strike to senior wideout Jody Bravo with 8:44 left in the third. Reidy kicked the PAT for the 10-7 lead.

"Pat Bregoli came up huge with three interceptions," Chrisom said. "Our secondary was great. [Senior defenseive tackle] Joe Donahue also played great with three deflections at the line of scrimmage."

Granite Drop 17-7 Decision

The Quincy Granite's inaugural ride through the New England Football League was finally derailed Saturday afternoon.

No. 2 Quincy (7-3) dropped a rematch with No. 1 Mass Havoc (9-1), 17-7, in the second round of the playoffs at Lynn Tech Stadium to close out what has been a successful season for the first-year club.

The Havoc will face Lowell Nor'easter Saturday night for the NEFL championship. The Havoc captured the crown in 1996 and 1997.

"It was a dog fight like it was suppose to be," said captain David Harris. "We had a couple of penalties that cost us late in the game. We shot ourselves in the foot. It was very frustrating."

One of them was when Quincy was called for an illegal man down the field, nullifying Liam Higgins' 40-yard pass to Bill MacDougall down into the red zone.

In the second quarter, Quincy was unable to crack the end zone from one foot out as the Havoc came up with a huge goal-line stand to preserve the lead.

"It was a tough game," Harris said. "Our offense was moving the ball down field, but those two plays changed the momentum."

Quincy jumped out to the early lead when Farouk Brown plunged it in from a few yards out for a 7-0 lead in the first quarter.

But the Havoc returned the kickoff for a touchdown to tie the game at seven. In last week's game against the Boston Bandits, the special teams' unit gave up a 99-yard kickoff return late in the game as the Bandits tried to make a comeback.

Wideout Bunny Jefferson hauled in a touchdown pass with two defenders draped all over him for what turned out to be the game-winning catch in the second quarter.

The Havoc added a field goal in the third to make it 17-7.

The defense was once again strong. Linebackers Sean Halpin, Ryan Craig, Frank Calabro and Gary Rowdon played well, as well as defensive backs John Skiebekis and Bob Chiavaroli.

"The biggest thing was our defense," Harris said. "The linebackers and secondary came up big. They shut it down."

Despite the tough loss, Harris was pleased with how Quincy played throughout its first season.

"We had a great year," Harris said. "Of course, I was miserable after the game, but you have to take it. There's no whining. We played some good football this year. We accomplished more this year than some teams that have been around a long time. That's a plus.

"All the guys dedicated their time and that's how you make it work. I'm proud we had a great group of guys. They play for the love of the game."

Manets' TD, Conversion Ties Apaches

The Apaches and Manets battled to a 14-14 tie Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Earlier in the season, the Apaches edged the Manets, 6-0, in another hard fought game.

The Apaches opened the scoring late in the first quarter when Tim Watson passed to offensive lineman Kyle Carmody on a tackle eligible play. The Manets responded with an 18-yard touchdown run by Roger Palermo later in the quarter to tie the game at 6-6.

In the second, the Apaches faced third and nine at midfield and Watson threw a 40-yard pass to wideout Bill Cosgrove, who made a spectacular catch near the end zone. On the next play Watson plunged into the end zone on a QB sneak. Watson tossed a flair pass to Josh Hersey for the two-point conversion and a 14-6 lead.

At the end of the first half, the Manet offense was driving again, pushing the ball down to the Apaches' 4-yard line. But a tough goal-line stand by the Apaches turned away the threat as they held on to the lead at the half.

On their first possession of the second half, the Apaches fumbled and the Manets took over near midfield. Several plays later the Manets scored to cap a time-consuming drive and tied the game with the two-point conversion.

For the remainder of the game both defenses played tough as the teams couldn't reach the end zone.

Fury Open With 2-1 Thriller Over Framingham

The Quincy Fury opened their 1999-2000 season with a thrilling 2-1 victory against Framingham in recent Quincy Pee Wee B's action.

Stevie "Smiley" Maggio scored the first goal of the year with an assist from Mike MacPherson.

The Fury's defense was a great support to netminder Pat "The Toaster" Maloney, who had an exciting game.

Steve "The Speedster" Bythrow netted the game-winner with an assist from Pat "The Bull" Malone.

Quincy knocked off Dorchester, 4-1, with the help of Malone's hat trick. Bythrow and Kevin Shinnick picked up assists. The fourth goal was scored by James "Don't Call Me Jimmy" Sheehan with an assist from Matt Tobin.

Once again the defensive plays by Rose Devlin, MacPherson, Paul "Noodles" Noonan, Kevin French and Paul Fasoli gave Maloney the help he needed in the cage.

Against Needham, the Fury was on fire with a blazing 9-0 win. Tobin led the Fury with a hat trick and Maloney recorded his first shut out of the season.

Bobby Newcomb and Ed Laura each tallied a pair of goals, and Malone and MacPherson each netted one. It was the overall passing game that led the Fury to victory, as Laura, Maggio, Bythrow, Shinnick, Malone, Michael Arrafat and Fasoli each had assists.

A Thought For The Week

America is the "Land of the Free;" "Home of the Brave;" America is "God's Country" with its bountiful gifts from the gardens, with its poetic scenery, with its radiant warmth in summer and its arctic temperatures in winter. God created the earth and all of mankind reaps its benefits and its beauty. Being Americans, we reap more of the benefits than any other people on earth. Being Americans, we have and give more than any other. Being Americans, we have the freedom to go where we wish, say what we think and worship where we want . . .

There are many occasions during the year which occupy our time and demand a great deal of attention; one of those times is nearly upon us - ELECTION DAY - a day in which we can take a few precious moments from our daily routine and exercise one of our FREEDOMS - THE FREEDOM TO VOTE - Each and every American can and should take the few moments to PROTECT AND ASSURE our freedoms will remain intact for our children and for their children.

REMEMBER POLITICAL OPINIONS ARE ONLY OPINIONS -UNLESS YOU VOTE.

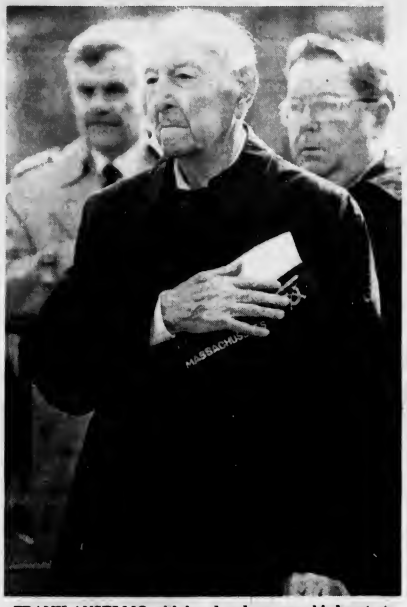
schools and college. He was a generous benefactor to Quincy College, donating over $100,000. The library at the college was dedicated in his name in 1989.

When he was elected to his fifth term on the School Committee, Anselmo received a letter of congratulations from President Ronald Reagan in 1984.

Anselmo always wanted to become vice-chairman of the School Committee, an honor that escaped him. He came close in 1976 but lost, claiming colleagues who had promised to vote for him didn't. He had a word for it: "doublecross."

In 1998, shortly after his 100th birthday, the School Committee made him Honorary Vice-Chairman.

Anselmo was still an active and outspoken member of the School Committee at age 93 and believed at that time to be the oldest elective office holder in the state and maybe the country.



After leaving the School Committee in 1991, he kept up with what was going on in Quincy and in the country.

He was no Bill Clinton fan.

"A clear conscience is what that guy in Washington doesn't have," he said, during the Monica Lewinsky hi-jinks.

Anselmo celebrated his 100th birthday last year at a three-shift buffet party at 1000 Southern Artery where he lived. He generously hosted it himself and invited all the residents of that facility to attend. City officials were there, too.

"Well," he shrugged, "I can't take it with me."

FRANK ANSELMO with hand and cap over his heart at Veterans Day ceremony in 1997.
(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth)

At that time he told The Sun:

"I feel like a kid of 70. No pains, no aches. No crutches. No wheelchair."

He had his own version of the fountain of youth: "No smoking. No booze. Watch what you eat. Get a little exercise."

He said he once tried one of his father's stogies when he was a kid, got a little dizzy from it and never had a cigar or cigarette after that.

He noted that his father, who liked to smoke, died at age 69.

Anselmo said he didn't drink but did allow himself "a glass of wine now and then." He also took "three vitamin pills a day and a daily shot of cod liver oil."

He got exercise, he said, by walking from his apartment in one of the wings at 1000 Southern Artery to the dining room.

But the one thing that really kept him young, he said was: "I have a clear conscience."

Unfortunately, Anselmo fell while playing pool in the recreation room area and fractured his hip just before his 101st birthday. It was downhill for him from that point on.

Frank Anselmo was a colorful figure in veterans circles and as a school committeeman.

He will be missed at this year's Veterans Day parade and ceremonies and those to come.

He was one of a kind -- one to be remembered.

Community Leaders And Friends Remember

By CRAIG SALTERS

Quincy community leaders remembered Frank Anselmo, who died Saturday at the age of 101.

Mayor James Sheets called Anselmo "irreplaceable" while former mayor and current Councillor Frank McCauley, who served 14 years with Anselmo on the School Committee, said, "As mayor and chairman, I felt his wrath more than once, but he was a man who fought for what he believed in."

Supt. Eugene Creedon remembers Anselmo as a tireless proponent of clean living and American values, and someone with a genuine love and faith in public education.

"He believed in neighborhood schools," Creedon recalled. "He'd say that parents should be able to see the chimneys on their child's school. He was most proud that, during all his years on the School Committee, he never once voted for a school closing. On principle, he just couldn't do it."

Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College, called Anselmo "an incredibly generous and significant supporter of the college" and noted the $100,000 donation for the college's library, dedicated the Anselmo library in 1989. "He was a role model to the students, especially the adult students who connected with him because his whole life was a struggle, yet he accomplished so much."

Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of Veterans Services in Quincy, knew Anselmo through veterans activities and joked that Anselmo became state commander of WWI Veterans when "he was just a kid" at 94.

Bradley said that Anselmo took great pride in his children and grandchildren, the visits of friends at the 1000 Southern Artery Senior Center where he lived, and taking part in Veterans and Memorial Day parades with the Gold Star Mothers.

Bradley said that Anselmo attended his last American Legion State Convention at the age of 99 and was still speaking his mind.

"He was compassionate," Bradley recalled. "He had a keen interest in education. He would travel to the schools and tell kids that, without an education, you're not going to get very far."

One such school was the Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School, where 5th grade teacher Steve Cantelli said that Anselmo attended two of their Veterans Day assemblies and was honored at his 99th and 100th birthdays.

Another birthday celebration was slated for Sept. 22 of this year, but Anselmo hurt his hip playing pool and could not attend. His death, said Cantelli, has affected the fifth graders who were anxiously awaiting his return.

After Anselmo's funeral Mass at St. Joseph's Church Thursday, the Lincoln-Hancock fifth graders will release helium balloons as the procession passes the school. Cantelli, who said the idea was Bradley's, called it "a very special tribute" which would help the children grieve and also take part in the process.

Cantelli said that Anselmo had one theme that he kept hammering home to the children: Be good to yourself. Have confidence in yourself and you won't turn to drugs or alcohol. Your mind and body and spirit work together. Nurture those three and you'll be successful.

"He was a very kindly man, very gentle," Cantelli said. "He was crazy about the kids. His eyes just lit up when he saw them."

John "Jake" Comer, past national commander of the American Legion, said that Anselmo represented "a lost breed" of men who acted upon their convictions. "If he cared about it, he did it. He was a man of means but he was never afraid to express himself for causes he believed in," Comer said.

Comer said that one issue which incensed Anselmo was flag burning, and that on two separate occasions Anselmo handed Comer a check for $5,000 at the American Legion state conventions. "For someone not born in this country, he had the greatest love of flag and country as any man I've known," said Comer.

"He will be sorely missed," said Charles Sweeny, a wounded World War II veteran himself and an associate of Anselmo's on the School Committee. "He did not play politics whatsoever. He just did what was best for schoolchildren. He never had a desire for any other public office other than school committee. He had a lifelong attitude to support young people; that's what drove him."

Sweeny remembers a man self-taught in English with a "fantastic sense of humor" who spoke little of his wartime experiences but was proudest of his expert marksmanship and the fact that he trained Army riflemen during World War II. "He just had a heart as big as a whale," Sweeny added.

Paul Baharian, executive director of 1000 Southern Artery Senior Center, spoke of Anselmo's love of singing, his passion for reading The Wall Street Journal and making investments, and his always being the biggest buyer at the center's annual fair. "He often bought things merely to give them back to the staff. He was very thoughtful and considerate," said Baharian.

At Anselmo's wake Steve Cantelli presented a floral arrangement to the Anselmo family with a card that read "with love and gratitude from all the Lincoln Hancock kids past and present."

Cantelli also brought the family letters written from his fifth-grade students.

In one letter, a student assures the Anselmo family that "Mr. Anselmo's spirit, like our balloons, will soar high."

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You could be a bit bewildered by the dreams that sneak into the depths of your mind. The figures are ambiguous, but you get the feeling that you know to whom they are alluding.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Much to your amazement, a situation you have worried about actually feels quite informal. You are able to relax, take the surprises as they come and enjoy yourself immensely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The importance of your genealogy drives itself into the front of your mind. Your links with the people and places of your past have the ability to heavily influence your future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your masculine side exerts itself but not enough so that it creates an imbalance. In fact, you discover that it can be a positive contributor to your mix as you figure out your best recipe.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Get up and set out to start something new. Embarking on an adventure allows you to discover all sorts of amazing things. Something on a smaller scale can have just as much of an impact.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Think about the bonds that exist between you and those whom you hold dear. The ties that bind are strong, and it's up to you to determine whether they are a struggle or a triumph.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Everyone you encounter seems to have a little advice about your life. You can either take that to mean they care or that they are a bunch of busybodies. The reality is probably somewhere in the middle.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A stranger has the ability to influence your way of thinking by merely listening to a few of your stories. You learn a new technique that allows you to better understand the actions people take.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Communicating your true feelings opens up a bridge that is usually closed to traffic. Be sure that you and all involved are aware of the limits that exist for passage.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You serve as the ambassador to people who are in the process of seeking advice. Heed the words they give you in return in order to become even wiser.

AQUARIUS (January 20 February 18) You like the methodical way in which you usually partake in actions, but there is an influence that is acting to rush our every move. Instead of fighting it, see what speed develops.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The vigor with which you pursue life leaves others cheering you on from the sidelines. You have the ability to appeal to both the box seats and the bleacher sections.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Youth is a time that you have been able to bring forward with you into the future. People admire your ability to apply your imagination and creativity to almost any situation. The scrapbook of memories that exists in your mind acts as your strength and holds a special place in your soul.

The grades are based on the number of poor water quality postings at each of four locations along the beach. If there are two or more postings on the same day people are advised not to swim.

A blue flag indicates that the water is clean enough for swimming; a red flag indicates unsafe fecal coliform levels.

Durkin attributed the positive results to public works projects completed by the City of Quincy and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority in the last three years. He added that the city has committed another $1.2 million in improvements to sewer lines in Wollaston. That project should be completed in the spring.

While the beach was closed for swimming a total of 22 times during the summer of 1998, it was closed only seven days in 1999 due to poor water quality.

The Wollaston Beach Task Force, Durkin said, will continue to meet on a quarterly basis to monitor progress on task force recommendations.

Wollaston Beach water quality daily testing from July 1 to Sept. 5 revealed:

- 91 percent of days Rice Road was safe for swimming.
- 91 percent of days Milton Road was safe for swimming.
- 89 percent of the time (based on number of days) parts of Wollaston Beach were open for swimming.
- 71 percent of the time (based on number of days) all of Wollaston Beach was open for swimming.
- 77 percent fewer postings compared to last year.

Results also showed there is room for improvement.

- Only 37 percent of days Channing Street was safe for swimming.
- Only 67 percent of days Sachem Street was safe for swimming.
- 67 percent of total samples were safe.
- 23 percent of total samples were unsafe.

Weekly testing (spring and fall of 1999) of nine weekly sampling rounds (May 27, June 3, 10, 17, 24, and 29 and Sept. 9 and 23) at all four locations revealed only one sample exceeding swimming standards for the 36 samples taken.

Quincy elected two new ward councillors and a new school committeeman Tuesday and decided to keep its three incumbent at-large councillors.

The new faces belong to:

• Gregory Hanley, 33, who defeated Russell C. Patten, III, 26, 2,024 to 1,606 for the open Ward 1 seat.

• Joseph J. Newton, 32, who topped James N. Stamos, 49, 1,997 to 1,068 for the vacant Ward 6 council seat.

• Atty. William Phelan, 41, not only took the empty school committee seat but finished an impressive second in the five-candidate field in his political debut.

City Council President Peter Kolson, 53, who gave up his Ward 1 seat he had held for 10 years to run at-large, ran far behind the three incumbents, Paul Harold, 51, Timothy Cahill, 40, and Francis McCauley, 69, and just a little ahead of newcomer Joseph G. Finn, 43.

Mayor James Sheets, 64, was elected to an historic sixth term trouncing Robert J. Boussy, 44, with nearly 85 percent of the vote, 14,487 to 2,476.

JAMES SHEETS
Mayor

Ward 3 and Ward 5 incumbents Patrick McDermott, 29, and Stephen J. Durkin, 43, staved off challenges to win re-election.

McDermott turned back John C. Cain, Jr., 54, by a vote of 1,952 to 1,155. Durkin swept by Arline Goodman, 59, 2,138 to 657.

Harold, Cahill and McCauley finished in the same order as they did two years ago with Harold again taking the top spot with 11,564 votes. Cahill was second with 10,119 and McCauley third with 8,398.

Kolson, trying to crack through three incumbents was fourth with 6,254 votes-2,144 behind McCauley and only 79 votes ahead of Finn's 6,175. Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, 69, was sixth with 1,491.

Finn's strong showing was seen as ruining Kolson's chances of unseating one of the three incumbents. And Finn's strength was also seen as the birth of a potential new political star.

Incumbent Christine Cedrone, 29, led the school committee field with a strong vote of 11,154.

Phelan, making his first run for office, took the second spot with 9,808 and

Eileen Feeney To Retire As NQHS Principal Dec. 31

By CRAIG SALTERS

Eileen Feeney will retire Dec. 31 as principal of North Quincy High School.

Mrs. Feeney, the first woman high school principal in the city's history, succeeded Peter Chrisom on his retirement in June of 1998.

Fifteen applicants -- two from within the Quincy school system -- are seeking the appointment as new principal.

Feeney, who is 67, informed Superintendent Eugene Creedon by letter that she wanted to retire and spend more time with her family and her husband Joseph, who has been retired for several years. Feeney said she intended to travel and spend time in Florida.

EILEEN FEENEY

"She's put in a full career at North Quincy High School and she feels it's time to move on," said Creedon. "I knew when I appointed Eileen that her intention was only to serve a year or two."

Creedon and Thomas Walsh, QPS director of personnel, will update the Keynote Speaker State Veteran's Services Commissioner

Veterans Day Parade, Ceremonies On Sunday

Thomas G. Kelley, Massachusetts Commissioner of Veterans Services and a Vietnam War Congressional Medal of Honor recipient, will be the keynote speaker at Quincy's Veterans Day observance Sunday.

The parade, with a new starting point at Quincy Ave. and Scammel St., will step off at 10:30 a.m. and proceed to the Adams Academy, Hancock, and Dimmock and Adams Sts., where Kelley will speak.

The observance is sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council representing all of the Quincy veterans organizations.

The council will also hold ceremonies Thursday, Nov. 11 at 11 a.m. at the Adams Academy Doughboy statue in commemoration of the 81st anniversary of the signing of the World War 1 Armistice on Nov. 11, 1918 at 11 a.m.

The parade's starting point this year was changed because of it being held on a Sunday. It traditionally has started at School and Hancock Sts., forming in the parking lot at St. John's Church. But because of Sunday Masses, the parking lot is not available this year.

Kelley received the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Purple Heart as a Navy lieutenant for gallantry in June, 1969 while serving as commander of an assault craft division in the Ong Muong Canal in Kien Hoa Province in Vietnam.

Under fire, Kelley suffered serious head wounds from the shrapnel, an exploding enemy shell which hurled him to the deck of his craft. Unable to move or speak clearly into the radio, he was able to relay his commands to the other boats through one of his men until the enemy attack silenced, and they were able to move to safety.

THOMAS KELLEY

Kelley, born and raised in Boston, is a 1960 graduate of the College of Holy Cross. After entering Navy Officer Candidate School, he spent 30 years as Surface Warfare Officer on destroyers and staff duty in Washington, Japan and Korea.

He retired from the Navy in 1990, worked for the Defense Department as a civilian, moved back to Boston and was appointed Commissioner of Veterans Services in April of this year.

Other speakers will be Mayor James Sheets, Veterans Council Commander Lawrence Norton, Henry Bradley, Director of Veterans Services; City Council President Peter Kolson, and Thomas Stansbury, parade chairman.

Irving Isaacson, past commander Veterans Council and the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post and the Cavanaugh DAV Chapter, will be the master of ceremonies.

Joseph Dennehy, Veterans Council and Cavanaugh Chapter chaplain will give the invocation and benediction. Edward Boland, assistant Veterans council chaplain will offer a prayer.

Commander Norton and Gold Star Mothers will place flowers in front of the Doughboy statue at Adams Academy.

Chief of Staff will be Paul W. O'Neill, past commander of the Veterans Council. Officer of the Day will be David Minkofsky of the Jewish War Veterans Post.

Aides to the Commander are Leif Thornton, Sr., senior vice commander Veterans Council and Joseph Brooker, Jr., vice commander of the council.

The parade formation will include: Quincy Police Color Guard, Quincy Veterans Council Color Guard, Quincy High School ROTC, Past Commanders Veterans Council, Waltham American Legion Band, Boston City Band, Concerts In The Park Band, North Quincy High School and North Quincy ROTC bands, Quincy National Guard, Brockton National Guard.

The staff includes:

Leif Thornton, commander George Bryan VFW Post; David Brown, commander North Quincy Post; Thomas Bonfanti, commander Cyril Morrisette Legion Post; Eugene Prorok, commander Quincy legion Post; Richard Wahl, commander Houghs Neck Legion Post; Michael McCauley, commander Robert Nickerson Legion Post; Dr. Bertrand Shaffer, commander Wollaston Legion and Jewish War Veterans Posts: Robert LaFleur, commander Cavanaugh DAV Chapter; Philip Singer, commander Memorial AMVETS Post; Leo Cardarelli, commandant William Caddy Marine Corps. Detachment; Joseph Broker, president Quincy Chapter VCVCAF and Vincent Doland, president Second Marine Division Association; Robert Nickerson Legion Post, George Bryan VFW Post, Cyril Morrisette Legion Post and Auxiliary, North Quincy VFW Post, Quincy Legion Post, Wollaston Legion Post, Quincy Memorial Post, Second Marine Division, Houghs Neck Legion Post and Auxiliary, Jewish War Veterans Post, Cavanaugh Chapter DAV and Auxiliary, Vietnam Combat Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter, William R. Caddy Marine Detachment, World War 1 Veterans, Gold Star Mothers Day, Boy Scouts and Girls Scouts.

In case of inclement weather, the exercise will be held in the Center for Technical Education gym.

Frederick P. Murphy Memorial To Be Re-dedicated Nov. 11

The Quincy Veterans Council will re-dedicate the Frederick P. Murphy Memorial Monument Thursday, Nov. 11 at 11:30 a.m.

The monument at Sea St. and Narragansett Rd., Merrymount honors Murphy, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for bravery in World War II.

Murphy, a private first class serving with the Army medical corps was killed in action in Germany March 18, 1945. Though twice wounded he continued to make his way to other wounded soldiers to treat them when he was killed by a land mine.

The monument, originally dedicated Sept. 13, 1964, has been newly landscaped by the Park Department and has a new flag pole donated by City Councillor Paul Harold.

Raymondi Meeting Tonight On Twin Rivers Expansion

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi will conduct a community meeting on proposed modernizations by Twin Rivers Technologies.

The meeting will take place tonight (Thursday) at The Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Road, Quincy. Residents will discuss the planned expansion in manufacturing capacity for Twin Rivers Technologies, 780 Washington St.

The issue goes before the city council Nov. 8.

Raymondi has asked all principals, including Twin Rivers President James Ricci, to attend the meeting and answer any questions or concerns residents might have.

Twin Rivers, worldwide producers and distributors of fatty acids, has plans to invest $77 million at the Fore River site over a ten-year period.

Over $65 million is scheduled to be spent in the next three years.

Some money will go towards building a 4,000 square foot garage on an existing foundation within the plant, but most will be spent on new machinery and equipment.

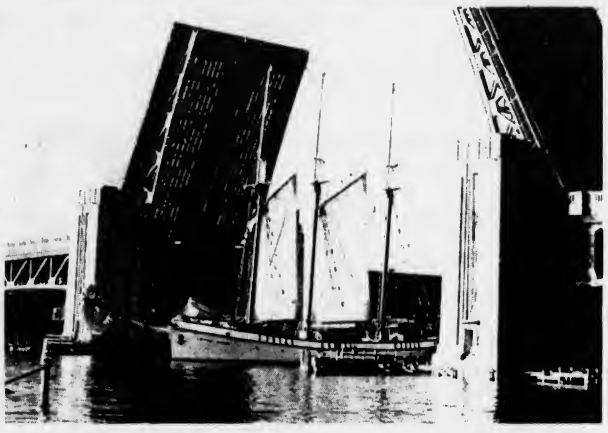
In a letter to his constituents Raymondi detailed four key issues to be addressed at the meeting: the application of Twin Rivers to be designated a new "Economic Opportunity Area" (EOA) by the Massachusetts Economic Development Incentive Program; Twin Rivers' Certified Project Application; the Tax Increment Financing Plan between the City of Quincy and Twin Rivers; and the proposed Tax Increment Financing Agreement.

Councillor Raymondi confirmed that another likely neighborhood concern would be the safety of the plant. Twin Rivers has had several fires and industrial accidents in the past year, the most serious being the death of an employee, Joseph Conti, by fire in March.

Essentially, said Raymondi, Twin Rivers is seeking a 5% investment tax credit from the state and local property tax relief in order to proceed with its capital investments. The company hopes to increase its line of products from 44 to 50, thereby staying competitive both nationally and internationally.

Raymondi supports the investment by Twin Rivers and what it will do for Quincy Point.

"Twin Rivers is making a solid commitment to the Quincy Point community," Raymondi said. "This investment will add 25 permanent, full-time, highly skilled manufacturing jobs to the area. It's good for Quincy and it's good for the South Shore."



According to Raymondi, since the majority of the money would be spent within the footprint of the Twin Rivers plant itself, there should be minimal neighborhood impact. More important to Raymondi, however, is the increased employment and the fact that Twin Rivers is deepening its roots in the area, modernizing its plant and adding to Quincy's tax base. "And we don't have to look at a vacant refinery plant," he added.

Paul Angelico, senior vice president of Twin Rivers, called the modernizations vital to keeping pace with Twin Rivers' competitors, some of whom can cut costs because they're located much closer to the supply of raw materials. The tax relief, especially the state's investment tax credit, allows Twin Rivers to make those modernizations, Angelico said.

"This project enhances the neighborhood with new jobs. It has zero negative impact," Angelico said. "Quincy is a great location for us and we have excellent relations with the people, the businesses, and local leaders. Our objective is to continue to be a good corporate neighbor."

Twin Rivers purchased the Washington St. site in 1994, a year after Procter & Gamble shut down operations there as part of its global restructuring. The three main components of the plant are: a 500,000 square foot building; a 26 million barrel tank farm; and a natural-oil refinery. Currently, the company employs 77 full-time and 2 part-time workers.

The Twin Rivers issue is scheduled for discussion at the Nov. 8 city council meeting. Although Raymondi urges residents to attend both meetings, he emphasizes that the the community meeting is the most proper and effective forum for a public debate by residents.

The Springboard To Mayor's Office

The city election is over but there's a little matter of importance still hanging.

The city council presidency.

This could be the most opportune time in years to be the council president considering the fact Mayor James Sheets could decide to hang up the gloves after completing the historic sixth term he was elected to on Tuesday.

The council presidency has long been considered the springboard to the mayor's office.

There has already been some behind the scene campaigning on for the prized gavel with three names coming up as the strong contenders: Tim Cahill, Paul Harold and Dan Raymondi.

RAYMONDI

Five votes are needed. With the election only Tuesday and the results uncertain until the votes were all tallied, none of the three could have the five votes wrapped up.

But you can be sure they were working on it Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

The council president, next to the mayor, is the most powerful elected official under the city's Plan A charter.

He not only presides over the council meetings, but appoints the council committees and chairmen, and serves as acting mayor in the absence or illness of the mayor.

And, as council president, he's in a position to find more reasons to be quoted on issues than his colleagues.

The springboard to the mayor's office? Yes, but not always. And sometime's its a delayed spring.

Among council presidents who became mayor were Joseph Whiton, Charles Ross, Thomas Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets.

But of those only two went directly from the council presidency to the mayor's office: Whiton in 1917 and Tobin in 1977.

McIntyre and LaRaia lost bids for the mayor's office running as council presidents. McIntyre was defeated by incumbent Della Chiesa in 1959 but won in 1965 when Della Chiesa retired. And the man he defeated was LaRaia who was council president at the time.

LaRaia came back to claim the mayor's office in 1975 by defeating incumbent Walter Hannon by just 483 votes. But two years later lost to Tobin who was running as the council president.

You don't have to have been a council president to become mayor. Hannon and Frank McCauley, who served four terms, are examples.

And there have been a number of council presidents who never went on to become mayor.

But the council presidency is still considered a big stepping stone to the mayor's office.

The new council president, the first of the new century and new millennium, will be limited to two one-year terms.

The two-year limit was originally set by the council after Tobin served eight years. It later got changed which allowed Peter Kolson to serve four years.

But now it is back to two years.

But those two years coming up--2000 and 2001--could be opportunity knocking for a council president who wants to be mayor.

But he may still have Jim Sheets to contend with.

AT THE DINNER celebrating his 90th birthday and Beth Israel Synagogue's 80th anniversary, Rabbi Jacob Mann had praise for the mayors he has known since coming to Quincy in 1942.

MANN

Among them was Joseph Whiton who as mayor helped dedicate Beth Israel in 1918 and as former mayor welcomed Mann to Quincy.

He had warm words for Mayor Sheets and Arthur Tobin who were both at the dinner.

And a special tribute to the late James McIntyre: "How can I forget the unforgettable Jimmy McIntyre. He was so devoted, so powerful. . . he was so good they wanted him up there. They took him away (his early death) before we could have him many years."

THERE WAS A touching farewell to Frank Anselmo at his funeral Mass at St. Joseph's Church last week.

ANSELMO

A veteran of World War I and World War II and a colorful political figure as an outspoken school committeeman for 29 years, he was already a legend when he died Oct. 23 at age 101.

At the funeral, his daughter Phaedra Thomas of Leominister said his last words before he died were, "I'm a tough old goat."

Well, he was tough and sturdy. And if he hadn't fractured his hip playing pool just before his 101st birthday which led to other complications, he might still be with us. And looking forward to the Veterans Day parade and ceremonies he faithfully attended each year as he did on Memorial Day.

At the end of the Mass as his casket was moved up the church aisle followed by family and friends, a violin soloist softly played "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

That was Frank's all-time favorite song and he sang it every chance he got.

He would have liked that final touch.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1906 REAL PHOTO postcard is a view of the old Atlantic fire station on Newbury Avenue. It was originally home to the Quincy Fire Department's pumper and hose Combination No.2. Then it was used as a community center and since 1953 by the Cavanaugh D.A.V. The building is now the home to the Atlantic Neighborhood Association. The street on the right, labeled Madison St. in script, was renamed Kendall Street in honor of Doc Kendall a well known local philanthropist who lived a few blocks away on Atlantic Street.

Appreciates Hospitality From Quincy, Mass. To Other Quincys

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently we hosted a group of people from different Quincys in our city. Quincy, Kansas; Quincy, Missouri; Quincy, Washington; and Quincy, Illinois were represented. A couple from Texas were also included because the woman's name is Quincie. They celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary by visiting Quincy, Mass.

We want to thank the people who made this a special visit for our guests: Kerry Driscoll in the Mayor's Office who served pizzas and soda; and especially, his honor, Mayor James Sheets who greeted each one and had a picture taken session with all. It was the highlight of their trip. He provided souvenirs for everyone. Thanks also to Bill Morrill who gave us a tour of the shipyard.

We also want to thank Sharron Beals and the staff at Beechwood On The Bay Community Center who provided refreshments for a reception. Seniors from the center gathered to welcome our visitors.

I know they appreciated the warm hospitality shown to them and took back with them great memoirs of their stay in Quincy, Mass.

Shopping Carts And Cars On Lawns

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Earlier this year, the Quincy City Council discussed the issue of abandoned shopping carts scattered across the neighborhoods of this city.

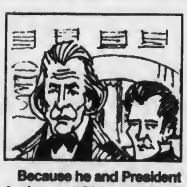
City Councillor Pat McDermott had suggested the possibility of passing a city ordinance that would either fine people who take shopping carts home or fine supermarkets who do not collect their abandoned shopping carts.

At the time many thought it would be nearly impossible to enforce. I agreed. However, I remain frustrated that there are so many shopping carts found in our neighborhoods. They are eyesores to the community. Several times I have called supermarkets with the location of their carts and it takes forever for them to respond.

As a police officer, I know that quality of life issues can make or break a neighborhood. Community policing operates under the premise of the "broken window" syndrome. If you allow one broken window to exist, it will lead to more broken windows or worse.

In the Atlantic neighborhood I am getting concerned about seeing more and more people using their front lawns as parking lots. On my street, one house has six cars parking on the front lawn almost every night. One day the lawn was so crowded one tenant actually used the sidewalk. It received a ticket, but nothing prevents parking on lawns.

This is a quality of life issue that needs to be addressed quickly before the problem grows larger.



Common sense should tell folks not to use sidewalks or lawns but apparently many Quincy residents who drive have little common sense.

Our neighborhoods are too important to watch them fall apart out of neglect. Stand up for your neighborhood.

Pass an ordinance outlawing cars parked on front lawns and enforce it. Otherwise the problem will continue to grow.

I love my neighborhood and see things happening that are negatively impacting it. Don't just talk about it at City Hall, do something, huh!

Cong. Burke: 'No Layoffs At Shipyard'

Nov. 4 - 10
1962
37 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Cong. James Burke laid to rest rumors of lay-offs at the shipyard due to the delay in the laying of the keel for a nuclear attack submarine. There was talk of laying off 1,700 workers.

Burke met in Washington with top Naval officials who said that the delay in the sub contract could actually result in more jobs because of the changes in the ship's design. He also said that Fore River would not lose any work assigned to it and the yard would have the opportunity to bid on a dozen or more new ships plus seven conversion jobs.

McCORMACK TOPPLES BURGIN; BELLOTTI ELECTED LT. GOVERNOR

Thirty-one year-old City Councillor James McCormack upset State Senator Thomas Burgin for the Quincy senate seat, making him the first Democrat to hold the post in recent memory. McCormack garnered 30,622 votes to Burgin's 29,435. It was Burgin's first defeat in his 38-year career in elective office.

At the same time, Quincy's Francis Bellotti was elected the state's Lt. Governor. He would serve with Endicott "Chub" Peabody who was elected Governor. However, because of the closeness of Peabody's vote over incumbent Governor John Volpe, it was anticipated that the winner of the top job would be determined by a recount.

REPAIRS NEEDED FOR FIRE 'WORK HORSE'

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman requested $4,300 to repair Hose One of Central Station, the "work horse" of the fire service.

Purchased in 1954, it had responded to 3,995 alarms, operated 2,093 hours and recorded 99,000 engine miles.

Robert Bosworth Serving As Kiwanis Lieutenant Governor

Quincy Sun Editor Robert Bosworth has begun his term as a lieutenant governor for the New England District of Kiwanis International.

Bosworth, immediate past president of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy, is one of 32 lieutenant governors serving under New England District Governor Michael Kirchner, a member of the Kiwanis Club of Sheffield, Mass. As lieutenant governor for Division 17, Bosworth will help guide the Kiwanis Clubs of Braintree-Holbrook, Hingham-Weymouth, Milton, Marshfield, Quincy and Rockland.

Bosworth was elected lieutenant governor for Division 17 earlier this year. He was installed by Kiwanis International Treasurer Brian Cunat at New England District Convention in Sturbridge, Mass. in August.

As lieutenant governor, Bosworth will advocate the goals outlined by Kirchner for this administrative year which runs Oct. 1 through Sept. 30. One goal is to raise $658,000 from New England Kiwanians for IDD, or Iodine Deficiency Disorders. IDD is the leading preventable cause of mental retardation in children.

ABC's "20/20" news magazine with Hugh Downs recently aired a segment on IDD and Kiwanis's leadership role to eliminate IDD around the world. Kiwanis International has partnered with UNICEF to raise $75 million to eliminate IDD forever.

"Kiwanis's focus is serving the children of the world. By banding together, we can eliminate the tragic consequences of iodine deficiency with the simple solution of salt iodization," Bosworth said. "All it takes is five cents -- only a nickel -- to provide enough iodine to save one child. This campaign should be embraced by Kiwanians everywhere."

ROBERT BOSWORTH

The New England District has approximately 206 Kiwanis clubs in the six New England states and Bermuda. The district has raised about half of its $1.12 million IDD goal.

An active Quincy Kiwanian for five years, Bosworth is a distinguished past secretary and a former president-elect. In addition, he has served on various fundraising committees and service projects, including the club's bicycle safety day which last year provided bicycle helmets and safety tips for more than 200 children in the Germantown area.

At the district level, Bosworth is in his fourth year as the bulletin editor of The Yankiwanian, the New England District of Kiwanis newspaper. Bosworth and the district received a first place international award for the newspaper in 1997. He has attended several district conventions and has presented several forums on club newsletters.

Kirchner has also appointed Bosworth to the Board of Directors of the Kiwanis Foundation of New England. The foundation is the charitable arm of the New England District. Bosworth is among 35 members of the Quincy Kiwanis Club who have become "friends" of the foundation for their contributions to the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute. As a club, Quincy has raised more than $200,000 for KPTI, the most of any club in New England.

In addition, Bosworth is a supporter of the Kiwanis International Foundation as a Hixson Fellow. The fellowship symbolizes significant support for KI's campaign to eradicate Iodine Deficiency Disorders.

Bosworth has also been active at the international level of Kiwanis. He has served as a delegate to two international conventions, in Montreal in 1998 and in Denver, Colo. this past June. At the Denver convention, Bosworth participated in a forum on successful Kiwanis club fundraisers. He gave an overview of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy's international youth hockey tournament which has raised thousands of dollars in its 26-year history.

In March, Bosworth was appointed to a special committee by then Kiwanis International President Glen Bagnell to study the organization's magazine which is circulated in North America. He was one of several Kiwanians from throughout the United States selected for the committee because of their expertise in the publishing industry. Changes to the magazine will begin being implemented soon.

Bosworth and his wife, Marla, are parents of a daughter, Lindsay, age 5. They live in Plymouth.

QSO To Premier 'Overture Of Quincy' At Friday Concert

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra will kick off its 46th season with a special tribute to Quincy: an original composition entitled "L'Ouverture de Quincy," written by Robert Rogler.

The piece, along with Gospel Selections by the 12th Baptist Gospel Ensemble and Symphony No. 4, "Romantic" by Anton Bruckner, will be performed at the QSO's first concert of the season Friday, Nov. 5 at 8 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center of North Quincy High School.

Rogler was commissioned last November by the QSO and its conductor, Yoichi Udagawa, to write an original composition, but he was not told what to write about.

After doing a little research, he chose Quincy.

"I was impressed by the variety of Quincy," Rogler said, noting the big-city bustle amidst the fall colors of New England, the gleaming business offices next to Tudor-style architecture and colonial cemeteries.

And can these contradictions be captured in music?

"Music is an inexact science," Rogler explained. "You can't portray things perfectly, as in painting."

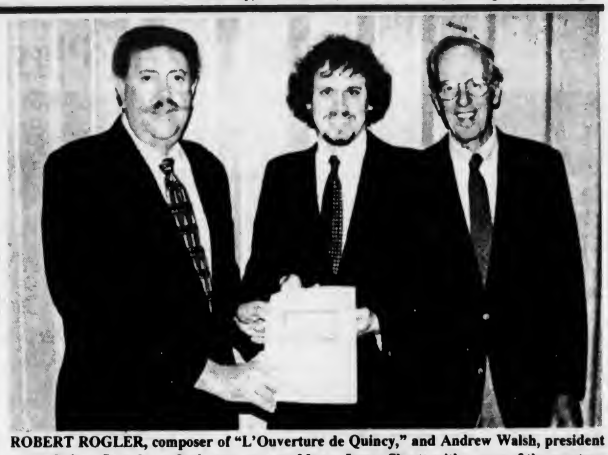
That said, Rogler sees the beginning of his overture as a reflection on Quincy's contributions to both state and federal constitutions.

"It moves from minor to major, which evokes darkness to light, and I was thinking of Quincy's constitutional past," said Rogler.

Andrew Walsh, president of the QSO and a musician himself, thinks the overture does a remarkable job of capturing the spirit of Quincy.

"It's great," said Walsh. "Our conductor loves it. It's very strong, at times martial, yet very melodic. I think it's a wonderful tribute to the city of Quincy for the millennium."

Walsh and Rogler met with Mayor Sheets Friday and presented him with a copy of the composition.



Rogler was born and raised in Rhode Island and studied with award-winning composer Dr. Richard Romiti. He received his bachelor of music degree from Aberdeen University, Scotland and a Certificate in Music Therapy from Emmanuel College. He holds the distinction of having a composition of his, "La Guerre," be the only piece written by a high school student chosen to be premiered at an All-State Band Concert.

"I wrote my first composition when I was 13, before I could even play the piano," Rogler said with a laugh. He has also studied the guitar, violin, clarinet, and tuba.

Rogler returned to composing four years ago after working as a musical therapist, where music is used as a motivator for patients to meet their rehabilitation goals. Rogler said his time as a musical therapist added greatly to his life experience and, therefore, to his compositions.

Rogler currently lives in Roslindale with his wife Hilary and their three children Julia, John, and Matthew.

Tickets for the Nov. 5 concert are $12 for adults, $8 for students and seniors, and $5 for children 12 and under accompanied by an adult. For more information, call (781) 925-4319.

The annual meeting will feature a recap of a year's worth of successful meetings, events and happenings. The "Ward 5 Citizen of the Year" award will be presented. The meeting will also feature the election of officers for 2000 and a cash prize drawing.

"Our annual meeting is fun, festive, social event for any resident of the ward, or anywhere in the city who likes to stay informed or involved in community matters," said Association President Doug Gutro. "If you haven't been to an association meeting in the past, this is the one to be at."

The Association was formed in 1997 to provide the community with relevant neighborhood information, build community cohesion and create a voice on issues impacting the quality of life in the ward. Gutro, who has served as Association president since 1997, will be stepping down at the end of this year.

"I've been honored to serve as the head of this association as we've grown to one of the largest and most active neighborhood associations in the city," Gutro said. "In three years, we've learned a lot about city and neighborhood issues and spoke out or took action on many matters that have truly made a positive difference in our corner of Quincy.

"The vitality of this association is a credit to the civic-minded individuals and families who live here and care deeply about the quality of life in our neighborhoods, business districts, parks, playgrounds and coastal areas," Gutro added.

Refreshments will be served at the meeting. Coffee will be compliments of the Coffee Break Cafe and sandwiches will be provided by Barry's Deli.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

A HEALTHIER VIEW OF AGING

People are mistaken if they believe that aging is necessarily linked with declining health and dependency. The MacArthur studies and other research show that people are more likely to age well than most people think. In fact, only 5.2% of older people reside in nursing homes, versus 6.3% in 1982. What is more, most older Americans are free of disability. Of those Americans between the ages of 65 and 74 in 1994, fully 89% reported no disability whatsoever. And, despite the fact that the proportion of elderly who are robust and functioning declines with advancing age, fully 73% of those between the ages of 75 and 84 reported no disability. Even after age 85, 40% were fully functional.

We work hard to help those who come to us for services to preserve their autonomy and a healthy attitude towards life. Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers independent and assisted living. You'll find gracious living, a prime setting and the personal care and attention you require as you need it. For more information, call us at 617-770-3264 (Four Seaport Drive).

Please join us for our Fall Harvest Open House on Sunday, November 7, 11:00-2:00pm. Call 617-770-3264 to RSVP or for directions. Don't forget to ask us about our Millennium Savings Plan.

P.S. The reduction in disability appears to be accelerating even among those aged 95 and older.

By SCOTT MERCURIO
Junior Manager
Community Emergency Response Team

Whether it happens in the City of Quincy or the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, members of Quincy's Community Emergency Response Team (CERT), the first in the Commonwealth, will be there to assist.

CERT team members have training in disaster preparedness, disaster fire suppression, disaster medical operations, light search and rescue and disaster psychology. The team has participated in more than 70 events since Jan. 1, and performed over 50,000 man hours in the last year. Ranging from disaster drills to speaking engagement to actual incident response, the team is always there to lend a helping hand.

This youth-led organization engages young persons in activities that are exciting and compatible with their interests. The CERT Team introduces its members to the world of public service through skill building training and participation in bike-a-thons, charity road races, cultural events, special projects, emergency and disaster response situations. The CERT program develops a sense of community belonging, teamwork, pride and self esteem as the youth are called upon to plan and coordinate responses to a variety of public needs.

Team members serve a variety of communities, some of which are: frail seniors, students and special interest groups of all ages; non-profit and community agencies, citizens impacted by emergency situations; entire communities celebrating at public events and many others not listed here.

Quincy CERT have participated in the Boston Marathon, William Degan Road Race, Marie Curry Walk, Quincy and MBTA joint exercise train crash, Quincy and North Quincy High School After Prom Party, and the long-running Quincy Christmas Festival and Parade just to name a few.

At over 40 strong and growing, the team is looking to the 21st century and beyond. They will serve this city and state for many years to come and you may always count on Quincy CERT to be there in your time of need.

Those interested in joining or needing more information can call (617) 376-1211 or leave a message at (617) 376-1210.

BONE INFECTION AND POOR CIRCULATION

The medical term for a bone infection is osteomyelitis. The bacteria causing the infection invade the marrow cavity or, in the case of children, the growth plates. It is a difficult clinical condition to treat often requiring a combination of aggressive surgery and at least four to six weeks of intravenous and oral antibiotics. Poor circulation obviously complicates the situation and is often encountered with patients that are statistically more likely to develop osteomyelitis, such as Diabetics.

Osteomyelitis encountered in a person with poor circulation to the foot truly becomes a team effort to treat. Surgical removal of the infected area may have to be withheld initially since tissue with insufficient blood flow may heal poorly or not at all. This is where a Vascular Surgeon may have to first try to reestablish the circulation with, for example, a bypass procedure. This has been demonstrated repeatedly with osteomyelitis involving the foot. As the circulation improves to the foot the patient then responds better to surgical treatment of the infected bone and surrounding tissue and to the antibiotics. The rest of the team includes the Podiatrist, the Internist, the Infectious Disease Specialist and the nurses.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

PROJECT S.A.F.E. firefighters and volunteers installed and checked 200 smoke detectors in seniors' homes recently. Volunteers and firefighters recently visited the homes of Quincy seniors to make sure that they have smoke detectors that are working and installed properly.

Beechwood Community Life Center's third annual Project S.A.F.E. (Smoke Alarms For Elders) Senior Serve Day provided smoke detectors to "at risk" Quincy seniors.

"At risk" is defined as elders who are 75 years or older and how have difficulty installing or checking smoke alarms. Beechwood Community Life Center Executive Director Sharron Beals estimated that almost a third of the more than 18,000 seniors living in Quincy fit this description.

Through S.A.F.E., Rotary volunteers are trained to installed smoke alarms and answer questions before they are teamed with firefighters and sent out to visit the city's elders. This year detectors were donated by Home Depot. Volunteers this year were primarily Rotarians.

Beechwood developed S.A.F.E. program, recognizing a lack of working smoke detectors in the homes of Quincy's eldest seniors. When the program began 3 years ago, volunteers and the Quincy Fire Department were surprised at the number of seniors who had no working detectors.

Each year the Project S.A.F.E. event kicks off National Fire Protection Month in Quincy.

The National Fire Protection Association co-sponsored Project S.A.F.E. with Home Depot, the QFD, and Beechwood. The Association is now promoting the S.A.F.E. program model in other parts of the country.

Realtor Association Backs Home Inspector Licensing Bill

The Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR) commends members of the Massachusetts House of Representatives for passing a home inspector licensing bill that association officials say will provide additional safeguards to consumers during the homebuying process.

Currently, the state's more than 400 home inspectors remain largely unregulated, but legislation filed by Senator Cheryl Jacques (D-Needham) and Rep. Kevin Honan (D-Boston) would change that. Specifically, the bill would create a two-tier licensing structure of inspectors and inspector associates and require licensees to meet mandatory continuing education requirements and minimum liability insurance standards.

"Housing is such a huge investment today that consumers have the right to expect their home inspection is being performed by a knowledgeable, well-trained individual," said MAR President James C. Dougherty. "We've actively supported increased licensing requirements and ongoing education for all real estate agents, and we think similarly reasonable standards for home inspectors are also appropriate."

Dougherty said MAR officials particularly welcome provisions in the legislation which will establish an oversight board to regulate the industry and a requirement that home inspectors carry at least $250,000 in errors and omissions insurance.

"With passage of this legislation, homebuyers and sellers will finally have some assurance that the person performing the inspection is qualified to do so, and if they are the unfortunate victims of a faulty home inspection they'll also have some measure of recourse for being reimbursed. We welcome these new consumer protections," Dougherty said.

The Bill passed and ordered to Third Reading in the House is slightly different than one adopted by the state Senate in August, and contains a couple of amendments proposed by the MAR and accepted during the House vote. Specifically, the MAR-authored revisions include a requirement that sellers of For-Sale-By-Owner property issue the same home inspection disclosures to buyers as real estate agents are obligated to make, as well as a modification to the rules regulating a real estate office's ability to make referrals to licensed home inspectors.

To date, five states (N.J., N.C., S.C., TX and UT) require the licensing of home inspectors.

Durand Announces Timetable

Wollaston Seawall Restoration $1.3 Million Project

Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs Bob Durand was at Wollaston Beach Friday to announce the restoration schedule for the Wollaston Beach seawall.

Flanked by state and local officials and concerned citizens, Durand said that the design part of the project had been awarded to MacGuire Associates and would begin within two weeks. Completion of the entire project was estimated at 9-12 months.

According to Durand, design of the project would cost $112,000 dollars and the overall project would total $1.3 million. The money, Durand said, is part of a $30 million "Back to the Beaches" bond bill approved by the Legislature in 1993 and aimed at protecting the Boston Harbor coastline and its 30 harbor islands.

"Governor Cellucci and Lt. Governor Swift have made protecting our coastline from further degradation and erosion a top priority," said Durand. "This is especially important for the beaches around Boston Harbor, which provide recreational opportunities for our citizens."

Durand praised the teamwork that went into the seawall project, from MDC Commissioner David Balfour, who was also present and made remarks, to the local efforts of the Wollaston Beach Task Force and Leo Kelly, chair of the Mayor's Beach and Coastal Commission.

Durand also recognized the commitment to the coastline made by the elected officials present, which included: Mayor James A Sheets; state Senator Michael Morrissey; state Rep. Ron Mariano; state Rep. Stephen A. Tobin; state Rep. Bruce Ayers; Council President Peter Kolson; Councillor Dan Raymondi; Councillor Frank McCauley; Councillor Steve Durkin; and Councillor Paul Harold.

Durand said he was there at the special request of Morrissey, calling him "relentless" in his fight for a restored Wollaston Beach.

Mayor Sheets was unequivocal in naming Wollaston Beach a top city priority. "There is no greater natural resource in the city of Quincy than its seashore," said Sheets, who said that $8 million had been spent to improve the water quality of Quincy Bay. He promised another $5 million to continue the efforts, especially in the area of storm and sewer drains, and said he would work to make the summer of 2000 the best ever for the beach. The goal, he said, was "that our beaches are never closed. Not one single day."

MDC Commissioner Balfour, who spoke after Durand, called the seawall improvement "one piece of the puzzle" and pointed to other improvements either finished or in the works: the playground at Caddy Park; a full-time site supervisor in Glenn McCauliffe; preliminary sanding and improved walkways for pedestrians; and Don Kent Park. Balfour also spoke of an upcoming joint venture between city and state where the MDC will provide the materials and equipment for the city to plant more trees and better maintain Wollaston Beach. "When you work together, you can do a lot," Balfour said. Balfour also had praise for Morrissey, calling him "tenacious."

Morrissey, for his part, said that the reason for his tenacity was the tenacity of the residents who phoned him and updated him daily on the status of the beach. He thanked Quincy's legislative delegation, the work of the mayor's office and the council, and especially Councillor Steve Durkin, who chairs the Wollaston Beach Task Force.

Durkin said that the restoration was "a long time coming" and represented "another small step in bringing the beach back to where it should and will be."

Representative Ron Mariano, vice-chair of the MWRA legislative caucus, said he was "just happy to be a small part" of the restoration and assured the audience that Quincy's legislative delegation would continue its commitment of financial support for the beach. Rep. Stephen A. Tobin echoed that sentiment but wanted to add "our collective gratitude" to Secretary Durand and Commissioner Balfour, who, he said, "worked with us" in creating a spending plan for improvements.

Rep. Bruce Ayers, who remembered days of fishing, swimming, and even waterskiing at Wollaston, cited the $1 million Hollis Avenue flooding and pollution control project, as well work done at Furnace and Cunningham brooks, as evidence that overall conditions are improving.

Leo Kelly, chair of the Mayor's Beach and Coastal Commission, called Wollaston Beach "the flagship" of Quincy's 27 miles of coastline and said that this was the beginning of further improvements, including benches, awnings, and more sand for the beach.

The seawall restoration came as welcome news to all those with a stake in Wollaston Beach, but only as the first step in much needed renovations.

"I just can't wait to see it," said Wollaston resident Nora Connolly, who takes daily strolls along the beach, both with and without her grandchildren, and whose husband John is a regular jogger at Wollaston. "I've been waiting for it for years."

Connolly pointed to the Boston skyline and the tiny islands that dotted the seascape. "I can't say enough about how marvelous it is here," said Connolly. "It's so beautiful out there but so neglected in here." Connolly added that, with an improved beachfront, "the value of these houses would soar."

Doug Gutro, vice-chair of the Coastal Commission, member of the Wollaston Beach Task Force, and president of the Ward 5 Community Association, said the announcement brought him "back to the hopeful stage" on what he described as a "roller coaster" process where improvement money is available one moment and unavailable the next.

Gutro said that the Task Force recently gave Wollaston Beach water quality a grade of B and that red flag (unswimmable) postings had dropped 77% this past summer. "But we have to be cautious about those statistics," Gutro warned. "We had an incredibly dry summer," meaning that little street waste found its way through the drain pipes and into Wollaston Beach. Gutro said that everything within Adams, Beale, East Squantum, and Fenno Streets drains directly into Wollaston Beach.

When asked to comment about the Cellucci/Swift commitment to the coastline, state Senator Morrissey said, "We'll find out. We'll hold them to their promise."

Morrissey said that obtaining funds to restore the seawall had been "a thorn in my side" for years and that the MDC had always told him there were "insufficient funds." He said a good deal of the credit should go to Secretary Durand. "As the secretary he can only do what they let him do, but he really stepped up to the plate to identify funds for this project," Morrissey said.

Secretary Durand, who worked in the Quincy District Court from 1978-1981 and who is also chair of the MWRA and the Boston Harbor Islands Partnership, said that the 51 cities and towns of the Boston Harbor Watershed had invested $3 billion in the clean-up of Boston Harbor. "The commitment is finally paying off," said Durand. "It's time to come back to the beaches."

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

The Law Is On Your Side

The law is on your side, but it works best when everyone with a stake in the neighborhood's health works together. Use partnerships with police, businesses, and local government to drive crime and illegal drugs from your streets.

Working With The Police:

• Ask for more police patrols (especially foot patrols) in areas that are known crime and drug areas. Perhaps a mini-station could be opened in your community.

• Install a 24-hour telephone line that people can call to report suspicious activity anonymously to law enforcement or public housing officers. Make sure everyone knows about the line. Use volunteers or an answering machine to take the calls. (This is NOT a 9-1-1 emergency line.)

• Work with a community organization to hand out "hot-spot" cars. Residents can anonymously identify drug houses or markets on the cards and turn them in, and the organization then passes the information on to the police.

Working With The Government:

• Public housing agencies often have tough policies for quickly evicting tenants founds with drugs. Make sure they enforce these rules, working in cooperation with other concerned tenants and law enforcement. Some cities' public housing rules evict tenants whose activities or visitors' behavior seriously.

• Urge government to tear down abandoned buildings or sell them to civic organizations who can rehabilitate them.

• Some cities, with a neighborhood's approval, have put up barriers across intersections that create a maze of dead-end streets and make life very difficult for criminals and drug dealers. Check with the government department that handles traffic and roads.

• Report broken street lights, graffiti, cracked pavements, and trash removal to local authorities.

Working With Business:

• Property owners can give police permission to enter private property, such as parking lots or outside stairs, to investigate and possibly arrest loiterers.

• Telephone companies can fix pay phones so they can be used for calls out - then, drug dealers can't use them to conduct business.

• Utility companies can investigate gas and electric connections that drug houses may be using illegally.

• Property owners can rewrite their leases to include specific bans on illegal drug activity.

• If we all work together we can reduce crime and the fear of crime.

• Report suspicious activity to the police immediately.

WHERE ARE YOU GOING?

One of the latest pieces of technology to impact the automobile world is the satellite navigation system, which takes computerized maps and adds precise positioning data. This latter bit of information comes from the military's Global Positioning System (GPS). It is a network of 24 Defense Department tracking and navigation satellites, which use radio waves to emit time signals calibrated to a millionth of a second. Then, using satellite signals, a GPS receiver calculates its latitude, longitude and elevation. By sampling repeatedly, the receiver can also calculate speed and direction. Thus, vehicles outfitted with dashboard-mounted screens, GPS antennas, microprocessors and CD-ROM drives full of maps can tell drivers where to go by tracking their location and giving them turn-by-turn directions.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

23rd Annual Great American Smokeout Nov. 18

The American Cancer Society's 23rd annual Great American Smokeout Thursday, Nov. 18 will help millions of smokers kick the habit permanently and continue to encourage teens to never start smoking.

The Great American Smokeout is the American Cancer Society's annual, nationally recognized day to ask smokers to put down their cigarettes, spit tobacco or pipes because they all have the potential to cause cancer and other health problems. Research shows that approximately 32 million smokers (out of 47 million smokers) want to quit smoking completely; that's why the American Cancer Society continues to offer support and education to the public.

The promise of an addiction-free life has encouraged many smokers to join in and prove themselves that they can live a day without cigarettes, and that they can, therefore, live the rest of their lives without them. In 1998, 19 percent of smokers participated in the Great American Smokeout (approximately 8,930,000 people), and of those participants, 10 percent reported that they were smoking less or not at all one to five days later. That means over 89,000 people are well on their way to healthier, smoke-free lives, thanks to the American Cancer Society.

The Great American Smokeout is no just about adult smokers and cessation. As the times change and our understanding of the addictive cycle of nicotine increases, ACS is working to prevent children from ever becoming smokers. The American Cancer Society focuses educational efforts on informing children and teens about the social disadvantages of smoking and provides them with the tools to recognize and avoid negative social influences.

More than 80 percent of today's smokers tried their first cigarette before the age of 18, noted Dr. David S. Rosenthal, immediate past national president of the American Cancer Society and director of Harvard University Health Services.

"Friends and family who smoke, the easy availability of tobacco, and tobacco advertising and promotions all encourage teenagers to smoke. We hope our efforts will help current smokers quite, and will inspire teenagers not to start," Dr. Rosenthal said.

Tobacco use is responsibility for nearly one in five deaths in the United States even though smoking is the most preventable cause of death and disease in our society. Smoking-related diseases kill more people than AIDS, alcohol, car accidents, fire drugs, murders and suicides combined. Every year, more than 400,000 people die from smoking-related diseases, and approximately 3,000 adolescents become regular smokers every day.

The American Cancer Society is dedicated to helping the 32 million smokers who want to quit accomplish their goal and is determined to reduce the number of adult smokers by reaching our youth before they start.

For smokers who want to quit, the Great American Smokeout marks a time when additional support is available through expanded smoking cessation programs. The American Cancer Society's Quitline (1-800--TRY TO STOP, Spanish 1-800-833-5256 and TTY 1-800-833-1477), a Massachusetts Department of Public Health funded program, offers self-help materials, one-on-one support with a smoking cessation specialist, and referrals to local quit-smoking groups.

Services are available 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday. The Quitline also offers a pre-recorded 24-hour hotline with tips for those late-night cravings at 1-800-9-GET-A-TIP.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

Should I keep my batteries in the refrigerator?

Absolutely not! Todays hearing aid batteries are made with zinc. They have a good shelf life, but if put in the refrige-rator, they will accumulate moisture and cause corrosion in your hearing aid. When zinc air batteries are fresh they have a guaranteed shelf life of one year. Buy them fresh! When they are on sale at pharmacies or discount stores, it may be because they are an older batch. It is much easier to monitor their freshness in a Hearing Instrument Specialist's office where we do not sell many other products. A fresh battery will give you consistant life. An old battery might go dead at any time. You may save a couple dollars but you'll save more dollars by doing business with your specialist. Customers that buy batteries from me on a regular basis get more "freebies" when they come in for service. It's my way of thanking them for being a dedicated customer. Keep your batteries in a dry cool place, like a desk drawer and order a 4-6 month supply at a time.

Presidents Haunted By Another Big Play

Quincy Travels To Silver Lake Friday

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School football team had a chance to do what Randolph and Falmouth accomplished against them earlier in the season.

Friday night against Plymouth South, the Presidents, for a change, had a chance to be on the other end of climatic comeback. But with the way the season has been going, and with it being Halloween weekend, you were almost waiting for that one play to haunt them.

Quincy delivered it right on cue. Trailing 21-13 with 3:13 left in the game, Quincy needed to march 58 yards for a touchdown to get a shot at tying the game with a two-point conversion.

On the second play of the drive, senior quarterback Dan Kelly flipped a pass to senior back Russell Mullen in the flat, who couldn't make the catch in the backfield and the Panthers' Peter Walls picked up the live ball and returned it for six points and a 28-13 win.

It doesn't get more terrifying than that.

"That last play the kid is wide open," said head coach Bob Noble. "The quarterback checks to him, throws him the ball and we don't catch it. And then we stand there and look at it and the kid picks it up. It ends the game right there.

"I feel bad for the kid because Russell Mullen has just played tremendous for us all year. I feel bad for him but in the same respect you have to make the play. Everyone else has to make the play. You don't just stand there and look at it. Everybody flies to the ball if it's on the ground."

Quincy (0-8, 0-4) ended a four-week stretch at Veterans Memorial Stadium in which it was outscored 126-47. Maybe getting away from home will help tomorrow night when it faces Silver Lake (3-2, 3-4).

Plymouth South went up 7-0 when Walls had a 1-yard QB sneak on a fourth-and-one play with 2:02 left in the first. Quincy bounced right back in the second when it recovered a fumble at the Plymouth South 27.

Kelly hit senior back Chris Regens for 14 yards, senior captain Nick DiStasi for 22 yards on beautiful throw over two defenders and on a fourth-and-five play, connected with Mullen for a 26-yard TD with 5:12 left in the half. Sophomore Tom Shruhan's PAT was blocked and Quincy trailed 7-6.

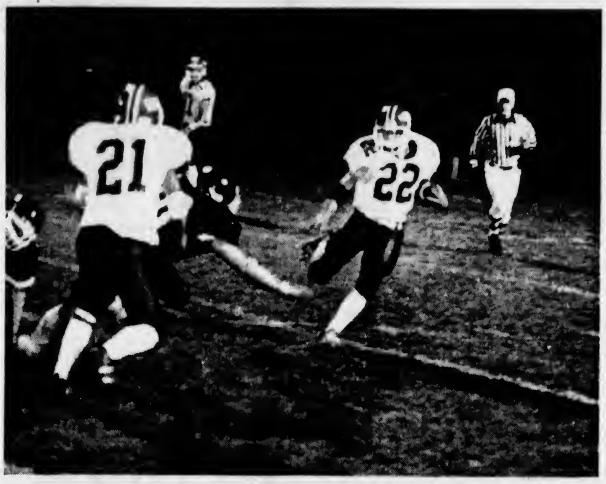
On Plymouth South's next series, Quincy handed them the first of three gimme touchdowns. On third and two from the 25-yard line, Quincy had junior back Eric Shanley wrapped up for a loss in the backfield. But he somehow slithered out of the pile, slipped out of several tackles and scampered into the end zone. The PAT was no good.

On the first play of Quincy's next possession, Mullen fumbled on a draw and Plymouth South recovered the ball at the Quincy 30. Then came the second gimme TD. On third and 10 Walls dumped the ball off to Shanley in the flat and he walked in untouched from 13 yards out for a 21-6 lead with :26 left in the half.

"You can't fumble that ball," Noble said. "In the first half we seemed to move the ball well in spurts. We do some nice things offensively but we can't finish. We make critical mistakes."

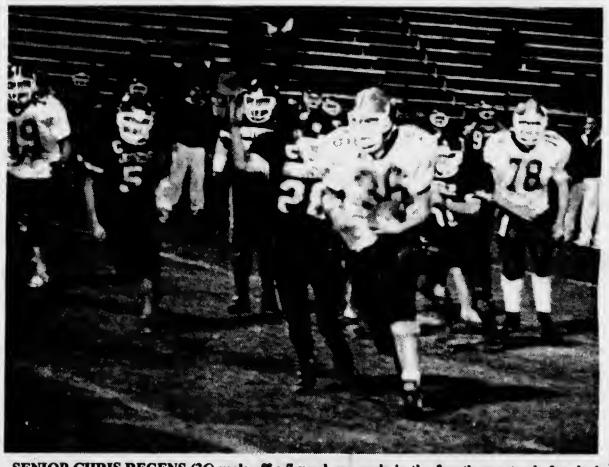
The second half belonged to the Presidents' defense, which stifled the Panthers offensively, forcing them to punt three times.

"I thought they played terrible in the first half, but came back and played great in the second half," Noble said. "They responded to what we said at halftime."



The offense scored on its first possession. On the second play Kelly found tight end Jeff Peterson (2 catches for 72 yards) wide open over the middle on a play-action pass, and he plowed ahead 41 yards.

Kelly capped off the eight-play, 64-yard drive with a 10-yard TD run, hurdling a defender along the way, to cut the lead to 21-13 with 7:41 left in the third.



The defense got the ball back three more times for the offense to try to tie the game but Quincy couldn't make the plays. Kelly fumbled as he was hit from behind to stall one drive. Quincy punted on another when Kelly missed senior wideout Andy Tam on a deep route on third down. And then came that third gimme which sealed the game.

"Again, we're in a position to do something to win the game but we can't do it," Noble said. "Sooner or later you have to do what you've been coached to do. Unfortunately, our kids seem to pick the worst possible time not to do it.

"It's just extremely frustrating for the kids. We're at a point where, frankly, we have no place to go but up. We're at rock bottom, emotionally and physically."

Quincy High School Youth Basketball Tryouts Start Monday

Quincy High School youth basketball tryouts, boys grades 6-8, will be held Monday, Nov. 8 and Wednesday, Nov. 10 from 6 to 8 p.m. at C.T.E. Gym at Quincy High.

5K Walkathon To Benefit Meals On Wheels Program

South Shore Elder Services, Inc. (SSES) will conduct a 5K walkathon, "Stroll the Mall for Meals-on-Wheels," Sunday, Nov. 14 at 9 a.m. at the South Shore Plaza in Braintree.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m.

SSES is holding the walkathon, its 10th annual, because the costs of the Meals-on-Wheels program far outweigh funding. The program is funded by the federal and state governments, and by donations from clients who receive meals. Money from the federal government has been level-funded for the past eight years, and the average donation from clients is about half of what is needed. The deficit last year was $40,000.

South Shore Elder Services is a non-profit, state home care agency, serving Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth. SSES develops, delivers, and coordinates services that enable elders to remain safely in their own homes and communities with dignity and in comfort. SSES also helps older citizens in improving and maintaining the quality of their lives.

There will be prizes to the first 100 walkers with at least $50 in pledges, the three adults and three children under 18 who raise the most money, and to the oldest and youngest walker.

Call 781-848-3910 for pledge sheets or more information.

North Quincy Hosts B-R Friday At 7PM

Raiders Highest Point Total Not Enough

FOOTBALL

The North Quincy High School football team had its highest point total of the season but still came up two yards short Saturday night.

North Quincy fullback Brian Deptula plunged in from 1 yard out with 27 seconds left in the game to pull his team within 21-19. That's the way it remained as Silver Lake Regional (3-2, 3-4) stuffed Deptula's two-point conversion run, which would've sent the game into overtime.

North Quincy (2-5-1, 2-3) finally put some points on the board after a six-game stretch where it only tallied 39 points. For the season, the Red Raiders have scored 79 points, only Medford of Greater Boston has scored less (64) in Division I play.

Tomorrow night, North Quincy returns home to face Bridgewater-Raynham (3-1, 4-3) at 7 p.m.

Silver Lake got on the board first early in the second when running back Brandon McPhail capped off a 10-play drive with a 1-yard run for a 7-0 lead.

McPhail finished with 129 yards in his first game back after suffering a leg injury two weeks ago.

Late in the half North Quincy knotted the game at 7-7. Senior quarterback Sean Adams, who got the starting nod because of Max Repoffs' ankle injury, hooked up with senior wideout Jody Bravo for a 33-yard TD with six seconds left.

Silver Lake grabbed the lead back when McPhail legged out a 75-yard TD run in the third quarter.

The Red Raiders responded early in the fourth. Bravo intercepted a pass to give North Quincy the ball and it drove down the field, highlighted by junior wideout Joey Holleran's 33-yard catch. Deptula cashed in from 3 yards out with nine minutes left in the game. Mike Reidy's PAT was no good and North Quincy trailed 14-13.

The Lakers seemed to have sealed the win when Adam Luque intercepted Adams and returned it 51 yards for a touchdown, giving his team a 21-13 lead with 3:25 remaining on the clock.

North Quincy, though, didn't collapse from Luque's crushing blow. It put together a scoring drive but the missed PAT early in the game came back to hurt them as Deptula was buried on the conversion.

Apaches Blank Elks, Advance To Title Game

YOUTH FOOTBALL

The Apaches shut out the Elks, 18-0, to earn a spot in the 1999 Quincy Youth Football League championship game against the Milton Mustangs Sunday at 2 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Apache quarterback Tim Watson led the offense, throwing for two touchdowns and running in the third.

The first touchdown was set up by a fake punt. On the fake, Vincenzo Prisco tossed to Bill Cosgrove to keep the first-quarter drive alive. Four plays later, Watson scored on a 10-yard bootleg.

In the second quarter, Watson rolled to his left and hit tight end Dan Cosgrove for six more points and a12-0 lead.

In the third, Watson threw a 30-yard TD strike to wideout Andy MacAllister, who caught it near the Elks' goal line and ran it into the end zone to close out the scoring.

The Apaches' passing offense was impressive as Watson had four talented receivers to throw to in MacAllister, the Cosgroves and Chris Tufo, who started in his first varsity game and made a sensational 30-yard catch.

Defensively, linebacker Wayne DeSchamp and defensive linemen Pat O'Donnell, Kyle Carmody and Richard Stone played well. The offensive line of Tim Chiaccio, DeSchamp, Carmody, O'Donnell, Billy Cox, Steve O'Brien and Bobby Keaney provided solid protection for Watson and the passing game.

Last Wednesday, the Apaches blanked the Storm, 8-0, in a makeup game. The lone score came in the first when Watson scored on a 15-yard run. He hit Dan Cosgrove for the two-point conversion. Tufo, MacAllister, Josh Hersey all had big interceptions to frustrate the Storm offense.

Panthers Finish With 20-6 Win

The Quincy Point Panthers concluded their 49th Quincy Youth Football League season with a convincing 20-6 victory over the Squantum Storm.

The triumph came following two makeup games, a victory over the Elks and a loss against Desmond Division champ Milton.

The Panthers finished a solid season at 5-3. The Manets closed at 4-3-1.

The Elks and Storm round out the rest of the teams who will watch defending champion Milton (7-1) take on the North Quincy Apaches (5-2-1) for the QYFL title Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

In the season finale, the Panthers rolled to a 20-0 halftime lead and never looked back.

J.J. Niamkey scored the first touchdown on a 12-yard scramble, then topped that off with a 70-yard scoring strike from quarterback Justin Thorley. Ed DeWitt hauled in Thorley's pass for the two-point conversion and a 14-0 cushion.

On the ensuing kickoff, Squantum fumbled and Joe Priscella picked it up and raced 35 yards for a Panthers' touchdown.

With a fine performance by the substitutes, the Panthers got strong second-half efforts from Jake Bennett (4 carries, 82 yards), Steven O'Neill and Tony Popjonovich. The defense held the Storm in check until late in the game.

Playing in their final game for the Green and Gold were DeWitt, Thorley, Priscella, Niamkey, T.J. Pitts, James Hutchins, Nick Puopole, Mike Lally and O'Neill.

Manets Fall To Mustangs, 12-6

The Manets played their best game of the season but came up short against the Milton Mustangs, 12-6, to get knocked out of the playoffs in what will go down as their hardest fought game of the season.

The Mustangs will face the Apaches Sunday at 2 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium for the championship. There is a JV Jamboree at 11 a.m.

The Manets scored first when Josh Giordani tossed a 40-yard TD pass to Alex Santiago, who made a nice move to get into the end zone.

The defense, led by Roger Palermo, held Milton to only a few first downs in the first half. Shayne Murray and Jim Hazelhurst played solid defense as well. Defensive linemen Sean Connolly, Andrew McDonald, Steve Dunn and Santiago were effective at stopping the run and pass.

Milton didn't manage a touchdown before halftime but the Manets stopped the two-point conversion and it was tied 6-6 at the break.

In the second half the Manets ran the ball through Milton's defense. Palermo, hampered by a sprained ankle suffered in the first half, finished with over 100 yards on the ground. He also threw a couple first-down passes.

Joey Keefe and Dean Sandonato had solid night running and catching the ball. Offensive linemen Dan Davis, Chris Haldoupis, Terrance O'Connell and Anthony Kellam held their own.

The Manets came up with some great defensive plays with the score knotted at 6-6, but Milton found a way to score a late TD for the win.

Dan Sullivan, Sean Ryan and Robert Getchel played well defensively, and Geoff Karasic shined playing both offense and defense.

Coach Dave Perry thanks the players for their effort this season:

Deja Bergstrom, Frank Boudreau, Connolly, Davis, Dunn, Getchel, Giordani, Haldoupis, Hazelhurst, Karasic, Keefe, Kellam, Patrick Malone, McDonald, Murray, O'Connell, Michael O'Neil, Palermo, Ryan, Sandonato, Santiago and Sullivan.

Valiants Drum And Bugle Corps Open House Sunday

Quincy residents are invited to attend an open house for the Valiants Junior Drum and Bugle Youth Corps Sunday, Nov. 7 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Notre Dame Education Center (formerly Cardinal Cushing) at 50 West Broadway in South Boston, fourth floor.

The open house will kick off the Valiants second season since its rebirth last winter. The Valiants are expecting to participate in this year's St. Patrick's Day Parade in South Boston.

The winter schedule will consist of one practice a week, on Sunday afternoon from 1 to 5 p.m. in South Boston.

The Valiants organization is open to all children age 9 to 15. No experience is necessary. Music, marching and dance instructions are free. Instruments and uniforms are supplied at no cost.

There are opportunities to travel, meet other children the same age, learn how to read music, play a brass instrument or drum, spin a flag or rifle, perform in front of large crowds, compete, learn good sportsmanship, team work and have fun.

The Valiants Jr. Drum and Bugle Corps was originally established in the early 1960's as the "feeder organization" for the City of Boston's Crusader organization. After some 30 years the Valiants have returned to Boston to rekindle the spirit of neighborhood drum and bugle corps.

A drum and bugle corps is much like a marching band, without the woodwind and string instruments.

The Valiants are seeking new members. For more information, contact Anthony Arena at (781) 246-4604.

Christopher Barra Wins Gold Medal In Judo

Christopher Barra, a freshman at Cumberland College in Kentucky, won the gold medal at the Kentucky Blue Grass Judo Championships in Bowling Green in his first intercollegiate judo tournament.

His performance helped his school capture the first place team trophy.

At 149 lbs., Barra, a Quincy native, competed as one of the lightest competitors in the 160 pound brown and black belt division. He went undefeated in four matches with a combination of mat work, strangling techniques, forward hip throws and counter attacks. He won all of his matches by "ippon," which is judo's equivalent to a knockout in boxing or a pin or submission hold in wrestling.

Formerly on the Massachusetts State Judo Team, Barra studies locally at the "L" Street Judo Club in South Boston under the direction of Japanese trained instructor Bill Stevens and with Rick Meara in Everet.

North Quincy Girls Qualify For Tourney

Possible 10th Seed, Away Game Saturday

SOCCER

The North Quincy girls' soccer team qualified for the EMASS tournament for the third straight year by going 3-0-1 to closed out the regular season.

The Red Raiders have a 33-15-8 record the last three seasons. Tournament pairings come out today (Thursday). North Quincy traveled to Andover Tuesday for a scrimmage against the third ranked team in EMASS.

"It looks as if we'll be seeded 10th and probably draw either B-R or Notre Dame of Hingham and play an away game," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We could possibly play Saturday afternoon."

North Quincy placed three girls on the OCL All-Star team which played the ACL All-Stars Sunday. Senior forwards and captains Ashley Murphy and Caitlyn O'Donnell as well as junior defender Jen Conley represented the Red Raiders. Senior captain Maureen Holleran was given the Sportsmanship Award from North Quincy.

Last Thursday, in the final game of the regular season, North Quincy came out with a 4-1 win at Taunton. North Quincy scored four first-half goals to put the game away early.

Freshman goalie Christine Wood, filling in for Kathryn MacRitchie who is out for the year with mononucleosis, picked up her first varsity win, turning back five Taunton shots.

Freshman Erin McFarland scored her third of the year, heading in an Allie Lacey corner kick.

Freshman Katy Mercurio scored her second of the year, collecting a loose ball in the area and firing it past the Tiger goalie.

Junior Kellee Conley scored her fourth when she blasted a short from 18 yards out with senior Janelle Hersey getting the assist.

Sophomore forward Lauren Sleeth completed the scoring when she headed in a Holleran throw-in for her fourth goal of the season.

Senior Lauren Enos made the defensive play of the game, clearing a ball out from between two Taunton forwards to save a goal. Also playing well for the Raiders were Kelly Coleman, Kathlyn Gates, Kelly Rice and Colleen Lahar.

"We got some bad news Wednesday [Oct. 27] finding out that MacRitchie is our for the year with mononucleosis," Bregoli said. "However, this team has battled adversity all year and rallied behind Wood, who played very well in net for us."

On Oct. 23 North Quincy edged cross-town rival Quincy, 1-0, on a muddy field at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Sleeth scored the only goal of the game midway through the first half, heading in a flip-throw from Holleran.

Several other good scoring bids by Lacey, O'Donnell and Casey Ridge were turned back by Quincy goalie Kerri Eaton, who stood out for the Presidents.

North Quincy enjoyed a vast territorial advantage in the game thanks to midfielders Kristin Coughlin, McFarland, Lauren Awed and Holleran.

Defenders Conley, Stacy Szcesuil and Gates also played well. North Quincy keeper MacRitchie registered her seventh shutout of the season.

On Oct. 19 North Quincy battled Barnstable to a 1-1 stalemate. Barnstable brought in OCL leading scorer Crystel Kalweit, who tallied a hat trick against the Red Raiders earlier in the season.

Lacey, however, marked Kalweit all over the field, frustrating the Barnstable forward as she only scored one goal.

Coughlin scored for North Quincy midway through the first half with Holleran getting the assist.

North Quincy got outstanding play from Murphy, Rice, Ridge and Sleeth.

The Red Raiders traveled to Plymouth South on Oct. 21 and left with a hard fought 1-0 win against the Panthers.

North Quincy got its only goal off the foot of O'Donnell in the first half, her sixth of the season. Conley assisted.

Lacey, Mercurio, Ridge and Murphy all had strong games. MacRitchie preserved the victory with several spectacular saves late in the game.

North Quincy Boys Clinch Postseason Spot

10-5-3 Record Best In 5 Years

The North Quincy boys' soccer team clinched its second straight tournament berth last week with four consecutive wins.

North Quincy has been playing some of its best ball late in the season with a 7-0-1 record down the stretch.

Tournament pairings will be announced today (Thursday) as postseason play begins this week.

Its final record stands at 10-5-3, the best in five years, and good for a fourth-place finish in the Old Colony League. Two wins this year came against OCL champion Bridgewater-Raynham.

The Red Raiders placed two players on the OCL all-star first team: senior captain Graham McShane and senior forward Stephen Rochon. Junior defender Shaun Jaforzadeh was selected to the second team. Senior defender Bill Miller was selected as the OCL Sportsman from North Quincy.

"This has been a tremendous year for some fine young men," said head coach Bob Dano. "They're as hard-working a team as I have ever coached and they deserve all the recognition they can get.

"I think they still have some outstanding soccer left in them, and the tournament is exactly the right place to put it on display. I'm looking forward to it."

Last Monday, North Quincy knocked off Milton, 3-1, in a non-league game. The defense highlighted the game as Milton only registered two shots in the second half. Goals were scored by McShane, Rochon and senior midfielder Brian Deshler.

The next game, also a non-league contest, saw North Quincy oust Norwell from the ranks of the undefeated with a 1-0 win. The game was tightly contested with a David Rochon direct kick in the first half being the difference.

League foe Taunton went down, 6-0, with McShane and Stephen Rochon each netting a pair of goals. Senior captain Bill O'Toole and freshman Dan Coughlin added the other goals.

The final contest of the season resulted in a rugged 4-2 win against Braintree. The match was very physical but North Quincy scored four goals in the first half and held on to stop several second-half scoring bids by Braintree.

Stephen Rochon had a goal and an assist, McShane had a goal and two assists, O'Toole had one goal and senior midfielder Kevin Shea scored unassisted.

O'Toole scored the first goal on an assist from McShane. Stephen Rochon scored the second on a breakaway set up by his brother, David. David also picked up a goal just before the half by nailing a loose ball in front of the Quincy net.

The second half featured two goals by McShane. Miller scored the final goal with a helper from Shea.

Playing a strong game in the midfield was senior captain Joe Flynn, who created much of the ball movement that put players in position to attack the Quincy goal.

On Oct. 21, North Quincy faced Plymouth South at Teal Field and came away with a solid 3-1 win. It was the first time a North Quincy team has swept the series from Plymouth South since it entered the OCL.

Stephen Rochon scored two first-half goals. McShane scored the third goal on a feed from Flynn.

Combined High School Girls' Team Back In The Swim Of Things

Inaugural Season For Quincy-North Swim Squad

By CHRIS POISSON

In an Oct. 21 meet at Lincoln-Hancock Pool, the girls' swim team treaded water with Marshfield for most of the day, but once again sunk to the bottom as it dropped another close decision this season.

Despite its 0-8 record, the season has been an improvement because this is neither the North Quincy team, nor the Quincy team. This is the first year for Quincy-North, the girls' cooperative swim team.

Last year, both schools' programs saw a decline in numbers, which made for very long seasons. Quincy suited just seven swimmers while North Quincy had about 15 or 16. Compared to the state average of 20 to 30 for girls, you can understand why they had their difficulties.

Currently, there are 100 cooperative programs in the state, ranging from baseball and football to gymnastics and tennis. Hockey has the most cooperative teams with 25. Quincy-North is one of 10 cooperative swim programs.

"You can ask for a cooperative team if you can show there's not enough kids," said Bill Walker, Athletic Director of Quincy Public Schools. "You have to make the request to the MIAA. And you have to check with the league if there are any objections."

In May, the MIAA granted the request and the Old Colony League also approved. Quincy-North now boasts 31 swimmers, four from last year's Quincy squad. It's status will be reviewed after the 2000-01 season.

"In the next few years we'll have a strong team," said head coach Claire McCarthy, who served as an assistant coach for North Quincy the last two years. "It's getting popular here. The numbers are strong. We're coming back. We're showing improvement. The scores show improvement. Every meet has been close."

"We've been in more meets this year than the last three or four years," Walker said.

Quincy and North Quincy swimmers, hopping in the same pool together might get a little heated with their fierce rivalry. But this sport is not like football, soccer, basketball or hockey. There are no physical battles on the turf, rink or hardwood.

The girls on the Quincy-North team not only knew each other before this season, they were friends. That's what happens when you share a pool, as they did last year. The Quincy girls practiced their strokes in one end of the pool, while North Quincy swam in the other end.

"It was a fun meet to have," McCarthy said. "There was a sense of rivalry, but it never had that competitive edge as the other sport teams."

So far, two swimmers will compete in postseason play. Junior Sheila Bohan has qualified for states and sectionals in the butterfly, and the sectionals in the 200- and 500-meter individual medley.

Sophomore Kaitlin McDonald has made the sectionals in the 50- and 100-meter freestyle.

In the Marshfield meet several swimmers posted their best times of the season. Kellie Whalen and captain Katherine Cantelli earned their top times in both the 200 and 500 freestyle as they finished first and second.

Cantelli was Quincy's captain last season and is one swimmer who has benefited from the cooperative team.

"She's having her best year," Walker said. "Now she has reason to work out."

As do her teammates.

North Cross Country Downs Quincy, Fontbonne

The North Quincy cross country team finished up its dual meet season with a couple of wins over Quincy and Fontbonne Academy.

The girls posted two shutouts with Lynda Wilson, Natalie Çaron, Sarah Houghton, Linda Nguyen, Genevievve O'Brien, Christine Marre and Kellyrose O'Brien all placing in the top 10.

In the boys' race, juniors Jeff Bartoloni and Brian Breslin finished 1-2 again, with John Fidalgo, Frank Alibrandi and Steve Barkowski all having big days.

At the Old Colony League championships, the boys' team placed a close fourth with Bartoloni winning the entire race by :24 over Silver Lake's Mike Piche.

Breslin was running with a leg injury which put him in a disappointing 21st. A normal top 10 finish would have put North Quincy in third.

Fidalgo, Alibrandi and Barkowski all ran personal bests for three miles.

In the girls' race, Falmouth edged North Quincy for second by two points. Wilson paced the North Quincy effort as usual with a fourth-place finish. Caron was seventh, and Houghton and Nguyen were 11th and 12th, respectively.

North Quincy will run in the State Coaches meet Saturday at Franklin Park before preparing for the state championships.

Central Sweeps Cross Country Boys, Girls City Championships

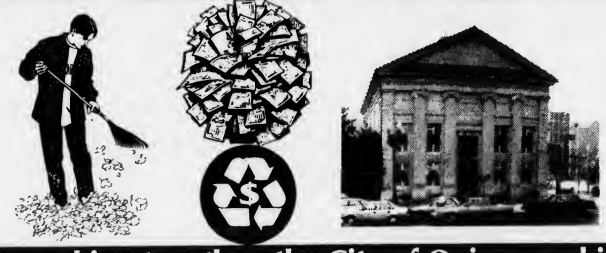
Central Middle School swept both boys' and girls' titles at the 12th annual Cross Country City championships held Saturday at Pageant Field.

Over 100 boys and girls ran under nearly perfect conditions along Black's Creek Estuary and were treated to Pizza and soft drinks by Athletic Director Bill Walker.

Although the girls' race was won by Broadmeadows' Sasha Mackey, Central put all five scorers in the top 11 to clinch it.

Mackey was hard pressed by Central team leader, runner-up Brenna O'Brien.

Central won with 30 points, Broadmeadows had 39, Atlantic edged Sterling for third place, 75-80, and Point-Webster, back on the scene after a 17-year hiatus, scored 151.



In the hotly contested boys' race, Central turned the trick again with Ben Dutton setting a course record of 7:08 for the 1.15-mile route.

Sterling's Rob Richards wound up runner-up for the second year in a row with a 7:10, just a stride ahead of Atlantic's much improved Tom Ivy. But Central put all five of its boys' in the top 10 to clinch it.

Central's 28 points easily outdistanced Atlantic's 42. Sterling had 54.

High school coaches Scott King (Quincy) and Geoff Hennessy (North Quincy) coordinated the program assisted by their high school athletes.

David F. Rowell, 72
'A Police Officers' Police Officer'
Was Pelham N.H. Police Chief, Quincy Chief Of Detectives

By HENRY BOSWORTH

A man of courage and strong faith who loved Quincy as he loved his family and a "police officer's police officer."

That is how friends, colleagues and family remember David F. Rowell, former Quincy police chief of detectives who was police chief of Pelham, N.H. when he died Oct. 26 after a courageous battle with cancer. He was 72.

DAVID F. ROWELL

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday at St. Ann's Church with police from Quincy, Pelham and other Massachusetts and New Hampshire communities among those attending.

"I never saw a man with such strong faith," said Fr. William McCarthy of St. John's Church, a close friend, who celebrated the Mass.

"He was a kind, caring, loving individual. He knew he was dying but he never complained. Instead, he cheered others."

Participating in the Mass were Fr. Robert Monagle of St. Joseph's Church, Catholic chaplain of the Quincy Police Department, Fr. Gary Barry of St. Ann's Church and Fr. Brian Parish, formerly of St. Mary's Church, now of St. Paul's Church in Wellesley.

Congressman William Delahunt, who spoke at the Mass, praised Chief Rowell for his work in the war against drugs while he headed the Quincy Police Department's Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

Delahunt who was then district attorney, tapped the then Captain Rowell to command the Norfolk County Drug Task Force in 1983. He also headed the Quincy Police Drug Unit.

Back then he was lauded by Delahunt, and the late Police Chief Francis Finn and Judge Henry Chmielinski for his crackdown on trafficking drugs.

And there were more tributes today. Among them:

"He was a police officer's police officer," said Mayor James Sheets. "I knew Dave Rowell throughout my years as city councillor and mayor.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

As people grow older and group themselves with older people, the subject of children's behavior often captures the conversation. The ageless topic seems to attach itself to aging. The virtues or vices of the children of today are compared with the children of yesteryear. And quite often the hazy recollections of yesteryear are clouded by the passing of time. Please read the following quote. We think it is quite interesting...

"Our youth now loves luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority. They show disrespect for elders and love chatter in place of exercise. Children are now tyrants, not the servants of their households. They no longer rise when elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble up their food and tyrannize their teachers."

Who said this? When was it said? Was it recently? Care to guess? The quote is from Socrates in the 5th century, B.C.!...We guess it proves kids will be kids; always have been and always will be!

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Set the mood for a romantic meeting. It could be love letters that you write from your heart or a chance encounter that makes you all aflutter. Your intuition is the best guide.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The past could push its way into the present, and the results might leave you feeling a little haunted. Look beyond the surface for the message that can truly alter the path that you are pursuing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Let your feelings be known even if it involves making a bit of a fool of yourself. Know that ridicule only comes because others wish they had enough nerve to follow in your footsteps.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your domestic front pulls you in so that you have the opportunity to sit on the front porch and watch the world go by. It is in your best interest to jump back in an appropriate spot.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might find that someone you thought was an equal opponent has been moved up to a higher weight class. Avoid entering the ring when there is this unfair advantage.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Set your possessive tendencies aside unless you want to engage in a debate that tries to define the lines between what is and isn't yours. There is no need to take your ball and go home in the middle of the game.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The current that is rushing under your surface fills you with a new sense of vitality. Taking on the world might be a little strong, but pick a path and go to town.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be wary of getting stuck between a rock and a hard place. Some things are not as malleable as they first appear.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The crazier the circumstances that cross your path the better. They initially might catch you off guard, but your backup system kicks into gear just in time to achieve success.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You may feel as if you have entered into a steeplechase race as obstacles continue to pop up in your path. Make your strides long and plan your steps accordingly.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The fact that you are dependable does not mean that you are always predictable. Play with the energy you contain within, and apply it in ways that might surprise people.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There is a beauty in something that someone else has discarded without thinking twice. You have the ability to give it new definition and to breathe it back to life.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: The risk involved only makes things more appealing to you in any pursuit of which you are a part. Luck pulses through your veins, and your heart knows just where to draw the line when too much pressure becomes a factor. You are a competitor whom anyone envies having on their team.

Feeney To Retire As NQHS Principal

school committee at its regular meeting Wednesday night on Mrs. Feeney's retirement and the search for her replacement.

Creedon said the 15 applicants were the result of job postings and newspaper advertisements and that the window to apply closed two weeks ago.

Creedon's first task is to whittle the 15 names down into the six or seven best candidates, then convene a screening team composed of parents, staff, teachers, a representative of the QEA, members of the central office, and a principal, most likely from the middle school level.

The screening committee will conduct interviews, check resumes and backgrounds, and present three names to Superintendent Creedon, who will make the final decision from those three candidates.

Under the Education Reform Act of 1993, the school superintendent has sole authority to choose a principal.

"We hope to have the whole thing wrapped up by mid-December," said Creedon.

The retiring Feeney, who lives on Surfside Lane in Squantum, began her career at NQHS in 1957 as a math teacher. From 1959 to 1975 she left teaching to raise a family but was active as a parent. In the 1970's she was a member of the Citizens for North Quincy High School Committee which worked to build the new addition to NQHS and renovate the original school building. She was named dean of students at NQHS in 1976 and was appointed assistant principal in 1979. She served in that role until becoming principal in 1998.

Feeney has a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Cornell University and a master's degree in education from the former Boston State College.

Superintendent Creedon's praise for Feeney was unreserved.

"I can't begin to say enough good things about Eileen Feeney," said Creedon, who grew up seven or eight houses away from her on Kendall Street in North Quincy. "Eileen was an outstanding teacher, extremely gifted. She went to North Quincy herself and, as a student, was top of her class, simply brilliant."

Creedon called Feeney, along with former principal Peter Chrisom, a valuable link in keeping alive the traditions of North Quincy High School, which began in 1934.

"Donahue, Rogers, Webster-Smith, McCoy, she had all the old names as teachers," said Creedon. "She passes on their love for North Quincy and the school to the new students. She has been a role model, always, for what it means to be a teacher."

Feeney is only the fourth principal at North Quincy High. James Collins, the school's first principal, was succeeded by his assistant, John Walsh. Walsh was succeeded by his assistant, Peter Chrisom, who was succeeded by his assistant, Feeney.

ARTHUR THE AARDVARK will celebrate his "half birthday" Saturday, Nov. 6 at 10:30 a.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center. The party will feature games, songs, stories and refreshments. Arthur will stop by to join in the celebration. Registration is required. Families may register at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. The program is co-sponsored by the Quincy Family Network and the Thomas Crane Public Library, with grant funding from WGBH Television and the American Library Association, Association for Library Services to Children.

Foot Notes
by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

FOOT SURGERY & DIABETICS

Diabetics who choose to have foot or ankle surgery may be at greater risk for bone and joint degeneration, according to a recent study presented to the American Orthopaedic Foot and Ankle Society. Because of nerve damage, diabetics are less sensitive to foot pain. Consequently, they are susceptible to recurring ulcerations, foot and ankle instability and deformities that make wearing shoes or braces impossible. When they try to correct these problems with surgery, they can develop Charcot disease, a destructive form of bone and joint degeneration. Surgeons are seeing more complications related to diabetics' foot surgeries because more procedures are being done to prevent amputation. Amputation used to be the diabetic's only choice for treating severe foot complications.

November is National Diabetes Month, designed to communicate the seriousness of the disease and the importance of proper diabetes control. Here at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, we've seen the results of untreated and self treated diabetic foot problems and we can't advise strongly enough for diabetics to seek professional care. Whether you are dealing with diabetes-related problems or feet that just hurt, please give us a call at 617-472-3466.

P.S. Immobilizing a patient in a non-weight-bearing cast after surgery can help prevent or reduce the risk of Charcot disease.

Four Residents Complete Red Cross Nurse Assistant, Health Aide Course

Four Quincy residents recently completed an American Red Cross of Massachusetts Nurse Assistant and Home Health Aide Training course.

Joan Andrade, Stephanie Coughlin, Erica Gomes and Kathleen Marcucci, all of Quincy, completed the job skills training program necessary to work in a health care field as a nurse assistant or home health aide.

The Red Cross offers the training course to provide a steady workforce of trained individuals to meet the rising health care needs of an aging population.

In the last decade, the percentage of elderly has risen 6.5 percent in the greater Boston area. At this rate, estimates show that by the year 2020, one is six area residents will be 65 years or older. Growing numbers of elderly and disabled people will require assistance in performing their daily living activities whether they live at home, in a nursing home, or attend adult day care centers.

Day or evening classes are available in Boston, Framingham, Quincy, and Peabody. Cost for the 100-hour course is $515. Graduates receive both Red Cross nurse assistant and home health aide certificates upon completion of course requirements.

Graduates will be scheduled for the Nurse Aide State Exam, and are also provided with references from the Red Cross, which will assist in job searches and placements.

To register, call the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay Customer Call Center at (617) 375-0700, ext. 221, 235, or 272, to register.

Kolson Loses Bid For Councillor At-Large Seat

incumbent Linda Stice, 51, the third seat with 9,314.

Robert L. Foley, 71, was fourth with 5,032 and John Swanson fifth with 4,361.

Incumbent Sean Barry decided not to seek re-election, creating a vacant seat.

Ward 2 and Ward 4 incumbents, Daniel G. Raymondi, 52, and Michael D'Amico, 24, were re-elected without opposition. Raymondi received 2,062 votes. There were 30 write-in votes and 402 blanks in the Ward 2 race. D'Amico polled 2,186 votes. There were 135 write-in votes and 379 blanks in the Ward 4 race.

Election winners expressed their thanks to supporters and family as well as to challengers for waging issue-oriented campaigns.

THERE WERE PLENTY of campaign signs and some candidates, too, Tuesday, near the Squantum School greeting voters. Among the candidates are Councillor Tim Cahill, Joseph Newton, Mayor James Sheets, Councillor Paul Harold and School Committeewoman Linda Stice. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

"I'd like to thank the residents of Quincy for their vote of confidence in today's municipal election," Harold said. "It speaks well for the work we've done in the city's finances and government."

Harold thanked the voters for their continued support and for again placing him on the top spot of the councillor at large voting. "I went out and had a chance to visit all the wards," Harold said of the day's campaigning. "The campaign never stops."

"I'd like to congratulate Paul Harold for topping the ticket and also Frank McCauley on his victory. He deserves it," said Cahill. "It was a tough field."

Cahill was especially grateful to his family for their unconditional support. "It's been a long year," Cahill said. "We've been through a lot but we've been through it together. This is the year I found out who my real friends were, but I found out that I have a lot of friends."

McCauley won his fourth councillor at-large race, and 13th local election overall Tuesday. His other victories on the Quincy ballot: four as mayor, three school committee and two ward council races.

"We had a very strong field. It was one of the more difficult elections in terms of competition that I have been involved in. I want to thank all the people who turned out and voted for me and for placing their trust and confidence in me.

"I look forward to working with the other incumbents and our two new councillors, Greg Hanley and Joe Newton," McCauley said.

Hanley praised Patten for running a strong, clean campaign. "It was a hard fought battle. I had a great organization behind me and I want to thank all the people who supported me. I really felt the race was very clean and run on the merits of both candidates.

"There was only a difference of about 400 votes between Russell and myself and I hope to earn the respect and support of the 1600 people who didn't vote for me Tuesday. I want to make a difference by appealing to the working men and women of the ward," Hanley added.

"It feels wonderful" said Newton. "We ran a great, positive campaign and I'd like to thank everyone who showed up and voted. Jim Stamos ran a great campaign. But it all starts now. Now I'm going to address the issues we've been working on."

"This election was different," Cedrone said, "in that, in a way, it was a judgment on my last four years, on my work."

"There were five good people who ran," Stice said. "I think people took it seriously and I'm thrilled. It will be a challenging four years but it's work that is definitely worth doing."

Voters: Yes On Questions, 2, 3; No On Question 1

Voters also had their say on three non-binding questions:

On Question 1 they voted against using Quincy shorelines for arrival or departure of casino boats, 11,703 "No" to 5,721 "Yes."

On Question 2 they strongly favored taking Lot No. 23 in Squantum Marina Bay by eminent domain for open space preservation, "Yes" 13,223 to 3,705 "No."

On Question 3 to protect low and moderate income tenants in governmentally involved housing, the vote was much closer with 8,588 "Yes" and 8,101 "No."

Thirty six percent of Quincy's 50,792 registered voters cast ballots Tuesday. The 30 voting precincts' results were tabulated before 9 p.m.

Council Approves But After Hard Questions

$500,000 More For Library

By CRAIG SALTERS

The city council Monday appropriated an additional $500,000 to continue work on the Thomas Crane Library addition.

But not before asking some hard questions of DPW Commissioner David Colton.

Colton answered back, saying that, despite some setbacks, the project was going smoothly and that the new addition would be finished by next summer.

The new appropriation brings the estimated cost of the library close to the $15 million mark, with $3.5 million provided by the state and the rest by the city.

"First and foremost, and for the record, there have been no overruns on the construction contract to date," Colton said at Tuesday night's meeting. "The architects, Mr. Gerry (Lester Gerry, director of Building Construction/Management) and the Clerk of the Works (Paul Hemphill) have done a superb job in managing the construction process."

Colton presented the council with a financial update on the library project, per an earlier request from Councillor McCauley, and attributed the need for new money to two factors: "unresolved bid prices at the time of contract award" and "a shortfall of fund raising."

Colton said that when the contract was awarded five subcontractors -- miscellaneous metals, electrical, HVAC, glass and glazing, and elevators -- were not finalized.

McCauley Blocks Vote On Twin Rivers Plans

An objection Monday by Councillor Frank McCauley put an end to any discussion of Twin Rivers' proposed $77 million expansion.

McCauley said that he had only received information on the project that day and needed more time to understand it, especially the details of the tax breaks Twin Rivers is seeking. "The project, as a whole, I have no problem with," McCauley added.

After his motion to send the items to committee failed, McCauley formally objected, which automatically postponed any discussion or voting until the council's next meeting.

Twin Rivers executives, including President James Ricci and Senior Vice President Paul Angelico, were on hand to discuss the proposed tax breaks and to answer any questions the council might have on its proposed expansion.

The company, located at the former Procter & Gamble site on Washington St., is a worldwide distributor of fatty acid products. It is asking for state and city tax relief to pursue a $77 million capital renovation program over a ten-year period. Twin Rivers estimates that the renovations will bring 25 more full-time jobs to the Quincy Point area.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi expressed some disappointment that Twin Rivers did not get a chance to speak but said it was to be expected. "It's all part of the process,". Raymondi

Sheets Has Longer Stay At Medical Center

Mayor James Sheets was to remain at Quincy Medical Center until at least Wednesday because of injuries suffered in a fall at home last Saturday.

"He will remain in the hospital until Wednesday for observation," Executive Secretary John Keenan told The Sun Tuesday.

It had been reported that the mayor had gone home Tuesday. But he did not.

He suffered a badly bruised hip and shoulder bruises when he fell an estimated seven feet when an attic ladder gave way while he was storing household articles.

Keenan said Sheets was doing well but doctors were being cautious about potential blood clotting from the

With her is Sarah Faberge, daughter of Theo Faberge who designed the egg which features John and Abigail Adams, first occupants of the White House. The drawing raised $30,000 which will go toward purchasing a fountain at the new entrance to Merrymount Park.

Quincy College Receives Grant From Bell Atlantic

Quincy College has received a $7,000 grant from The Bell Atlantic Foundation to make schoolchildren more aware of their career options.

The grant will enable middle school youth from Quincy and Plymouth to explore career possibilities through the use of an interactive computer program.

Services will be provided to students in five middle schools in Quincy and two middle schools in Plymouth.

"We think sharing resources is an excellent strategy for increasing student achievement and self-esteem, and are proud of this program," said Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College. "For at-risk youth who may not ordinarily be given the opportunity to explore career options, visiting Quincy College and access to the SIGI-PLUS are strategies that help convince at-risk youth that they can excel."

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

HAGLUND'S DEFORMITY

Haglund's Deformity begins as a light red, hardened, tender spot high on the back of the heel. The condition is caused by an inflammation of the fluid-filled sac (bursa) that sits between the heel skin and the Achilles tendon, which attaches the calf muscle to the heel bone. When the inflamed bursa gets bigger, a red lump appears under the skin of the heel and causes pain at and above the heel. The swelling may harden if the deformity becomes chronic. Most often, women who wear high-heeled shoes develop Haglund's Deformity. In mild cases, applying ice helps reduce inflammation, while wearing foam rubber or felt heel pads may relieve pressure on the heel. More serious cases often require anti-inflammatory drugs.

Bearing all of the body's weight with every step, the heel is subject to considerable stress. Weight gain, high impact athletic activities, even prolonged walking or standing increase such stress. When heel pain is the body's answer to this stress, there are both temporary and permanent treatments to eliminate the problems. Any treatment, however, begins with a call to your podiatrist. Located at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, new patients are always welcome. Call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. Surgical removal of part of the heel bone is sometimes recommended to treat chronic cases of Haglund's Deformity.

Atlantic Center Receives Eviction Notice

Pat Thorley, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, announced to the city council Monday night that the ANC had been served with an eviction notice.

The community center faces eviction from its 11 Hayward St. location unless the city pays the $17,299 in backrent it owes by today (Thursday).

The city signed a two-year lease with a two-year option with Dr. Herbert Shuster, owner of the Shuster building. Dr. Shuster passed away a few months ago.

The rent at 11 Hayward is $28,000 a year.

Thorley, who was joined by several Atlantic residents, said that she had approached the Planning Board as early as July and was told that everything was under control. After many phone calls to many departments, the eviction notice came as a shock. "I can't baby-sit the city of Quincy," Thorley said. "I felt like a second class citizen living in my first class city."

Thorley said that residents understood when plans to move the ANC to the former Disabled American Veterans building on Newbury Ave. were put on hold because of the hospital crisis, but that now it was their turn. "We need to move fast on this," Thorley urged. "We have until Nov. 11 to deal with whatever mistake has been made."

Despite her frustration, Thorley said she was not blaming the council. She said that every council member had worked with the ANC at some point in its 26 years of service to Quincy. Thorley made special note of Councillor Bruce Ayers, who has an office in the ANC and who has raised close to $30,000 over the years for its survival.

Thorley emphasized several of ANC's community programs and the fact that many groups make use of the center at no charge.

Councillor Raymondi, who brought the issue up for discussion, wanted to know why an appropriation hadn't been made earlier given the urgency of the situation. "The city of Quincy made a lease agreement to pay two years of rent and we haven't done that," Raymondi said. "Now what guarantees can we offer this community?"

John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, said that the city was well aware of it contractual obligations and was locating funds to pay the rent and forestall any eviction. Keenan said that the mayor's office had spoken to Dr. Shuster in the early summer but that "Dr. Shuster passed away and the dynamics changed."

Ayers agreed with that assessment. "The city had a good working relationship with Dr. Shuster through the mayor's office, but, unfortunately, Dr. Shuster passed away," Ayers said.

"I've worked closely with the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and they play a very important role in the community," continued Ayers. "They offer a wide variety of programs and activities, from children to seniors, and it's paramount that the center remain open."

In fact, that night Ayers brought another $5,000 to the ANC as part of a package from the Newton Group, who received a special P.U.D. permit to build additional senior housing on Marina Bay.

Quincy College Receives Grant From Bell Atlantic

Quincy College has received a $7,000 grant from The Bell Atlantic Foundation to make schoolchildren more aware of their career options.

The grant will enable middle school youth from Quincy and Plymouth to explore career possibilities through the use of an interactive computer program.

Services will be provided to students in five middle schools in Quincy and two middle schools in Plymouth.

"We think sharing resources is an excellent strategy for increasing student achievement and self-esteem, and are proud of this program," said Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College. "For at-risk youth who may not ordinarily be given the opportunity to explore career options, visiting Quincy College and access to the SIGI-PLUS are strategies that help convince at-risk youth that they can excel."

HAGLUND'S DEFORMITY

Haglund's Deformity begins as a light red, hardened, tender spot high on the back of the heel. The condition is caused by an inflammation of the fluid-filled sac (bursa) that sits between the heel skin and the Achilles tendon, which attaches the calf muscle to the heel bone. When the inflamed bursa gets bigger, a red lump appears under the skin of the heel and causes pain at and above the heel. The swelling may harden if the deformity becomes chronic. Most often, women who wear high-heeled shoes develop Haglund's Deformity. In mild cases, applying ice helps reduce inflammation, while wearing foam rubber or felt heel pads may relieve pressure on the heel. More serious cases often require anti-inflammatory drugs.

Bearing all of the body's weight with every step, the heel is subject to considerable stress. Weight gain, high impact athletic activities, even prolonged walking or standing increase such stress. When heel pain is the body's answer to this stress, there are both temporary and permanent treatments to eliminate the problems. Any treatment, however, begins with a call to your podiatrist. Located at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, new patients are always welcome. Call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. Surgical removal of part of the heel bone is sometimes recommended to treat chronic cases of Haglund's Deformity.

Atlantic Center Receives Eviction Notice

Pat Thorley, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, announced to the city council Monday night that the ANC had been served with an eviction notice.

The community center faces eviction from its 11 Hayward St. location unless the city pays the $17,299 in backrent it owes by today (Thursday).

The city signed a two-year lease with a two-year option with Dr. Herbert Shuster, owner of the Shuster building. Dr. Shuster passed away a few months ago.

The rent at 11 Hayward is $28,000 a year.

Thorley, who was joined by several Atlantic residents, said that she had approached the Planning Board as early as July and was told that everything was under control. After many phone calls to many departments, the eviction notice came as a shock. "I can't baby-sit the city of Quincy," Thorley said. "I felt like a second class citizen living in my first class city."

Thorley said that residents understood when plans to move the ANC to the former Disabled American Veterans building on Newbury Ave. were put on hold because of the hospital crisis, but that now it was their turn. "We need to move fast on this," Thorley urged. "We have until Nov. 11 to deal with whatever mistake has been made."

Despite her frustration, Thorley said she was not blaming the council. She said that every council member had worked with the ANC at some point in its 26 years of service to Quincy. Thorley made special note of Councillor Bruce Ayers, who has an office in the ANC and who has raised close to $30,000 over the years for its survival.

Thorley emphasized several of ANC's community programs and the fact that many groups make use of the center at no charge.

Councillor Raymondi, who brought the issue up for discussion, wanted to know why an appropriation hadn't been made earlier given the urgency of the situation. "The city of Quincy made a lease agreement to pay two years of rent and we haven't done that," Raymondi said. "Now what guarantees can we offer this community?"

John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, said that the city was well aware of it contractual obligations and was locating funds to pay the rent and forestall any eviction. Keenan said that the mayor's office had spoken to Dr. Shuster in the early summer but that "Dr. Shuster passed away and the dynamics changed."

Ayers agreed with that assessment. "The city had a good working relationship with Dr. Shuster through the mayor's office, but, unfortunately, Dr. Shuster passed away," Ayers said.

"I've worked closely with the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and they play a very important role in the community," continued Ayers. "They offer a wide variety of programs and activities, from children to seniors, and it's paramount that the center remain open."

In fact, that night Ayers brought another $5,000 to the ANC as part of a package from the Newton Group, who received a special P.U.D. permit to build additional senior housing on Marina Bay.

WARD 5 COUNCILLOR Stephen Durkin (second from left) presents a $500 check to Michelle Lydon, chairperson of the Sailor's Home Cemetery Restoration Committee. Looking on are Ed Kyle of Wollaston and Doug Gutro, president, Ward 5 Community Association. The committee's goal is to raise funds to maintain the cemetery and to erect a memorial to veterans interred in the cemetery, most of whom were 19th century naval servicemen. The cemetery is located off Fenno St. adjacent to the saltmarsh. "It is important that we remember all our veterans, whether they served to protect our nation in time of war, or in peacetime -- and that we respectfully preserve and maintain our veterans' final resting place."

Stage Set For Sheets-Harold Mayoral Battle?

That big mayoral battle between Jim Sheets and Paul Harold that didn't happen this year already appears to be perking for 2001.

Sheets may have set the stage election night last week after winning an historic sixth term with 85 percent of the vote over a challenger who would have needed a miracle or two in all 30 ballot boxes.

SHEETS

HAROLD

"At this point in time, I look forward to running again," Sheets was quoted.

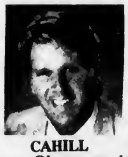
That statement isn't exactly an official announcement for a seventh term.

The next two years will be a different point in time. And things do happen to change minds and plans.

But one sure thing about that statement: it keeps Sheets from being labeled a "lame duck" mayor with waning powers.

He'll be running the show around City Hall for the next two years with all the authority he has run it with the last 10 years.

Harold came within an inch or two of stepping into the mayoral ring and taking Sheets on this year. His closest advisers almost had to drag him away from a challenge this year.



Lack of money finally convinced him to wait. It's been estimated it would have taken something like $100,000 this year to wage an effective campaign against a popular incumbent like Sheets.

Two years from now, that price tag could be $200,000. Political inflation.

While reluctantly deciding not to run for mayor this year, Harold made another decision: to definitely run in 2001 regardless of whether Sheets makes a seventh term bid or not.

Harold topped the city council at-large field this year for the third straight time, a jump-start position for a mayoral bid two years from now.

Harold made progress in that department, widening his lead over another mayoral hopeful, Tim Cahill who again finished second. Harold polled 11,564 votes in a six-candidate field to Cahill's 10,119, a margin of 1,445 votes. Two years ago, Harold's margin was 1,113.

CAHILL

Observers don't think Cahill would run against Sheets. But if Sheets is not in the picture, Cahill tells friends he will run against Harold.

Another mayoral hopeful is Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi who again was unopposed this year. He too is unlikely to challenge Sheets but would consider mixing it up with Harold and Cahill.

RAYMONDI

A Sheets-Harold matchup or a Harold-Cahill-Raymondi battle would get the new century and new millennium off to a roaring political start.

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Peter Kolson is taking his loss--his first political defeat--in last week's city election philosophically.

KOLSON

When it became obvious election night that he was not gong to win one of the three council at-large seats, a friend consoled him: "What a tragedy."

Kolson responded that he himself was putting things in proper perspective.

"Two hundred and 16 people at the bottom of the ocean is a tragedy," he told the friend. "An election defeat is only a disappointment."

Kolson says he has no regrets about giving up his Ward 1 seat to run against three incumbents for an at-large seat.

"No regrets at all," he says. "I can come back in two years and run again if I so desire."

Kolson, who is completing his fifth term as Ward 1 councillor, says he can look back to his accomplishments during those 10 years.

"I think I have left things in a better way than when I came in," he says.

THE TWO NEW ward councillors, Greg Hanley (Ward 1) and Joseph Newton (Ward 6) may hold the key votes as to who will be the new council president.

HANLEY

NEWTON

Both are being wooed by the three top contenders, Paul Harold, Tim Cahill and Dan Raymondi.

Five votes are needed to win the gavel. Hanley's and Newton's would be two of the big ones.

Meanwhile, Ward 3's Pat McDermott is ready to step in as the compromise candidate if Cahill, Harold and Raymondi can't put the five votes together.

McDERMOTT

THE CITY ELECTION, of course, is non-partisan but here's a little tidbit passed along by Bob Denvir, former city purchasing agent and long-time political observer.

Houghs Neck (Ward 1, Precinct 5) is a Democratic stronghold but three of the top vote getters in that precinct last week were Republicans: Christine Cedrone (550), Frank McCauley (549) and Russell Patten (527).

City-wide, Cedrone topped the school committee field and McCauley won the third council at-large seat.

Patten took Precinct 5 over Greg Hanley by 162 votes but lost the ward and the council seat to him by 418 votes.

Jim Sheets was the top Democrat in Precinct 5 with 667 votes.

LOOKING INTO THE future, keep an eye on two new political names: William Phelan and Joseph Finn.

PHELAN

FINN

Both made impressive political debuts in last week's city election.

Phelan not only won the school committee seat vacated by Sean Barry but vaulted into the second spot, 1,346 votes behind front runner incumbent Christine Cedrone but 494 votes ahead of third place winner incumbent Linda Stice.

Finn wasn't a winner but he caused quite a buzz in the city council at-large race.

Up against three incumbents--Harold, Cahill and former Mayor Frank McCauley--and a fourth councillor, Peter Kolson, Finn polled 6,175 votes, just 79 votes behind runner-up Kolson.

Phelan already appears to be on his way to a bright political future and Finn not far behind.

THEY DIDN'T WIN but John Cain and Arline Goodman deserve some credit for making first time political runs this year. And against strong incumbents, Pat McDermott and Steve Durkin.

CAIN

GOODMAN

Both Cain and Goodman had issues they wanted to get out before the people and they feel they did.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1927 POSTCARD view of Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs looking north from the end of Hayward Street at the Wheelhouse Diner. The Regent Theater has been replaced by a new building now a BankBoston branch soon to be a Fleet Boston branch. This will be the fifth bank name here in 10 years. It was once the site of Dunkin Donuts' first office. The next building to the left was owned by the Boston Gear Works for many years and is now a parking lot for the bank. The triple-decker is still there but the unsightly overheard utility lines are gone.

Hospice: A Concept Of Care

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Among America's greatest unsung heroes are hospice chaplains. The Deware Funeral Home was very proud to have joined with the Hospice Federation of America recently to celebrate Pastoral Care: Celebration of Love. Hospice chaplains work with people who are dying--360,000 of them last year--and with their families who are already grieving as they face the loss of a loved one. It is sad, challenging work, yet hospice chaplains provide not only spiritual guidance, but friendship and companionship at a time when both are in short supply.

Even today, while attitudes on death and dying have been changing and we speak more openly about them, terminally-ill people too often find loneliness their most constant companion, as family and friends withdraw, psychologically if not physically, unwilling or unable to deal with the prospect which we all face.

As hospice patients grow weaker and closer to death, as families struggle with their emotions, and are drained of their psychic and physical energy, pastoral care clergy remain one of the unfailing sources of comfort by continuing to be there when the patient needs them.

What hospice and pastoral care mean is beautifully illustrated by a simple story of a widower, without surviving children, who remain silent, aloof and unresponsive to everyone including the chaplain. The Chaplain one day reached out and placed his hand on the old man's arm. Tears welled up in the man's eyes and the chaplain feared he had offended. Before he could withdraw his hand, the man said, almost in a whisper, "It has been ten years since anyone has touched me other than for medical reasons. Thank you."

Hospice is not a place, but a concept of care based on the promise that when medical science can no longer add days to life, more life can be added to each day. Part of that quality is what the hospice chaplain brings. The focus of a visit does not even have to be religious in nature, unless that is what the patient wants. Pastoral caregivers are more likely to be remembered not for what they said, so much as for the fact that they simply were there -- in time, in love, with compassion. They deserve recognition, our thanks and appreciation always. That is why this week is so important in reminding us of their special contribution.

A Thank You From Goodman

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I'd like to thank all those Ward 5 residents who voted for me and all the people across the city who supported my candidacy. I also wish to thank The Quincy Sun for all of its election coverage.

Being a first time candidate for public office was a great learning experience, and one I'll never forget. I got to meet hundreds of the nicest people and learned much from everyone I met. Thank you all.

I tried to stick to the issues and had the opportunity to bring issues out to the public, and I hope Ward 5 residents are now more informed.

I also wish to congratulate Councillor Durkin on his election to a third term as Ward 5 councillor.

John Noonan Grand Marshal For Christmas Parade

John Noonan, a life-long Quincy resident and longtime advocate for Quincy's elder population, has been named grand marshal of the 47th annual Quincy Christmas Parade Sunday, Nov. 28.

Noonan has served as an active member of the Quincy Council on Aging

JOHN NOONAN

Board for 26 years, including Board Chairman for the past 16 years.

One of Noonan's proudest accomplishments was helping to campaign to keep Quincy Hospital open. Working with Mayor James Sheets, Noonan organized the support of Quincy's senior community in sending letters, making phone calls and traveling to the State House to let South Shore's legislators know the concerns of the elder population; the message that Quincy's senior citizens needed a hospital.

Noonan has also been active in a wide array of community, church, and civic causes over the years.

He serves on the Citizens' Advisory Committee for the Quincy Center Concourse as the publicist for the committee. He was appointed by Mayor James Sheets five years ago to represent the concerns of seniors on the construction of the $8.5 million roadway and bridge to be built in downtown Quincy Center.

Noonan has many years of experiencing legislation in health care and public health laws. He was a volunteer newspaper editor for 18 years for St. John the Baptist Church, for which he won a national award. In past years, he was a volunteer with Quincy Community Television, producing award-winning programs regarding senior issues. His programs have featured Walter Cronkite, President Gerald Ford, Gov. Michael Dukakis, and Gov. William Weld, winning national and state recognition for his work.

He has a BS and master's degree and has taken special courses of study at Umass in public health and gerontology.

Since retirement, he has volunteered with: Massachusetts Public Health Association, Massachusetts Association of Older Americans, Quincy Citizens Committee, Quincy Christmas Festival Committee and Quincy Chapter of AARP.

In addition, Noonan is a founding member and a director of South Shore Elder Services, president of South Shore Coordinating Transportation, member of the Board of Directors of Massachusetts Association of Older Americans, and served on the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Division of Adult and Elder Health.

He has also served as a member of St. John's Vincent dePaul Society, providing assistance to the poor and needy of the parish.

Noonan's selection as parade grand marshal was unanimous, said Festival Committee General Chairman George White.

"We are recognizing a man who champions the causes of our elder population. The Committee thought that this is a much deserved recognition based on his many years of volunteer service to a variety of benevolent causes," White said.

Spotlight On The Two New Councillors

Hanley To Bring Business-Like Approach

By CRAIG SALTERS

GREG HANLEY

Greg Hanley may not be an official city councillor yet, but he's already got the headaches of one.

"I'm interested in that city assessor's report; it should come out around the 13th," the newly elected Ward 1 councillor said during an interview with The Quincy Sun. "It will show substantial increases in net value, which will increase the taxes that residents pay. I don't want to lose any city services, especially in light of an increase in people's taxes."

No-nonsense statements like this are common for Hanley, a local businessman who seems to approach issues in a decisive, business-like fashion.

Hanley said one of his first orders of business was to sit down with outgoing Ward 1 Councillor and current Council President Peter Kolson to "ensure a smooth transition."

After that, Hanley wants to get to work on what he sees as Ward 1's most pressing need: traffic safety.

"A woman was killed on Sea Street last year," Hanley said, "and Paul Harold's dad before that. You've got young families, a lot of kids, in that area, and some younger drivers ignoring posted stop signs."

Hanley wants better enforcement of current stop signs and posted speed limits; he said Sea St., Manet Ave., Southern Artery, and Furnace Brook Parkway are the best places to start.

Hanley is outspoken in his opposition to Phase Two of the new Quincy Concourse, which he sees as not enough return on investment. Phase Two, said Hanley, would involve costly eminent domain land purchases at a time when the real estate market is booming. "I really don't see the need for it," said Hanley. "The money used there could be better used other places."

He's just as outspoken in his support for the construction of the new Quincy High School, especially given the state's current policy of reimbursing money spent on new schools.

"I believe we have to build another high school," Hanley said. "Central Middle School (which will be moved to the current QHS) is 108 years old. It's fully depreciated. Now is the time to act. My only question is, 'Is that the best site?'"

According to Hanley, the current site off Quincy Avenue adjacent to Faxon Park is a former dump site for Bethlehem Steel and General Dynamics and its estimated clean-up is over $1 million. Says Hanley:

"It has to be fully remediated. Partial cleaning isn't good enough. Not when I have four kids who will be going through the Quincy Public Schools and will be attending Quincy High School."

When it comes to the modernization of the Fore River Shipyard, Hanley praises Mayor Sheets' leadership but is less than impressed with Sotirios Emmanouil, owner of MHI. Said Hanley:

"I'm optimistic because this mayor went and got the finances because he believed in jobs for the city. Mayor Sheets took the lead. Recently, the current owner hasn't demonstrated an ability to secure shipbuilding contracts. The shipyard, with the mayor's leadership, is still a viable option, but maybe we need a different owner. We went to bat for him (Emmanouil) and he sold us a bill of goods, it appears."

When asked about the Highpoint issue, Hanley was quick to return the question: "Which Highpoint?" he asked.

"I was against the 1600 unit Highpoint," he continued. "I was for the 1,140 version which went before the council, with the $20 million mitigation: the Headstart program, the fire station, the clean-up. It was signed off on by the Planning Board. That to me made sense."

Asked to name a councillor to model himself after, Hanley went back to former Ward 1 Councillor Ed Graham, whose house Hanley now lives in. "Ed Graham served his time, was well respected, did an honorable job, and moved on after he made his contribution," Hanley said. "When I think how he raised four children with dignity, I think that's an accomplishment."

'Quality Of Life' Issues A Top Priority For Newton

By CRAIG SALTERS

JOSEPH NEWTON
(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth)

Tip O'Neill once said, "All politics is local."

New Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton wants to take that advice to heart.

In a recent interview with The Quincy Sun Newton said he heard his constituents loud and clear: focus on sidewalk repair, garbage, traffic, and youth activities in the ward.

In the bigger picture, Newton wants a closer look at Highpoint, the expansion of community policing, no city-wide community center, and says that only safety issues would make him vote for more long-term bonded indebtedness for the city.

"Being a city councillor is one of the few political jobs where you have a consistently direct impact on your constituents," said Newton. "Ward 6 is so geographically diverse -- Marina Bay, Squantum, Norfolk Downs -- but the core issues are those that effect people's quality of life.

"Road and sidewalk repair is the biggest issue in Ward 6, followed by parking issues in places like Holyoke and Glover Streets. And some of this is not just aesthetics, but safety. At this point the only major capital investments I've been looking into are road and sidewalk repair."

Those investments will have to wait until January because, Newton is quick to point out, he is not yet a city councillor. "There's a certain etiquette here," said Newton. "Ward 6 already has a city councillor."

Another area the new councillor will examine is community policing. According to Newton, North Quincy residents are very positive about their community policing program and Newton would like to see that program expanded into Squantum and other areas.

Newton sees activities for kids as a city-wide issue but doesn't favor a city-wide solution. "Across the board I want to increase youth activities for all of North Quincy and give the kids something to do," Newton said. "But we should use and expand the existing community centers."

Newton argued that a city-wide youth center would be great for the area it sits in but wouldn't be of much use to anyone else. Newton wants increased access to school gymnasiums for the athletically-inclined and increased access to public transportation, such as increased bus routes, to make it easier for kids to go to the movies or a youth center.

Given that he was not a councillor during the meetings in which Highpoint was discussed, Newton doubts whether he'll even be allowed to vote on the issue, but he does offer an opinion:

"I know, hindsight is a wonderful thing, but given the position the city finds now finds itself in, knowing our possible liabilities and responsibilities, the city has to take a closer look. I was for Highpoint when it got down to low numbers and a high mitigation package. I felt, at that point, it was the right deal."

On the revitalization of the shipyard, Newton feels that shipbuilding is just one of the possibilities for that area. "Industry in that area is a key to Quincy's future," Newton said. "Whether it's a shipyard or an industrial park, whether they're making sneakers or ships, I don't care as long as they're paying taxes."

In terms of the budget, Newton said that, with the bailout of Quincy Medical Center, the revitalization of the shipyard, and building of the new high school on Quincy's plate, he is not in favor of further long-term bonding unless it was a clear-cut safety issue.

"My major concern is the fiscal fitness of the city of Quincy," Newton said. "The economy is good but we should be saving for a rainy day. I don't believe in credit card government. You've got to be cautious."

Asked to comment on any personal goals, Newton said that he was content just to appreciate his recent election and devote his full-time to working for Ward 6, but he added that, "One personal goal is that, when I leave, that people say, 'Hey, that Joe Newton did a good job.'"

Fair Housing Committee Creates 2-Year Calendar For New Millennium

The Mayor's Fair Housing Committee in partnership with the city's secondary schools has created a two-year calendar to begin the new century and millennium.

The calendar, featuring the poster artwork of 20 students from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and the Woodward School, begins with Jan. 1, 2000 and is now available for purchase.

Joan M. Pritchard, chairwoman for the project, said, "The committee's goal was to educate our city's youth and promote fair housing to the citizenship of Quincy."

The theme of the posters, 20 of which were selected for the calendar, was " A Student's Interpretation of Fair Housing."

Mayor James Sheets and community leaders selected the 20 posters to be used for the calendar from those submitted by students.

The selected artwork, which appears in four-colors in the calendar, was created by the following students:

Quincy High School: Thanh An, Makena Cahill, Sandy Castillo, Nicole Desantis, Caitlyn Flaherty, Dave Grogan, Shawna Harrison, Joseph Hern, Pam Jacobs, Stephen Linskey and William Murphy.

North Quincy High School: Marianne Chimi, Florence Chow, Allison Downs, Heiba Eid, Darcy Fay, Tina Tam and Chuck Wan.

Woodward School: Katie Bowman and Danielle Morgan.

A reception was held recently for the students, parents, teachers and sponsors during which the finished calendars were unveiled. The calendars were produced for the Mayor's Fair Housing Committee by The Quincy Sun.

The calendars are now available for purchase at City Hall, the Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Community Action Program, Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, Bank of Canton, Quincy and North Quincy High Schools, Woodward School and The Quincy Sun.

The cost is $5 per calendar, $3 for students. Proceeds will be donated to the art departments at the high schools.

Sponsors for the project were:

Century 21 Annex Realty, Citizens Bank, Corcoran Management Company, GMAC Mortgage Corporation, Peabody Properties, BankBoston, Bank of Canton, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Eastern Bank, Jackson & Sutherland, P.C., Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company and South Shore Savings Bank.

Business Travel Safety Tips

Business travel can be stressful. Why make it more so by setting yourself up as a target for crooks? Here's what you can do -- at the airport, on the road and at your hotel or motel -- to improve the chances you'll return home safely.

At The Airport:

• Stay especially alert and watch your bags and computer carefully at all times. Don't let anyone but uniformed airline personnel handle or watch your bags.

• Watch out for staged mishaps, like someone bumping into you or spilling a drink. Often it's a ploy to divert your attention.

• Carry your purse close to your body, or your wallet in an inside front pocket. Better yet, wear a money pouch under your clothes.

• Keep a separate record of the contents of checked luggage. And keep anything of value in a carry-on that stays with you.

• Avoid displaying expensive cameras, jewelry, and luggage that might draw attention. Your aim should be to blend in with the crowd.

On The Road:

• Become familiar with your travel route before you start. Get a map and study it.

• Make sure your rental car is in good operating condition. Learn how to operate all windows, door locks and other equipment before you leave the lot.

• Keep your maps and rental agreement concealed, not lying on the seat or the dashboard.

• Keep car doors locked while you are driving. Store luggage in the trunk, out of site.

• Park in well-lighted areas only, close to building entrances and walkways.

• Have car keys ready when approaching your car. Check the back seat and floors before you get in.

• If you are bumped by another car, think before you get out. If you are in doubt or uncomfortable, signal the other driver to follow you to a nearby police station or a busy, well-lighted area where it's safe to get out.

Gabriele Weiler Participates In Boston-N.Y. AIDS Ride

Gabriele Weiler of Quincy, a senior at The Cambridge School of Weston, and daughter of Peter Weiler of Quincy and Judith Weiler of Stow, participated in this year's Boston to New York AIDS Ride.

For the third year in a row, the school sent a team on the ride. Fifteen students, two parents, and two faculty members made up this year's 19-member team. Despite the disappointment and delays caused by Hurricane Floyd, the riders were enthusiastic about their experience.

Along with training for the physical demands of the ride, each rider had to raise a minimum of $1,700. As a team, The Cambridge School of Weston riders raised approximately $50,000 toward the cause.

Quincy Students To Participate In Team Harmony Rally Nov. 16

Students from six Quincy schools will join more than 10,000 middle and high school youth from public and private schools from five states on Tuesday, Nov. 16 at the FleetCenter, Boston, for Team Harmony VI, the interactive rally against racism, hatred and discrimination of all kids.

Team Harmony VI will educate through interactive discussions and dramatic presentations that present effective ways to combat incidents of racism and discrimination. Now in its sixth year in Boston, Team Harmony is a collaborative effort of the Team Harmony Foundation, the Anti-Defamation League of New England, Fleet Bank, JAM'N 94.5 and Boston's professional sports teams.

Team Harmony VI will unite students from North Quincy High School, Quincy High School, Sterling Middle School, Atlantic Middle School, Broad Meadows Middle School and Central Middle School with more than 400 schools from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Maine and New York for this powerful display of diversity. The event will also recognize outstanding examples of leadership and anti-bias programs with the Lewis/Jennings and the Fleet Bank/Team Harmony awards.

Past Team Harmony participants include First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Cong. John Lewis, and the Rev. Bernice King. This year's program will feature athletes and legends from Boston's professional sports teams, interactive discussions and a variety of musical, dance and dramatic presentations.

Quincy students will be invited to actively participate in the multi-media event, a unique combination of entertainment, education and inspiration, based on the philosophy of a "team" effort to overcome bigotry and driven by a belief in giving youth a chance to make a difference. The Team Harmony event concept grew out of a friendship between Boston Celtics captain, the late Reggie Lewis, and Jon Jennings, former assistance coach for the Celtics. Jennings and Lewis wanted to end the discrimination that was leading to violence in schools.

Through its six years, Team Harmony has become a national model for inspiring and empowering students to deal with issues of discrimination, recently earning a spot on The White House's Web site as one of the top 10 success programs to combat discrimination.

THE DENNIS RYAN Award was presented to Robert and Gloria Noble for long-time service at the recent 12th annual Quincy Democratic City Committee Brunch. They are flanked here by Senator Michael Morrissey (left) and Michael Cheney, chairman of the Democratic City Committee.

Bob, Gloria Noble Honored With Dennis Ryan Award

Over 300 Democrats At City Committee Brunch

Norfolk Country Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently addressed more than 300 Democrats at the 12th annual Quincy Democratic City Committee Brunch.

"Mike continues to inspire us all who are Democrats in the City of Quincy. It is clear that Mike has more than a party affiliation. He is a practicing Democrat," said Mike Cheney, chairman of the City Committee.

Cheney thanked State Reps. Ron Mariano, Steve Tobin, Bruce Ayers and State Sen. Michael Morrissey for their outstanding work on saving Quincy Hospital, now Quincy Medical Center. "Our state delegation deserves a standing ovation for the outstanding job they did for the people of Quincy. They have demonstrated their effectiveness on Beacon Hill," Cheney said.

Senate President Thomas Birmingham attended and addressed the crowded hall of city Democrats. "It was an honor and privilege to have the Senate President attend and talk about the state budget and the differences between the Republican and Democrat approaches to resolving problems on the state level," Cheney said.

Birmingham congratulated the state delegation, the unions and city officials for the outstanding work done to save Quincy Hospital. Cheney thanked Birmingham for his help and support and committed to repay the senate president's loyalty if he decides to run for governor.

"The people of Quincy owe you a debt of gratitude for the support you have given to our city. We will not forget what you have done for us in the next governor's race if you decide to run. Thank you," Cheney told Birmingham.

Each year the Quincy Democratic City Committee selects an individual or couple to receive the Dennis Ryan Award for outstanding work as a Democrat in the community. This year's recipients were Bob and Gloria Noble.

Morrissey, a long-time friend of the Noble family, made the announcement at breakfast. The senator congratulated Bob and Gloria fro their long-term commitment to the community and said he looks forward to working with the Nobles for many more years to come.

"This is an outstanding couple who keep on giving to their community and now their children have picked up the torch as well," Morrissey said.

Bob and Gloria have been involved and performed volunteer work for the city veterans, First Night Quincy, Presidents Day Committee, Christmas Festival Parade, the Marie Curry Walk and have helped out in several city elections. Last year, the Nobles were honored as the Citizens of the Year by the Jewish War Veterans Council.

"We are proud to be associated with Bob and Gloria," Cheney said. "They have given a lot to the people of Quincy. It seems every time someone is in need of help they are there. There are most deserving of this award."

Cheney thanked the members of the City Committee for helping to make this year's event an overwhelming success.

Medal Of Honor Winner Pays Tribute To Young Who Willingly Served

Young people who have willingly served their country in time of war or other great need received special recognition at Quincy's Veterans Day ceremonies Sunday.

The tribute came from keynote speaker Thomas G. Kelley, Massachusetts Commissioner of Veterans Services and Vietnam War Congressional Medal of Honor recipient.

Kelley also told young people at home today they can serve without being in uniform by helping those in need.

Kelley spoke at the World War I Doughboy statue in front of Adams Academy following the parade. Both the ceremonies and parade were sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council headed by Commandeer Lawrence Norton and representing all the city's veterans organizations.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER Thomas Kelley, state Commissioner of Veterans Services and Congressional Medal of Honor recipient, had special praise for young people who serve their country.

"You've all heard the expression 'you pick your battles' " Kelley said. "Well, my friends, the men and women who served had no choice about their battles. They just went.

"And they grew up awfully fast....too fast. Eighteen year olds became middle-aged overnight as they passed quickly through what should have been their happiest and most fun times.

"And then they came home. Or at least most of them came home. Far too many of them never had the chance to see their loved ones again, to hold an infant, to grow old with dignity. They occupy a very special place in our hearts today as they should every day. Their sacrifice was supreme. The pain of those they left behind is immeasurable."

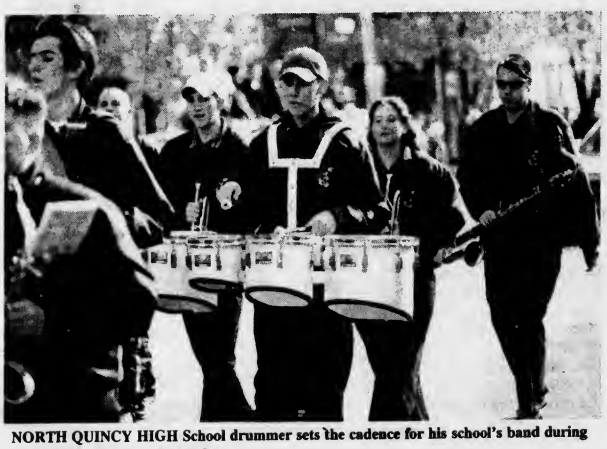
Addressing the young people present, Kelley said:

"There are men and women just a few years older than yourselves who are serving right now; soldiers keeping a fragile peace in Bosnia and Kosovo, sailors and Coast Guardsmen stopping the supply of drugs into this country and working to find the wreckage of the Egyptian airliner off Nantucket. Marines keeping our embassies safe around the world, airmen delivering emergency relief to Honduras.

"These are the same ordinary boys and girls who are doing what your parents, grandparents and generations before them have done--responded when their nation called.

"You have so many opportunities to serve, and it certainly does not have to be in uniform. There are so many needs being unfilled all around you. Young children needing tutoring in reading. Elderly folks needing a caring young and smiling face. A homeless family who needs to ladle out some soup at the local shelter.

"These and so many other acts of kindness are just as worthy and just as noble as those wearing the uniform."



Kelley, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery as a Navy lieutenant, while commanding an assault craft division under fire in Vietnam, had special praise for the Marine Corps, which is celebrating its 223rd birthday.

"United States Marines always run toward the sound of battle, not away from it," Kelley said. That's what sets marines apart and has made the corps the finest fighting force in the world."

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Services Department was the parade chairman. Irving Isaacson, past commander of the Veterans Council was the master of ceremonies.

MWRA Signs Cost-Saving Agreement With Boston Gas

Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announces it has approved a 10 year contract with Boston Gas Co. to cut the cost for bringing natural gas to MWRA's Sludge-to-Fertilizer Facility located at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

Under natural gas deregulation, MWRA has already entered into cost saving contracts for the price of the gas itself. The Boston Gas pipeline now carries gas to the facility from a pipeline in Braintree.

Under the terms of the contract, MWRA will pay Boston Gas an annual flat fee that is expected to save over $2 million over ten years as compared to the old tariff rates.

"MWRA ratepayers should be very pleased that negotiations with Boston Gas produced these savings," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas B. MacDonald.

Under energy deregulation, MWRA will bid on the quantity of gas it intends to use as well as interstate distribution costs. The new agreement with Boston Gas will go into effect after approval has been received from the Massachusetts Department of Telecommunications and Energy.

MWRA makes fertilizer at the plant from sludge that is shipped from the Deer Island Treatment Plant to Fore River. Some of the fertilizer is sold locally under the brand name Bay State Fertilizer. The bulk of the fertilizer is shipped to the South and West for use in agriculture.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

PRESCRIPTION FOR LONG LIFE

The single most important anti-aging measure that a person can take, regardless of age, is to exercise regularly. Exercise promotes longevity largely because it helps prevent coronary artery disease, high blood pressure, stroke, diabetes, obesity, osteoporosis, senility, and possibly certain cancers. This virtually anti-aging therapy also eases stress, depression, insomnia, and arthritic pain. To reap these benefits, a person need only get at least 30 minutes of exercise daily. Exercise routines should include an aerobic activity to raise the heart rate and improve heart health, weightlifting (every other day) to build bone and muscle and improve balance, and stretching to prevent stiffness. Following the regimen described above amounts to a prescription for a long life.

Exercising is much talked about, and folks always intend to do it . . . eventually. Just because you have not exercised in a long time is no reason not to reap its rich benefits by starting now. At Marina Place, a senior living residence at Four Seaport Drive, we offer both assisted living and independent living for seniors. We encourage independence and the pursuit of individual interests, and offer you privacy or the option of full participation in our social and cultural programs. Phone: 617-770-3264.

Cain Now Forming Ward 3 Association

John Cain is forming a Ward 3 Association and creating a monthly newsletter modeled after those in Ward 4 and 5.

Cain, who ran for the Ward 3 city council seat, said precinct meetings will be scheduled, utilizing local schools in each of the ward's five precincts.

Issues, concerns and goals will be confirmed on a consensus basis, he said. A monthly newsletter will be distributed throughout Ward 3 reporting activity status and community information.

Noting that Ward 3 borders Wards 2, 4, 5 and 6, Cain stressed the importance of the new association working with all the city councillors to resolve mutual issues.

Cain said he intends to follow up on issues presented to him by residents during his election campaign. He said they include:

A new multi-cultural community center for children and senior citizens, the Highpoint development project, senior citizen security, flooding problems, sidewalks, overgrown trees, repaired roads, installation of more handicap accessible entrances at some public locations, traffic flow and control and continued improvement of beaches and the shoreline.

Cain said he is now meeting with residents to participate in the formulating process for the association and identifying precinct liaison representatives for each of the five precincts in the ward.

Member guidelines, applications and annual dues information will soon be available he said by contacting him at P.O. Box 128, Quincy, MA 02170 or calling 472-5844.

Festival Committee Plans Holiday Events For Children

The Quincy Festival Committee has planned a series of festive holiday events for children for the weekend of Nov. 26-28.

On Friday evening , Nov. 26, around 6:30 p.m. there will be entertainment and a special sing-along for the children in front of the First Parish Church in downtown Quincy opposite City Hall. Colorful costume characters familiar to children will be on hand passing out candy canes.

A fun-filled comedy and musical show, especially geared for children, will be presented by Dick Coffin and his "Dum Dum Silly Willy Puppet Show." Coffin is an impressionist who keeps his show moving as he features some of the funniest voices of each of the characters he portrays.

The winners of the poster contest sponsored by the Festival Committee in the primary grades of Quincy public and private grade schools will be announced. The winning posters will be displayed later in Quincy business store fronts. The posters drawn by the grade school pupils are popular additions as holiday decorations.

The posters are based on the 1999 theme for the 47th annual Christmas Parade which is "Christmas Memories of the 20th Century."

Highlight of Friday evening will be a choral group from North Quincy High School and the turning on of the Quincy holiday lights and decorations by Mayor James Sheets and Festival Committee officials.

There will also be a Santa's mail box located nearby McIntyre Mall for youngsters to drop off their holiday wish lists.

On Saturday, Nov. 27 at Faxon Field, opposite Quincy Police headquarters, Santa and his assistants will parachute from a plane high overhead to a roped off area on the field. The parachute jump is expected to take place at 12 noon.

While waiting for this event costume characters, familiar to children of all ages, will again distribute free candy canes. Following the parachute jump Santa and the costume characters will board a Quincy fire engine for their official visit to the downtown Quincy business district.

The 47th annual Quincy Christmas parade will be the climax to the weekend activities Sunday, Nov. 28. The parade will start at 12:30 p.m.

This year a record number of floats and marching units are expected to participate along the three mile parade route which will commence at the intersection of School St. and Quincy Avenue and wind up at North Quincy High School.

Some 90 units including color guards, mounted patrols, marching high school bands from all parts of Massachusetts, gaily decorated holiday floats and specialty units including clowns will be in the line of march.

The winner of this year's theme contest "Christmas Memories of the 20th Century," Mrs. Richard Buckley of Weymouth, will ride as guest of honor in the parade.

Mrs. Buckley and her husband, retired Quincy Police Sgt. Richard Buckley, have 15 grandchildren who will plan to be on hand to cheer on their grandparents.

The Quincy Festival Committee Hotline telephone number, direct from Quincy City Hall, is (617) 376-1392.

REAL ESTATE

Making The Sale To Motivated Buyers

When you are ready to sell your home, you should realize that two types of home buyers exist: those who already live in the area and those who intend to relocate.

As a home seller, you should realize that motivation is the one important difference between the two types.

Typically, buyers who are local already have a home and so lack the urgency of purchasing a new one. Such buyers may look at homes and even express interest in them, yet don't actually buy unless they have a strong motivation to purchase a new one.

On the other hand, relocating families can be a more promising group of buyers for the purchase of your home. These families must make a housing decision because they do not reside in the area. With the assumption that they will choose to buy rather than rent, these families usually are very motivated to buy, and this group will typically be financially able to make the purchase.

Such potential home buyers may actually be impatient about making a decision to buy a new home.

These buyers also often acquire a real estate representative to assist them in their search because many times they have only a limited time to find a home.

Conway Trip For Top-Producing Agents, Managers

Jack Conway and Company's top-producing sales agents and managers will celebrate the new millennium with a five-day trip to Costa Rica in January.

At a recent sales meeting, Chairman Jack Conway and Vice Chairman John Reardon announced that next year's "Seminar in the Sun" will take place from Jan. 16-20 at the Melia Cariari Hotel in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Each year, the company hosts two education seminars in tropical locations for its top sales agents and managers. More than 50 Conway agents took part in this year's all-expenses-paid trip to Cancun, which featured five days of sightseeing, golf and shopping, as well as workshops on septic-system regulations, zoning codes and financing. In May, another 35 top producers enjoyed educational seminars and tourist sites at Grotto Bay Beach Resort in Bermuda.

"I can't think of a better way to welcome the new millennium than by honoring our most successful salespeople," Conway said. "Our agents are the lifeblood of this company, and this is our way of thanking them for a year of hard work."

The Melia Cariari Conference Center and Golf Resort is situated on 134 acres and has 220 rooms and several restaurants. The facility also has an 18-hole championship-class golf course, as well as a playground, Olympic-size swimming pool, tennis, running tracks and a health club.

In order to qualify for the trips, agents and managers must meet sales goals during the year.

The tropical seminars are among the advantages enjoyed by Conway sales agents; others include a tax-deferred retirement savings plan, excellent commission sale, a state-of-the-art technology department and first-rate education and training programs.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Enjoying The Holidays Without Gaining Pounds

Looking forward to the upcoming holidays, but dread stepping on the scales next January? You're not alone.

A recent national survey revealed the average adult gains about six pounds between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day.

With a little advance planning, however, you can enjoy this festive season without expanding your waistline.

"At Weight Watchers, we stress the importance of not depriving yourself of your favorite foods, especially at this time of year," said Florine Mark, president and CEO of the WW Group, Inc., the largest franchise of Weight Watchers International.

"The new attitude in dieting is much freer in terms of what you can eat. Portion control is more important than abstinence. Better to eat a small portion of your favorite holiday food than none at all, right?"

To help you get through days usually centered around a major meal, Weight Watchers offers these holiday eating tips:

• Start the day with a light breakfast, such as a cup of non-fat yogurt, half a bagel and jam and a piece of fruit. Starving yourself before a big dinner can result in overeating.

• Plan a traditional meal with all the trimmings around several low-fat vegetable or salad dishes, with can be very satisfying and enjoyed in abundance.

• Spice adds flavor without adding calories and fat. Spice foods can be delicious, attractively served and can satisfy in small portions.

• Sample every food you like, but in modest portions. The first taste is as good as the last and you'll actually feel better after the meal for not having over-eaten.

• Drink ice water or a no-caloric beverage between course. Add cracked ice and a fruit garnish to create a festive cocktail.

• Eat a light supper later in the day, possible vegetable soup and a green salad with non-fat dressing. If you skip your evening meal you may wake up hungry and feel tempted to overeat at breakfast (especially if you have Thanksgiving leftovers!)

• Get active. Take an after dinner walk. Better yet, start a daily routine of morning or evening walks.

EMOTIONAL EATING

People eat food for many reasons, only one of which is hunger! People eat to stifle feelings, avoid difficult issues and/or to relax and feel comforted. They may use food as a vehicle to try to get energized, avoid responsibility or alleviate boredom. Finding alternate ways to cope and deal with life, other than with food is the goal of counseling. In counseling clients learn to cope with issues in a myriad of other ways. Clients learn to relax through meditation exercises, guided imagery and/or by changing how they think about and deal with challenging issues. Women believe the social images that don't allow them to accept their weight or eating desires. Counseling helps these women feel entitled to food and enables them to enjoy eating again. They are able to meet their goals regarding weight.

I am a psychotherapist practicing in Quincy Center. I am currently staring a group for women who eat emotionally. Please call me at 617-472-9838 for more information.

Hearing aid
"Tips from Tobias"
Where to purchase a hearing aid.
You thought I would say HERE please!
Sorry if I dissapointed you. It's not that I don't want your business- I do! What's more important is that you feel comfortable where you go, you get excellent service, you hear as well as possible and for a fair price. You do not want to feel rushed into making a decision without exploring all of your options. If your doctor recommends a hearing aid and conveniently sends you across the hall, that is not giving you much choice. Good service is very important and you'll need it for the life of the hearing aid. Select carefully and go with the professional that has the most qualities. Bring your hearing test results to two or three other Hearing Instrument Specialists. Shop for a professional that is caring, is fully equipped, highly experienced and fairly priced. If you feel like you're in a factory, then you're in the wrong place. Hearing aids can require a lot of service, it's a marriage between specialist and patient. Select carefully and have a pleasant experience!

Palate Widening Appliance

By DR. FRED ATTARZADEH

A plate widening appliance is a specially made device used to expand the upper arch or roof of the mouth. There are several reasons to widen the arch.

First, by widening the upper arch, the upper teeth may line up better with the lower teeth, giving the patient a better bite. Second, where a high palate and a narrow arch restrict and breathing passages indicated above, widening the palate widens the air passages. Then the patient can breathe more easily through his nose. Third, widening the palate can make more room for crowded teeth to align better.

The expanding action of the appliance gently separates the elastic membrane in the center of the palate. Once the palate has been expanded fully, new bone tissues fills that space.

The upper arch is usually expanded enough in 15 to 20 days. However, the appliance is allowed to remain in the mouth for a longer period, while new bone is generating in the expanded arch.

You'll notice that widening the palate also temporary causes a space between the two front teeth. Do not be alarmed. The space closes again naturally.

Also, the same pressure on the roof of the mouth may cause a tingling sensation at the bridge of the nose. Usually, any over-the-counter Acetaminophen pain reliever will effectively relieve discomfort. If it does not, call the office so we can check your appliance carefully.

For most people this procedure is not painful through there may be some initial discomfort and some feeling of 'pressure' as the arch expands. The pressure causes a tingling or an itch under the appliance.

As a parent, it is your responsibility to:

• Activate the appliance

• Closely follow the schedule and instructions given by the orthodontist

• Be a regular--it is important not to rush or delay the activation of the appliance.

Be sure the appliance is carefully cleaned each time you brush. This, and the use of an oral irrigation device and mouthwash will keep the appliance free of food and prevent irritation.

(Dr. Fred Attarzadeh's practice is located at 1050 Hancock St., Quincy. For an appointment, call 471-4600.)

Red Raiders Can't Recover, Bow To B-R

North Quincy At Hingham Saturday

By CHRIS POISSON

After two weeks on the road where North Quincy picked up a win and came up a two-point conversion short of another, the Red Raiders returned home and suffered their worst defeat of the season.

North Quincy (2-6-1, 2-4) spotted Bridgewater-Raynham (5-3, 4-1) 21 first-quarter points and never recovered, losing 47-9 Friday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We have to play 44 minutes, not half a game," said head coach Peter Chrisom. "It's all facets of the game. Not just one. We looked good at times and then we did some things where we didn't look good."

North Quincy travels to Hingham Saturday afternoon before the annual Thanksgiving Day game with Quincy to close out the 1999 campaign.

"These kids have to start coming together and being committed to what they're doing," Chrisom said. "We have two games left. For some of them this is it. So they have to decide."

The Trojans' special teams was the difference and it set the tone early when sophomore Luther Smith took off on a 70-yard punt return for a touchdown with 9:45 left in the first quarter.

On its next series, B-R marched 40 yards on the ground, capped by sophomore Richie Florence's 10-yard TD run up the middle with 3:10 left.

Senior fullback Brian Deptula fumbled on the second play of North Quincy's next possession and B-R capitalized. On the third play, Florence darted for a 21-yard TD run to extend the lead to 21-0 after 11 minutes of play.

North Quincy responded in the second with an eight-minute drive but had to settle for a 31-yard field goal by Mike Reidy. The Trojans went three and out on their next series and North Quincy had a chance to cut the lead to 11 before the half.

But senior quarterback Sean Adams was intercepted and B-R tacked on a field goal with 1 second left for a 24-3 lead.

On the first play of the second half B-R senior Adam Howe broke loose for a 75-yard TD run. North Quincy came right back with a 5-yard TD run by Deptula. The PAT, though, was blocked by senior Justin Bettencourt and he returned it for two points.

Florence added a 20-yard TD run with 2:00 left in the third which was set up by senior Ed Casabian's 80-yard kickoff return. The Trojans had another big play in the fourth when Smith scampered for a 72-yard TD run to close out the scoring.

Presidents Fall To SL On Late Touchdown

Quincy Visits Barnstable Friday

Last week, Silver Lake barely held on for a two-point win against a resilient North Quincy team and Friday night it fended off a win-starved Quincy squad at home.

The Presidents (0-9, 0-5) were, once again, victimized by a big play as Laker Brandon McPhail reeled off a 75-yard touchdown run with six minutes left in the game to snap a 21-21 tie and pick up the victory.

Last season, Silver Lake edged Quincy, 21-19. Quincy missed a two-point conversion late in the game that would have tied the score.

Quincy will travel to league powerhouse Barnstable Friday night before the showdown with North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game.

The game had more ties than a men's clothing store as both teams matched touchdown for touchdown. Quincy struck first when senior back Russell Mullen scored from 9 yards out in the first quarter.

McPhail scored his first touchdown in the second with a 4-yard run to knot the game at 7-7. Quincy answered when senior quarterback Dan Kelly plunged in from 1 yard out for a 14-7 halftime lead.

Silver Lake came out strong in the second half, tallying two TDs in the third for a 21-14 lead. Ryan Gadles had a 2-yard TD and McPhail added his second of the night.

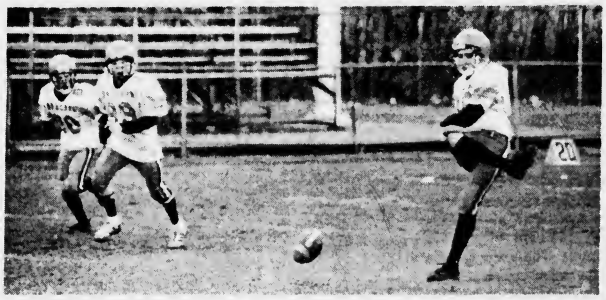
Quincy drove down the field and Kelly scampered for a 7-yard TD run, his eighth of the season, to even the game at 21-21.

And like it has done all season, Quincy gave up the big play at the wrong time and came out on the losing end.

Matt McQueen intercepted Kelly late in the game to secure the win for the Lakers.

Apaches' Comeback Falls Short

Milton Captures Youth Football Championship



The Milton Mustangs captured the 1999 Quincy Youth Football championship with a hard fought 22-16 win over the Apaches Sunday afternoon at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Mustangs used their strong running game and got a little help from Mother Nature as the strong November winds hampered the Apaches' powerful passing game.

Going into the game, the Apaches' hopes for a championship rested on the strong throwing arm of quarterback Tim Watson and a host of talented receivers.

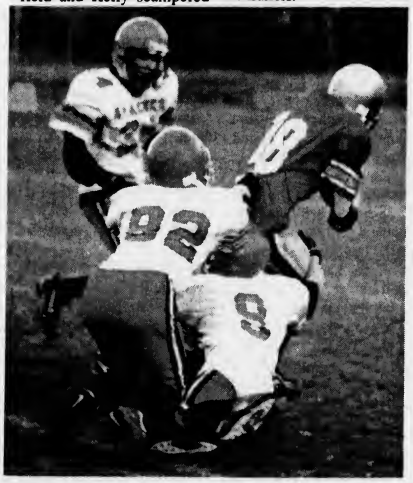
Kyle Carmody kicked the opening kick off out of the Mustangs' end zone and the defense opened by stuffing the Mustangs on three plays, pinning them deep in their own end.

After a bad snap on the Mustangs' punt, the Apaches offense took over at the Mustang 20. Watson ran into the end zone from 15 yards out for the first score of the afternoon. Watson connected with Josh Hersey for the two-point conversion and an 8-0 lead.

APACHES' KYLE CARMODY kicks off the 1999 Quincy Youth Football league championship game Sunday afternoon at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Apaches lost, 22-16, to the Milton Mustangs.

(Quincy Sun photos/Tom Gorman)

In the second quarter, the Mustangs' offense got in gear and made an impressive drive which featured the hard running of Tom Shannon. The drive was capped off by a touchdown by Shannon and a two-point conversion to tie the game at 8-8.



The Mustangs scored later in the quarter on a touchdown by back Bubba Muse. They added the two-point conversion for a 16-8 halftime lead.

In the third, the Mustangs added to their lead when Shannon had a 20-yard TD scamper. The conversion failed and they had a 22-8 lead to start the fourth.

The Apaches didn't fold in the fourth. On a fourth and 11 from midfield, Watson, with a strong wind blowing in his face, rolled to his left and threw a bullet to wideout Bill Cosgrove for a touchdown. Watson ran in the two-point conversion to cut the lead to 22-16 with five minutes left in the game.

The Mustangs recovered the onside kick at their 45-yard line but the Apaches came alive and stuffed the Mustangs on a fourth-and-two play to get the ball back with 1:37 remaining in the season.

The Apaches ran four pass plays but could not move the ball and the Mustangs took over on downs and ran the clock out for the championship.

HOLDING MORE THAN GLOVES

They may be called gloveboxes, but these handy interior compartments should be holding other useful items, as well. With all the many electronic accessories on vehicles today, it makes good sense to carry an array of fuses in different amp ratings. Then, when a fuse blows, drivers will not find themselves at a loss. Even if you are not a mechanic, it helps to carry such essential tools as screwdrivers (Phillips and flat), a small socket set, and an adjustable crescent wrench. If you are not good with tools, there may be someone nearby who can use them to get you out of a correctable situation. Beyond that, duct tape is often useful for temporarily fixing hoses.

It is important to be prepared and to carry a few small tools in your glovebox for simple on-the-road repairs. If you need more service, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is small enough to provide friendly, personal service, and large enough to have the latest, most modern test equipment and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and retrained. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (718-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

Point-Webster Softball Game Builds School Spirit

By CHRIS POISSON

The first annual Point Webster Middle School softball game was held recently and there was plenty of green and white on hand to show their support.

Point Webster reopened its doors this year after an 11-year hiatus and the school administration was looking for a way to build some school spirit.

There's no better way than turning towards America's national pastime.

Ward 2 city councillor Dan Raymondi tossed the ceremonial first pitch. Earlier, Raymondi had presented principal Jim McGuire with a $1,000 check to help the school get off on the right foot.

And the money went to use quickly as it helped pay for the ice cream the students and faculty enjoyed at the game. James Hatch, general manager of Friendly's, supplied the treat.

"I'm thrilled," said McGuire, who is a Point Webster alumnus, along with assistant principal Peter Chella and Raymondi. "It's great start up money. It's a great donation to have at the opening of the school."

"His donation was very handy," Chella said. "We had to pay for the ice cream some how. And it's good to have some money so the kids can do other types of things, like pizza parties, Christmas parties."

Barbara Driscoll, a sixth grade reading and social studies teacher, organized the event and with its success, she said the school plans to hold similar events in the future.

"It's what we expected," McGuire said. "I'm thrilled with the enthusiasm the teachers and kids have for the new school. It builds spirit. Last Friday we had Green & White Day and I'd say about 95% of the kids were wearing those colors."

"We're trying to develop our identity here," Chella said. "Doing these sort of things builds spirit."

The students had been waiting for the game all day. "They were off the walls this morning," Driscoll said. Before the game, the kids were going through some pregame drills. There was a team stretching in center field and another jogging in right field.

They had come to play ball.

"It felt pretty good because I wasn't hitting that good," said seventh grader Stephanie Kozlowski, on the triple she ripped to left field in one of her at bats.

"It was fun," said seventh grader Ryan McCarthy. "It was good to get outside and stuff. It helps with the school spirit. And I did all right in the game."

Sixth grader Bob Bryson was excited about playing the game. "I made a couple good plays. I was looking forward to this."

Even the teachers got into it a bit. Kim Michaud, the art teacher, was teased a little by her peers for striking out. "I didn't know we had only two strikes. The next one was going to be a home run."

No one did hit one out of the park but the day was a smash hit for Point Webster's students and faculty.

"We went to this school so we understand how important it is to the community," Chella said. "We want to keep this going for the sake of the kids and the neighborhood."

"It gives the kids a sense of community," said Dan Gilbert, who teaches sixth and eighth grade social studies. "It's a reward for them. It shows we appreciate everything they're doing for the school. It's their school."

North Quincy Girls Upset Bridgewater-Raynham, 2-1

SOCCER

Before an enthusiastic group of supporters, the North Quincy girls' soccer team knocked Bridgewater-Raynham out of the Division 1 South tournament with an emotional 2-1 victory Saturday.

B-R, which won the OCL championship, was seeded sixth and playing on its home turf.

Senior captain Maureen Holleran netted the game-winner five minutes into overtime, knocking in a brilliant cross by sophomore Allie Lacey to set off a wild celebration amongst the North Quincy players and fans.

"This win ranks right up there with one of the best victories of my coaching career," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "This team has battled adversity all year long. This win just proves that when the chips are down, North Quincy kids are tougher and will do anything it takes to win."

North Quincy moved on to play at No. 3 Plymouth North Tuesday.

North Quincy, which lost starting goalie Kathryn MacRitchie to mononucleosis, was without starting midfielder Kellee Conley who is out for the season for a stress fracture.

Sophomore forward Lauren Sleeth moved into goal and responded with an outstanding performance, making 11 saves and backboning the team's defense.

"Lauren is such a great athlete," Bregoli said. "She looked like a natural out there. You'd never know she had never played in goal before."

Indeed. One of Sleeth's best saves came late in the second half when, looking into the blinding sun, she tipped a dangerous shot over the crossbar.

North Quincy won the coin toss and took the wind in the first half. The strategy paid off as the Red Raiders pinned the Trojans in their end for most of the half, generating several excellent scoring opportunities.

Twelve minutes into the half, North Quincy was awarded a corner kick. Freshman midfielder Lauren Kalil entered the game and answered by lofting a perfect kick into the area. Lacey, playing the opposite midfield position, rammed home the shot past the startled Trojan goalie.

Later in the half, an excellent scoring bid by senior captain Caitlyn O'Donnell was turned aside by Katie Barber, the OCL's all-star goalie. She also stoned Casey Ridge's semi breakaway later on.

B-R tied the game late in the first half as a spinning ball eluded two North Quincy defenders and Sleeth.

Battling the wind in the second half, North Quincy's defense stepped up. Led by sophomore sweeper Kelly Rice, juniors Stacy Szcesuil and Jen Conley and senior Kathlyn Gates, the Red Raiders turned back every B-R counter attack.

Again, winning the coin toss in overtime, North Quincy chose the wind and the sun, setting the stage for Holleran's heroics. Ashley Murphy started the play launching a long throw to Lacey, who then found Holleran on the weak side with her cross.

"The kids were so pumped for this game," Bregoli said. "B-R had beaten us twice this year. But this team believes in itself and rises up to challenges.

"B-R's coming onto the field chanting 'We are the OCL champs' just added fuel to my kid's fire. Even our bench was really into it, led by Jen Djerf, Lauren Enos, Janelle Hersey and Colleen Lahar."

Bay Pointe Inn Expansion Plans Meeting Nov. 18

Councillor Dan Raymondi has scheduled a community meeting to discuss the proposed expansion of The Inn At Bay Pointe, 64 Washington Court.

The meeting will take place Thursday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. at The Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd.

Another item, a preliminary proposal to site a gas station at the former Sparks Tune-Up, 664 Washington St., will also be discussed.

Representatives from The Inn At Bay Pointe will answer residents' questions on a possible petition to the License Board for increased seating capacity and square foot space. The inn's owners are Kevin Hynes and John Ridder; the land is owned by Damien Pettinelli.

An earlier petition on April 27 sought to add an additional 3,840 square feet of space to the restaurant and increase seating capacity from 160 to 244 seats.

That petition was not granted to allow for more input from residents and City Engineer Jack Gillan regarding traffic.

Raymondi called traffic concerns legitimate, pointing out that Washington Court would bear a heavy burden as the sole access point, but said the meeting would be an open airing of the issue to let the community decide.

"There are mixed feelings, people on both sides," Raymondi said. "The purpose of this meeting is to provide residents of the Quincy Point community an update by officials at Bay Pointe."

McCauley Seeks Info On Indebtedness And Medical Center

Councillor Frank McCauley submitted two resolves at Monday's city council meeting.

The first resolve, directed to City Auditor Michael McFarland, requested that McFarland submit a report on the current state of bonded indebtedness of the city of Quincy. The report is to include the amount of debt as it relates to any debt limits under present law.

The second resolve, directed to City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, requested an opinion of the relationship, if any, between the Quincy City Council and the new Quincy Medical Center.

Councillor McCauley noted that, while the new hospital entity is now separate from the city, the city will be subsidizing the new QMC for the next five years.

McCauley is seeking an opinion as to whether the city council retains any oversight responsibilities during the period that the city makes financial contributions to the medical center.

Both resolves were passed.

explained. "I fully anticipated that the matter would be held over."

Twin Rivers executives were also positive. "This is fair," said Ricci. "If he (McCauley) didn't have a chance to read it, he should have a chance to review. Things are still on schedule."

Florence Weeks, who lives off Washington St., was also at the meeting. She wants answers concerning strong odors which she says are coming from the plant and affecting her health. "My concerns are the smells that are coming out of Twin Rivers," Weeks said. "It's nauseating. I have raging headaches. We're not opposed to them having a business but, my god, this has got to stop."

Issues related to Twin Rivers were the first four items on the council agenda.

Cahill Resolve Seeks Open Internet Access For Quincy

Councillor Timothy Cahill sponsored a resolve Monday asking Mayor Sheets to approve the cable transfer from MediaOne to AT&T with a condition of open Internet access.

Cahill said he wanted open access to the net so that Quincy residents would not be "held hostage" by one ISP provider in the future.

He compared the measure to Quincy's recent decision to have competition in the cable television industry.

Mayor Sheets, who has until today (Thursday) to decide on the cable transfer, has three options: he can do nothing and allow the transfer to occur automatically; he can reject the transfer; or he can approve the transfer with certain conditions.

Cahill said that similar ideas are being discussed in Cambridge, Brockton, and Somerville.

This week Weymouth backed away from an earlier "open access" requirement for MediaOne.

Council Awards Matching Grants For Sailor's Home Pond

The city council voted Monday to match a $10,000 state grant for the continued clean-up of Sailor's Home Pond.

Rosemary Nolan, program director for the DPW, said that the matching funds were necessary in order to receive the original grant from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management.

Nolan said that water quality at the pond was improving and that, for the first time, habitat and wildlife that had left were starting to return.

Nolan praised the enthusiastic efforts of 29 residents who turned out to clean the pond recently and the volunteer efforts of Eastern Nazarene College, led by ENC's Professor Twining.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Throughout recorded history, it has been a tragic fact that the best of the young men have had to carry the burden of fighting the battles and the wars in which their families, their tribes or their nations have been involved.

On this Veteran's Day, let each and every one of us pause and reflect what this day means to us. To each of us, this Veteran's Day should represent pride, sadness and a great responsibility.

PRIDE for the deeds of all the men and women, who when needed, put on uniforms and did what had to be done for their country... SADNESS for those who never came back from the battlefield; sadness for mothers, fathers, wives and children who will never see their loved ones again; sadness for those who came back maimed and ill ... RESPONSIBILITY - this is the greatest bequest that they could leave us - the responsibility of seeing that they didn't fight and die for nothing.

So on this Veteran's Day, let us all count our blessings and thank God that there were those willing to be called "Veteran's" ...

Quincy Salvation Army Seeking Volunteers To Man Christmas Kettles

The Quincy Salvation Army is seeking volunteers to man its Christmas kettles during the holiday season.

Individuals and groups are needed to volunteer a day or a part of a day to stand at the kettles.

"It's a great opportunity to stand for something important," said Major Ed Forster, commanding officer of the Quincy Temple Corps, Baxter St., Quincy.

"But you can also stand for someone by standing in honor of a loved one or a friend as a tribute or remembrance."

The Salvation Army needs people from churches, service clubs, companies or families to help others which it has been doing in the Quincy area for more than 100 years, he said.

A sign attached to the kettle will identify the group or individuals who are volunteering and name the person they are honoring or "standing for" if so desired.

"Typically a group stands for about eight hours a day with two people from the group volunteering for one or two hour shifts together," Forster said. It takes about 16 people to handle a day at one hour shifts. Groups can work as few as four hours if they are smaller.

Just before the turn of the century, Forster said, the Army started collecting money in soup kitchens following a shipwreck in San Francisco. They were housing and feeding survivors when the soup kettle and their resources ran dry. An inspired Salvation Army worker took the empty kettle off the stove and ran to the street to ask people to "keep the pot boiling" by making donations to help people in need in their city.

Today, the Army uses the red kettle on a tripod in 107 countries to collect funds for people in need. The Quincy Salvation Army uses the money it collects to meet local needs such as emergency food assistance, toys for children and gifts for shut-ins.

Contact The Salvation Army in Quincy at (617) 472-2345 if you can join the other volunteers and groups who have already signed up to help. Call early to be assured of the date and location you desire.

QHS, NQHS Form Marina Bay Partnership

Members of Marina Place and staffs of Quincy High School and North Quincy High School have formed a partnership to achieve a dynamic, intracommunity, intergenerational exchange that will offer an important opportunity for growth and change between Marina Place and Quincy schools.

The new agreement focuses on helping students become better informed about the educational applications, as well as training, which are required to function in any one of services offered by an assisted living community. They will develop a better understanding of assisted living staff who are part of Marina Place, and how they function in the community.

"We are all very excited about this partnership which enables Quincy students to learn more about Assisted Living and potential career opportunities," said Mary Collins, activities director at Marina Place. "Students will be monitored by Quincy teaching and staff and will be working in the Resident Care Department and the Activities Department at Marina Place."

The global interaction of the students will include direct one-on-one contact with residents in the traditional section of the community, as well as the memory impairment section.

"Students will make contributions to all facets of our community," said Marina Place Executive Director Pat Garre. "Quincy schools' art and music departments, culinary arts and building and grounds program will be involved, making an important impact."

The Quincy School Partnership was recently signed at Marina Place by School Supt. Dr. Gene Creedon, Quincy High School Principal Robert Keuther, Jr., North Quincy High School Principal Eileen Feeney; and Garre.

Marina Place, located in Marina Bay, North Quincy, is a new, 110-residential apartment community featuring independent and assisted living. It is designed for those who want convenience, a stimulation environment, and personal assistance now or in the future.

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ability to communicate flows forth with a beauty that captures the hearts of those that surround you. Set up your environment accordingly so that those you hope to reach are within listening distance.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A memory of a time gone by reminds you of where you have been and where you think you are going. The two tend to be more interrelated than you ever expected.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Put relaxation on your mind and on your best to make your body follow suit. It is a break worth taking in that it helps to soothe your soul and place things in a new perspective.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your emotions are swayed by even the smallest of details, which makes for a rather bouncy ride. It ensures that you determine where the rough spots and smooth surfaces are found.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The process may be a pain, but the outcome really is up to you. Be decisive in the strategies you choose to pursue. Limit your options to those which are most feasible.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A magnetic field surrounds you, and it is alternating between attracting objects and repelling them. The two forces make for a strange mix. The midway point is likely to be your best bet.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The potential that greets you knocks you a bit off kilter with its amazing strength. Experience something new and different, and the outcome brings you to a whole new level.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That which has been black and white now begins to blur into an undefinable gray. Keep on working with the parts that make up the whole. The issues may not be as easy as they once seemed.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your originality shines through in all that you decide to undertake. If you find yourself being imitated, it is not in jest but in an attempt to duplicate your uniqueness.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A twist of fate has you turned around and looking at something that you have never seen before. Stretching properly ensures that you aren't injured in the sudden movements.

AQUARIUS (January 20 February 18) Others can relate to your situation, your words and even your analogies in a way that is a bit surprising. Take advantage of the moment in order to take a wild ride on the same wavelength.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your sweat and tears begin to pay off just as you are beginning to wear out. The extra inspiration allows you to go that extra mile. The results are likely to be worth the wait.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Giving out compliments is a specialty of yours that others definitely appreciate. The ability to say the nice things that you think about people sets you apart from the rest. You have the potential to make the world a better place by making a difference in the lives of those you encounter.

Keating Convenes County-Wide Juvenile Justice Summit

More than 275 professionals representing communities all across Norfolk County came together recently to focus on school safety and early intervention at a county-wide Juvenile Justice Summit hosted by Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating.

The conference, expected to be an annual event, was designed to promote innovation and strengthen collaboration among schools, communities, court and probation officials, local law enforcement authorities and social service providers.

Over 40 presenters participated in the program, including the Honorable Martha P. Grace, Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Juvenile Court, and Donald K. Stern, U.S. Attorney for the District of Massachusetts.

"In the first nine months of this year, approximately 25 percent of juvenile offenses in the Norfolk District involved violence, 25 percent involved defendants, and 25 percent were committed by females," Keating told an audience assembled at the Lake Pearl Luciano's conference facility in Wrentham. "Those are the new realities, and the new challenges we face together," he said.

"But what the statistics don't tell us is how many of those youth may have been turned around because of the direct intervention of people in this room," Keating continued," and how many others never become court-involved because of the good work that you do in our schools and in our communities each and every day."

The day-long summit featured:

- A panel discussion on youth violence perceptions, realities and privacy constraints moderated by D.Y.S. Commissioner Robert P. Gittens;
- Reports on process and accountability from the Department of Juvenile Probation, Social Services and Youth Services;
- A judicial overview provided by the Honorable Mary M. McCallum, First Justice of the Norfolk Juvenile Court;
- And six specialized workshops on tolerance and diversity, alcohol and substance abuse, school programs and prevention initiatives, school security and crisis response, school discipline and alternative programs; and service provider networks and community resources.

Additional participants included Charles E. Walker, Jr., chairman of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination; Michael C. Mather, executive director of the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, James F. Poirier, clerk-magistrate for the Norfolk Juvenile Court; and Dr. Robert Hawes of the Norwood Comprehensive Addictions Program at Caritas Norwood Hospital.

Keynote speaker was national violence prevention expert Beverly Coleman-Miller, M.D., an advisor to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, visiting scholar at Harvard University and a former special assistance for Medical Affairs to the D.C. Commissioner of Public Health.

As featured on "60 Minutes," Dr. Coleman-Miller offered a pragmatic and collaborative approach to prevention, viewing violence as not only a public health issue but also an opportunity for community coalitions and community-based solutions.

Advice From Bank Of Canton

Preparing For Y2K: What To Do, Not To Do

Are you worried the sky will fall when the world's clocks tick past midnight on Dec. 31?

Do you think that computerized systems over the world will grind to screeching halt? That life as we know it will cease?

The Bank of Canton doesn't think so.

The fact is most American companies have been well aware of the Y2K (Year 2000) issue, and have been preparing for it in advance. For example, the Bank of Canton has updated its computer systems and has tested them thoroughly to be sure we are in full Y2K compliance. Our sky won't fall - and neither will the skies of most systems.

But there are some companies - and, sadly, many individuals and families - who will not be prepared.

If you haven't done so already:

•Check your thermostat, VCR, home computers, and anything else that might be date-dependent for Y2K compliance or upgradability. If your VCR is not compliant, you can set the year to 1972, which has the same days and dates as 2000.

•Ask your heating oil supplier if it is ready for Y2K (deliveries are base on a computerized model of your usage by day).

•Prepare for three days without heat, power or water. Think of it as an impending hurricane. Stockpile a few day's food, candles, matches, batteries.

•Make sure your prescriptions don't run out in early January (refill them in late December if you can).

•Keep your financial records in a safe place and in good order.

•Arrange to have a little extra cash on hand - but don't drain your bank account. Your funds are safe and insured in the Bank of Canton and other FDIC/DIF institutions.

•Make sure your cars are gassed up.

Whatever you do, don't give out any personal information - account numbers, PIN numbers, social security numbers, passwords, credit card numbers - to anyone. Unscrupulous predators are out there trying to trick you out of your money using the Y2K bug as their excuse.

And watch for future "Y2K Countdown" columns in this paper for up-to-the-minute Y2K news and tips.

Two Quincy Students Named AP Scholars

Christopher V. Lee and Paul D. Lutts of Quincy, 1999 graduates of Boston College High School, have been named AP Scholars by the College Board of recognition of exceptional achievement on the College-Level Advanced Placement (AP) exams.

Lee won the Scholar Award and Lutts the Scholar with Distinction Award. Approximately 23 percent of America's graduating seniors have taken one or more AP exams. Only about 13 percent of the more than 700,000 students who took AP exams in May 1999 performed at a sufficiently high level to merit the designation "Scholar".

At Boston College High, 45 students received one of three levels of recognition from the College Board. Twenty five students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP exams, with grades of three or higher. Seven students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of three or higher on four or more of these exams.

Library Gets $500,000 More For Addition

metals, was re-bid twice but still cost $235,000 over estimate due to the nature of and demand for the work.

The other four, said Colton, were protested because Colton's office had waived some unfinished paperwork on the part of the contractors. The Attorney General's office, however, ruled that Colton had no such right. Those low bids were lost, resulting in a cost increase of $112,981.

Colton said the second reason for the shortfall was that "the Library Board of Trustees committed to a fund raising goal of $1 million. To date, they have raised $600,000, leaving a shortfall of $400,000."

Colton added that wiring of the library's computer network was deliberately delayed so as to get the most state-of-the-art equipment. Colton said he expects 60% of the wiring's $143,000 cost to be reimbursed by the Universal Fund, which is paid for by taxes on the communications industry.

"Things are going very well but we continue to work without a contingency," Colton said. "We are only trying to bring back the project to fully-funded status."

Paul Harold was one councillor skeptical of all the numbers being thrown at him and wanted exact figures as to how much the library cost had increased.

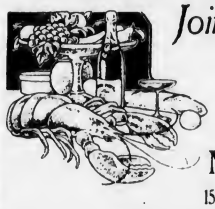
"What was the original price?" Harold asked. "What was the price of the original concept? What percentage of the contract is this additional $500,000?"

Colton answered that the new funds represented roughly 3% of the total project and that he was not sure what the original cost of the project had been.

"Let's try to get control of the expansion of this project," Harold urged. "This represents a 20% jump of what was originally anticipated. $500,000 here, $500,000 there; it begins to add up."

Harold also said the increased costs showed a "pretty poor track record" on the part of the DPW; Colton responded by saying that both Marshall and Point Webster schools were brought in on-budget and that the library was on schedule and, again, "had no net overruns on the contract."

Councillor McCauley said that he was satisfied with the report given by Colton and that he understood the vagaries of the bidding process, especially in a booming market. "When contractors have a lot of work, pencils don't get sharpened as well," he said.



Council President Kolson wanted the work to move as rapidly as possible, both for the completion of a library "second to none" and to ease the burdens of the residents of Spear St., whom he said have been very patient during construction.

One final question was brought up by McCauley, who wanted to know why the roughly $1/2 million from the sale of the JFK Health Center was not being used for the library, as originally intended. Councillor Cahill explained that closing delays on the health center forced the city to find available library funds before the JFK sale was actually complete. Commissioner Colton agreed.

Shea Takes Issue With Allegations

Ward 3 Recount Heats Up

As a recount in the Ward 3 city council vote was set for Saturday at 10 a.m., City Clerk Joseph Shea took exception to allegations raised by John Cain, the unsuccessful candidate who requested it.

Cain, who lost to incumbent Patrick McDermott by 797 votes in the Nov. 2 election filed for the recount Friday.

In his request for the recount, Shea said Cain alleged that machines were moved and replaced at one of the polling places.

In a statement to the press this week, Cain cited "numerous problems" - including jamming - regarding voting machines in four of five precincts which, he said, were reported to him by residents.

The recount, which will be done by hand and which Shea said could cost as much as $5,000, will be held in Precincts 1, 3, 4 and 5 of the ward. Cain did not seek a recount in Precinct 2, his home precinct which he carried by a vote of 418 to 273.

Cain never complained to him of any problems on election day, Shea said.

"I am unfortunately in the position of being unable to respond to Mr. Cain's allegations," he said. "He says that machines were moved and replaced at one of the polling places. All of my workers deny this and Mr. Cain will not identify the person who he alleges told him about this.

Shea added:

"I simply cannot respond to this, as there is no basis, from what I can determine, to support the allegations.

"I need more specific information from Mr. Cain

Twin Rivers Tax Incentives Approved At Stormy Council Session

The City Council Monday approved the tax incentives Twin Rivers Technologies says are vital to its $77 million expansion plan and its very survival in Quincy.

In return, the council received some answers and agreements concerning noise, odor, and safety in the Quincy Point manufacturing plant.

Along the way, there were flare-ups from both sides and one from an angry resident.

The council passed four separate items : an application for Twin Rivers to be designated an Economic Opportunity Area (EOA) by the state; Twin Rivers' Certified Project Application; a Tax Increment Financing (TIF) Plan; and the Tax Increment Financing Agreement.

The measures give Twin Rivers local property tax relief from the city, estimated at little more than $1,000 over ten years, but, more importantly, enable Twin Rivers to secure a five percent investment tax credit from the state.

At the Monday meeting Twin Rivers' executives said the company currently pays $280,000 in taxes.

Sheets To Rest, Work At Home

Mayor James A. Sheets, still recovering from a serious fall, will spend the entire week at home resting and recovering.

Sheets was told by doctors to avoid movement and keep his feet propped up for the next three or four days.

The mayor says he's feeling much better, if a bit restless.

"I'm still sore, but my blood count is coming back to normal," the mayor said. "I'm getting stronger every day."

The mayor said he has been working at home, keeping track of the major concerns of the city, and signing papers that need to get signed.

But he's anxious to get back to work.

"It's very hard for me. I'm impatient," said Sheets. "That was the longest stay I've ever had in the hospital. I'm not a person who likes to stay down for long."

Sheets suffered injuries to his hip and shoulder when an attic ladder he was using at his home gave way, causing him to fall roughly seven feet.

Sheets spent a good part of last week under observation at Quincy Medical Center, the institution he played the leading role in saving.

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 15th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Quincy businessman Robert "Bob" Curry was honored for his long-time volunteer work in worthy civic and charitable causes as a member of many local organizations, including the Quincy Partnership, Quincy Commission on the Family and the Marie A. Curry Foundation which provides free mammograms for individuals not covered by health insurance.

Curry was selected from among 48 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final selection.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 23 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

License Board Gives Distribution Co. 90 Days To Abide By Conditions

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Because of ongoing complaints against Interstate Distributors, Inc., Commander Shea Blvd., the License Board Tuesday gave the company 90 days to abide by the conditions set by the board.

Complaints range from excessive noise from delivery trucks to vulgar language heard by the residents of Seawinds Condominium abutters of the company.

A frustrated chairman Joseph Shea announced some of the conditions as follows.

•No idling of trucks

•No pallets outside of the building.

•Some landscaping and a fence for a barrier to use as a buffer to the continuing noise throughout the night.

•A better maintenance plan to clean up debris and litter.

• No parking on Cdr. Shea Blvd.

Shea suggested that trucks could be parked at satellite parking areas throughout the city's parking lots until they were ready for delivery thus cutting back the noise in the wee hours of the morning. Shea said maybe a deal could be worked out whereby the company could "rent a site" for the trucks with beepers to tell the drivers when to arrive at the company to deliver

The company is responsible for the delivery of many magazines and newspapers, including Time Magazine and TV Guide.

Although a reluctant Peter Eleey, attorney for Interstate agreed on the 90-day review, he nonetheless said the company "has been in business for 20 years, and their deliveries of the magazines and newspapers arrive sometimes in 2,3, or 4 a.m"

Attorney Nancy McNally, who represents Seawinds, and who is also a tenant there said the tenants who were sitting with her at Tuesday's meeting felt a little "uncomfortable" with Eleey's comments.

McNally suggested that most of the deliveries be made in the day time and then have an "annex at night" for the rest of the deliveries.

Several other tenants were sitting in the City Hall Chambers as the License Board tried to outline conditions.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said the "quality of life issues" were taken up at a neighbor meeting recently concerning the excessive noise, and asked residents to offer suggestions towards an ultimate "working agreement to clarify concerns" between the two.

Building Inspector Walter White addressed the issue of a noise ordinance which states that no business shall operate between the hours of 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. without a permit. He said the company "will have to come up with a plan so as not to disturb the residents."

He noted further that the police would have a right, if they were called regarding a problem, to fine the company $300 a day for any noise violation.

Police Chief Thomas Frane said he would be "reluctant to issue a permit for an extended period of time", but has issued permits in an emergency such as blacktoping a driveway on a Sunday.

Shea said he plans to write a letter and also sit down with the Conservation Commission regarding a strip of land between the condo and the company, and whether it could be made into a "buffer zone".

Shea said the subject of Interstate "will not be taken off the agenda" until problems can be solved.

Rally, Resolution Seek To Keep Lot 23 Open Space

By CRAIG SALTERS

Members of the Quincy Citizens Association and the Neponset Watershed Association held a rally early Monday night in front of City Hall to call for the acquisition of Lot 23 by the city.

And many stayed for that night's city council meeting to watch Councillor Paul Harold sponsor a resolution asking the mayor to examine "all means available" to acquire Lot 23, also known as the bird sanctuary at Marina Bay.

The resolution passed, although some councillors were doubtful as to whether it would result in the saving of the controversial wetlands.

"We're here for two reasons," said Maureen Mazrimas of the Neponset Watershed Association at the rush-hour rally. "First, to thank the residents of Quincy for their voting to preserve Lot 23 and, second, to encourage our city councillors to pass Paul Harold's resolution."

Ralliers held signs showing the exact number of votes the Lot 23 ballot question had received in each councillor's ward and Mazrimas noted that support for the question was strong not just in one ward but all across the city.

Harold also spoke at the rally and wanted it known that the city had spoken. "This ballot question received 13,233 votes," Harold said. "It topped the ticket, beating every candidate or question. It was a landslide."

Harold's resolution advocates acquiring the land "by eminent domain taking, by purchase, by gift, by land-swap, by tax arrangement or by any other means" and requires the mayor to report back to the council no later than Dec. 13.

Developer Peter O'Connell owns Lot 23 has permits to build an eight story, 136 unit luxury apartment on the six acres of a 66-acre wetland parcel at Squantum Point. According to Thomas Palmer, chairman of the Friends of the Neponset River Estuary, he acquired those lands in October of 1996 for a $300,000 down payment on a $1.1 million mortgage. His selling price for the property, said Palmer, is now $4.5 million. Palmer blames the price increase on the permit issued by the Department of Environmental Protection: If the land can be developed, it's worth more.

Jens Thornton, a member of the QCA who along with his brother Leif attended the rally, said that O'Connell had left a string of broken promises. "He promised years ago to save the bird sanctuary and he's doing everything he can to destroy it," Thornton said.

Many preservationists are upset at O'Connell and claim that he has: broken written promises to save the bird sanctuary; received tax abatements for a so- called "undevelopable" lot; and went ahead with construction despite two lawsuits against him in superior court. "The appeal process is not over," said James Stamos, a longtime advocate of preserving Lot 23.

The enthusiasm at the rally was dampened somewhat by the mood inside city council chambers.

Councillor Ayers supported the resolve but called it somewhat unrealistic. "We didn't have the money then (at a 97 vote)," Ayers said. "And we won't have it in 30 days."

Councillor D'Amico also supported the resolve but called it "symbolic" and said the city's real focus should be on the HighPoint issue. Council President Kolson supported the resolve but called it "a boat with no bottom."

Councillor McCauley voted against the resolve. "We've got to stop buying everything in the City of Quincy," McCauley said. He also said that, contrary to media reports, 65 percent of the wetlands were preserved, and had been since 1980, and that the O'Connell development did not affect that.

Harold, for his part, responded that the resolve only wanted the mayor to explore viable options

Sheets, Harold Pledge Harmony

They may be mayoral rivals in 2001 but until then Jim Sheets and Paul Harold, the incoming city council president, pledge to work with one another for the good of the city.

Harold visited Sheets at the Quincy Medical Center on Veterans Day to see how he was coming along from that severe hip injury he suffered in an attic ladder fall at his home Nov. 6.

HAROLD

SHEETS

And, as a courtesy, Harold wanted to inform Sheets that he had the necessary five votes to be the new council president.

Sheets reached out, shook Harold's hand congratulating him and said: "We'll work together, Paul."

Harold thanked Sheets and assured him that as council president he would cooperate with him on issues and other matters benefiting the city.

But there is no doubt a little disagreement will pop up here and there over the next two years. Harold isn't timid about speaking out. Neither is Sheets.

Although the news didn't get out until early this week that Harold will be the new council president, Harold had it all wrapped up last week.

He finalized the five necessary votes at the retirement dinner for former City Auditor Robert Foy at the Quincy Neighborhood Club last Wednesday night.

Going into the dinner, Harold had two positive votes: his own and Frank McCauley's. He then firmed up Greg Hanley and Joseph Newton to make it four. By the time everyone sat down for dinner, Ward 4's Michael D'Amico made it five.

It wouldn't surprise anyone if the two contenders for the council presidency -- Tim Cahill and Dan Raymondi -- moved to make it unanimous when the new council is seated in January.

JOHN GILLIS, one of Quincy's all-time popular political figures, underwent abdominal surgery at Brigham & Women's Hospital Monday and is reported "doing well."

GILLIS

Gillis, long-time Quincy city clerk and now a Norfolk County commissioner, may be discharged by Friday, his wife, Vi, tells friends.

John is a World War II combat Marine and as they say, once a Marine, always a Marine.

"Tell them not to send me flowers," he says through his close friend and fellow Marine, Bill Draicchio, member of the Board of Voter Registrars.

"Tell them if they want to do something to donate to the Marines Toys for Tots program."

They can be dropped off at the Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League, headquarters on Foster St., Quincy Center.

A speedy recovery, John!

BOB FOY, who was honored by a full-house at his retirement dinner, has another honor coming up.

FOY

City Clerk Joseph Shea who emceed the dinner along with former Mayor Walter Hannon announced that the second floor conference room at City Hall is going to be named the Robert Foy Room.

Shea said that both Mayor Sheets and the City Council agreed on the special honor.

"We are going to do some renovating first," says Shea. "It may not be until next spring before we dedicate the room in Bob's name but it will be done."

Sheets, who was still at the Quincy Medical Center that night as a patient from his fall at home, telephone the Neighborhood Club to pay his tribute to Foy. His message was carried over a microphone for those attending to hear. Sheets said Foy, who served the city 27 years as treasurer and then auditor, was one of Quincy's "most beloved sons."

Foy was also presented a clock with the City Seal by Council President Peter Kolson on behalf of the City Council.

Frank McCauley had the crowd laughing at a make-believe obituary he had wrote about Foy's "death" in the year 2028.

By living so long (102) the penny pinching McCauley complained, Foy "damn near bankrupted the city's retirement system."

MILESTONES: George Burke is marking three 40th anniversaries: his marriage to his better half, Sandra; admission to the Massachusetts Bar; and his successful political debut for the Ward 5 city council seat. All three occurred within one week in October, 1959.

BURKE

George had a political career spanning 22 years. After Ward 5 he was elected councillor at-large (top vote getter in 1965), city council president (acting mayor), state representative and Norfolk County district attorney.

Not going to tell you his age. But he was 27 when he was admitted to the bar.

ANOTHER MILESTONE: He hardly looks it, but Don Gohl, the happy banker, recently hit No. 80 and is still going strong.

GOHL

Now assistant vice president in charge of customer service at the Bank of Canton's Quincy branch, he is also celebrating his 53rd year in the business.

He joined the Quincy Savings Bank in 1946 after serving with the Marines in the Pacific in World War II.

His unit landed at Guadalcanal in August, 1942 and while he was fighting in the hills there, he sadly recalls that three of our Quincy-built cruisers, the Quincy, Vincennes and Canberra were sunk by the Japanese nearby in the Battle of Savo Bay.

Don, now in his second year with the Bank of Canton, has always been an "ambassador of goodwill" throughout his career.

He's a firm believer in personalized service and senior citizens love him for that. He drives them to the store, doctor's and dentist's offices, and on other errands.

He has even mowed their lawns but has now given that up. "I don't even do my own anymore," he muses.

Happy birthday, kid.

Says Illicit Rent Control Being Reinstituted

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Re-instituting illicit rent control.

Isn't this a state and federal government critical housing supply question? Haven't they renegaded on their duties of supplying low income housing after earning the title on some of their big city projects?

Now that some City of Quincy public officials are satisfied they are on the right "rent control" track, let's look at the facts.

Rent control is a non-productive financial assessment on a certain limited class of property, and it would affect about 2,000 low income people while it is financially supported and supplied by the government through about 20 Quincy landlords.

Is it right and just that some 40,000 Quincy residents, living in single family's, and two, three and four family's, that could not and do not qualify for subsidized housing control under the existing regulations, be empowered to vote on the rent control issue on their unrelated class of neighbors that cater to and supply these subsidized rental apartments?

Both the state and federal governments have since reneged on supplying this subsidized housing, and still accept thousands of new immigrants each year, while either remodeling or building new housing projects, and then renting a good percentage of them with mostly standard rents and the remaining apartments are at reduced rents.

I have taken umbrage at the attitude some people have taken regarding some landlords.

There are a lot of people who do not, or can not own, or care for housing property. Therefore, they accept paying rent. Some landlords were charged with mishandling the rent structure resulting in the general court establishing the security deposit law and its affiliated triple damage clause affecting only landlords.

A judge at the Quincy Courthouse suggested that he, rather than a jury, hear this particular case, where he, not the jury, studied the security deposit law, he could best handle the case.

Both parties agreed to the judge's offer. Three weeks after he heard the case, and sent the letter to the landlord fining him triple damages.

Though there was not a scintilla of evidence the landlord violated the security deposit law, the judge rules "upon consideration of credible evidence, and based on applicable law, the court finds for the plaintiff in amount of $1,744.44 plus costs." What considerable evidence?

The judge received copies of positive proof that all points of the law was complied with, but answered the complainant's letter with "credible evidence," but failed to identify it. Is that justice? Or is justice denied?

Having defended tenants' rights over the years, a Quincy landlord, because the City of Quincy sent out tax notices in the last week in December 1979 with about ($500,000) one half a million dollar tax increase per year, to four family units and up, had his tax attorney take legal action against the city in the Superior Court Department in Dedham. It was case #130365.

The city then having lost the case, appealed it three more times. It was concluded on Aug. 28, 1980 that the city's action was blatantly illegal, and all monies illegally collected would be returned.

After all the time and money spent protecting tenants' rights on this and other similar city issues even throughout the 1990s, illegally claiming landlords can pass the added costs on to their tenants as they are "running a business" is gross deceit.

Conclusion:

1 - Therefore, we want the questions that were asked in earlier letters to the judge that the answers be given, and the perjury by the tenants be addressed by the court.

2 - That it be the duty of government, both state and federal, to finance and support subsidized housing and the costs being supported by all taxpayers.

Are We Still A Caring Community?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was very relieved and happy that Question 3, the non-binding question to protect low and moderate income tenants in governmentally involved housing, was passed.

But, at the same time, I'm also sad and discouraged that the vote was so close, a difference of only around 500 votes. Many of the "tenants" are people that we know or say "hello"; many are our neighbors and friends; and many are elderly and/or disabled.

Why would we vote against them? Are we losing our compassion? Are we losing our sense of responsibility? Are we still a caring community? Please think about that.

Swanson Thanks His Supporters

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to thank and encourage my many supporters who helped me in my recent campaign for the Quincy School Committee. Although victory was not to be, I feel we made a difference. We ran a credible campaign on a limited budget without political connections.

Special thanks to several of the ward councilor and councilor at large candidates who gave me good advice and encouragement. Congratulations to my colleagues who ran in the School Committee race. I enjoyed getting to know them and enjoyed the good banter and fellowship we developed on the campaign trail.

I also would like to thank my congregation, Union Congregational Church in Wollaston, for their encouragement and support as well as my family, especially my wife, Martha, and little girls Stephanie and Cassandra for all their hard work. My campaign coordinator, Mile Palmer, did outstanding work in scheduling volunteers and distributing literature. My volunteers who held signs deserve special recognition, as do the people who put signs in their yards and businesses, not to mention bumper stickers on their cars. All in all, I really enjoyed the campaign. I was so edified and humbled by the support and encouragement of the people of Quincy. Thank you.

Workers began stringing Christmas lights across Hancock St. this week as the city donned its holiday attire under the sponsorship of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce.

Decorated areas included the traffic rotaries at both the Fore River and the Neponset bridges. At the First Parish Church lawn, 14 decorated Christmas trees created a festive holiday scene.

PRINCIPALS SEEK SALARY ADJUSTMENT

School principals under the leadership of Harry Beede of Broad Meadows Junior High School, petitioned the school committee for a salary adjustment.

The principals' group endorsed the proposed 10 percent raise for teachers, but noted the need for a corresponding adjustment to their salaries.

The adjustment would give elementary principals with a master's degree a salary between $7,700-$8,700, with junior high principals receiving an additional $200 and high school principals an additional $800.

In addition to Beede, members of the principals' salary committee were Isabelle Marentz, Edna Abbiati, Gilbert Berry, Maurice Daly, Ruth Waring, George Wilson, Douglas MacDonald and Bernice Stiles.

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Holiday Make-Aheads

With the holiday's upon us, I've searched through my recipes and found three that can be made ahead of time.

One is for the turkey stuffing, the other is stuffed acorn squash and for a dessert, a pumpkin pie cake.

Turkey Stuffing

1 cup chopped mushrooms (or chopped meat or giblet if desired)
6 slices bread (soaked)
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2 cups stuffing mix (soaked)
2 stalks chopped celery
1 medium chopped onion
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup white wine (optional)
1 tablespoon Bell's seasoning
2 tablespoons oil

In hot oil, saute the celery, mushrooms and onion and if you care to add the giblet or ground meat, add it now. Otherwise cook until blended. Add the wine a bit of water, the stuffing mix, soaked bread. Cook covered until blended. Add more water if too dry and more breadcrumbs if liquidy.

Stuffing should be completely cooled before placing it in the turkey just before roasting. (extra stuffing can be cooked separately in a baking dish.)

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. After placing the turkey in the oven reduce the heat to 350 degrees and roast 20 minutes to the pound.

A few variations that I've used in the stuffing include cubed zucchini, and shredded cheese.

Stuffed Acorn Squash

1 large acorn squash
2 sweet potatoes
1-8 ounce package of frozen butternut squash salt and pepper
butter or margarine
cinnamon to sprinkle around the sides and middle of the squash.

Cut the acorn squash in half lengthwise. Scoop out the seeds, Set aside.

Cook the sweet potatoes, either in the microwave or boiled. Skin and mash, add the butter, salt and pepper. Set aside.

Defrost the butternut squash until it is manageable.

Stuff one half of the acorn squash with the sweet potatoes, the other half with the butternut squash. In a slightly greased baking dish place a cup of water on the bottom. Place the squash and then cover. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 30 minutes. Uncover and bake for another 5 to 10 minutes,

After they cool, slice them about an inch thick. The colors are great, and guests can have a choice of which side they want. This can be made a day ahead.

Pumpkin Pie Cake

2 cups fresh pumpkin (or a 16 ounce can
1 cup raisins
2 cups water
1 stick butter or margarine
1 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 3/4 cups flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cloves

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Bring two cups water and the raisins to a boil and boil for 10 minutes.

Add the butter, cool just a bit and then add all other ingredients. Mix until blended.

Bake in a greased and floured baking pan for about 45 minutes. Cut when cooled. This also can be made ahead of time.

(Also the cake can be made without the pumpkin)

John O'Rourke Receives Medal For Bravery

John O'Rourke, a Quincy resident and Bell Atlantic splice service technician, received Bell Atlantic's Bronze Vail Medal Award for public service at an Oct. 13 luncheon at the Seaport Hotel in Boston.

O'Rourke received the award for risking his own life to help his neighbors, Dan and Janet Gorman, escape from their burning home.

On July 5, O'Rourke and his wife Virginia were awakened by their dog's restlessness. Looking out the window, his wife saw the next door neighbor's house was on fire.

As he hollered to his wife to call 911, O'Rourke ran to the neighbor's front door. The fire was too intense for him to go inside, so O'Rourke hurried to the back of the house where he was able to get in through unlocked sliding doors. He ran up the stairs, amidst smoke and flames -- not once, but twice -- to lead each of his neighbors to safety.

HERO'S HANDSHAKE -- Quincy resident and Bell Atlantic technician John O'Rourke receives the prestigious Vail Medal for life-saving heroism from Paulette Balich, Bell Atlantic vice president. O'Rourke saved his neighbors from their burning home July 5.

Thanks to O'Rourke's bravery, the Gormans were uninjured. Their home, however, was destroyed.

O'Rourke was named Citizen Hero by the City Council of Quincy and his name has been added to a "Special Heroes" plaque that hangs in the City Council Chambers.

"Mr. O'Rourke's actions were noble and selfless," said Paulette Balich, operations vice president, who presented the award. "His sheer act of courage -- taking charge of the situation and putting the life of others before his own -- are a credit to him and an honor to our company."

O'Rourke was presented with a bronze Vail Medal, which bears a portrait of Theodore N. Vail, a Vail tie tack, and a framed citation at the ceremony.

The award, named after the first president of AT&T and founder of the Bell System, honors telephone industry employees for acts of heroism and unusual merit in public service. The Vail Medal is the highest honor bestowed upon a Bell Atlantic employee for heroism and comes in three classes: bronze, silver, and gold.

O'Rourke is a 24-year veteran of Bell Atlantic who works out of Cambridge.

Save Thousands When Moving to a Larger Home by Avoiding These 6 Costly Mistakes

QUINCY - A new report has just been released which identifies the 6 most common and costly mistakes that homebuyers make when moving to a larger home.

Unlike the experience of buying a first home, when you're looking to move up and already own a home, there are certain factors that can complicate the situation. It's very important for you to understand these issues before you list your home for sale.

Not only is there the issue of financing to consider, but you also have to sell your present home at exactly the right time in order to avoid either the financial burden of owning two homes or, just as bad, the dilemma of having no place to live during the gap between closings.

In answer to this issue, industry insiders have prepared a free special report entitled "6 Inside Strategies to Avoid Trade-Up Mistakes."

These six strategies will help you make informed choices before you put your home on the market in anticipation of moving to a larger home.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your copy of this FREE report, call 1-888-713-9443 and enter ID# 2010. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Call NOW to find out what you need to know to make your move up to a larger home worry-free and without complications.

HONORED -- Quincy Veterans Services Director Henry "Hank" Bradley received the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post "Citizen of the Year Award" Sunday at a breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue. From the left are Post Commander Dr. Bertrand Shaffer, John "Jake" Comer, past National Commander of the American Legion and keynote speaker; Bradley and Irving Isaacson, program chairman and emcee.

From the left, Peter Hood, fiancé of daughter Helena Bradley; Helena, Natale Muscato, his father-in-law; Rose Marie Bradley, his wife; Mrs. Helen Bradley, his mother; and daughter, Annette Bradley.

Henry Bradley Honored As JWV 'Citizen Of Year'

Veterans Services Director Henry "Hank" Bradley was honored Sunday as the 49th recipient of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of The Year."

Bradley, a past American Legion state commander, past National Executive Committeeman and past commander of Morrisette Post, was cited for his long-time community service at a breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue.

Attending were city, state and veterans officials, past recipients of the award, family and friends.

Keynote speaker John P. "Jake" Comer of Quincy, past National Commander of the American Legion and a close friend predicted that Bradley will go on to become National Vice Commander and National Commander of the American Legion.

Comer recounted several of the many worthy causes Bradley has played a major role in and said:

"When you help the way Hank has done throughout the community, the state and nation every day is Christmas."

And, he added:

"All we can say is thank you for being the neighbor that you are, being the type of veteran you are. To the Jewish War Veterans, thank you for honoring my friend, a great American, outstanding Legionnaire and one who has given so much with love of God and country and family that he deserves everything he has ever received."

Comer recalled that Bradley headed up the relief effort to aid sister-city Quincy, Ill. in the great floods of 1993, arranging for seven trailer loads of food and other goods and $23,000 in cash to be delivered there.

Bradley personally was unable to go to Illinois but Mayor James Sheets and Emergency Management Director Tom Sicliano did.

Comer also told of a young boy named Claudius he heard of when he and his wife, Eileen, were visiting Freeport in the Bahamas.

The Comers met a priest who told them that Claudius suffered severe burns in a contest when his costume caught on fire.

"He's not expected to live," the priest said. "They don't have the facilities to treat him."

Comer gave the priest a card with Bradley's name and telephone number and told him to give him a call.

"I'm sure he can do something about it because of the Shrine Hospital in Boston," Comer said.

Bradley got the call and made arrangements with the Shriners to have the boy flown to Boston to the Shriners Hospital where he received many weeks of treatment and survived.

Bradley's daughter, Helena Bradley, said of her father: "It is a proud privilege having Dad as our father."

In accepting the award, Bradley said:

"I thank you for honoring me. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for honoring me for what I love to do.

"When the mayor appointed me to this position, I had no idea of the magnitude that it would reach. This job is people helping people."

Bradley paid tribute to his staff at the Veterans Services department, saying the honor really belongs to him.

Rep. Steve Tobin presented Bradley with a House of Representatives citation on behalf of himself and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Ron Mariano. Former Councillor Ted DeCristofaro presented a Senate citation, representing Senator Michael Morrissey. And a City Council citation was presented by Councillors Dan Raymondi and Frank McCauley.

Others who commended Bradley included Councillor Paul Harold, and Rabbi Jacob Mann, both past recipients of the award; Sheriff Michael Bellotti, American Legion State Commander Thomas Shoemaker, JWV Post Commander Dr. Bertrand N. Shaffer and Irving Isaacson, program chairman and a past recipient of the award.

AMONG THOSE HONORING Henry "Hank" Bradley (second from left) as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen of the Year" were State Rep. and Councillor Bruce Ayers, American Legion Past National Commander John "Jake" Comer of Quincy and Massachusetts State Commander Thomas Shoemaker of Newton.

FELLOW WORKERS were also among those attending the breakfast honoring Henry "Hank" Bradley as the JWV "Citizen of the Year." From the left are Fran McMorrow, Director of the Sheila McIntyre Veterans House; Marianne McCormack, administrative assistant; Bradley; Pat Healey, administrative assistant and Tom Stansbury, Graves Registration Officer.

Quincy High School Art Featured In Chinese Exhibit

A special Chinese art exhibit at the Captain Forbes House Museum, 215 Adams St., Milton, will feature objects from Quincy High School's museum.

A beautiful embroidered Chinese silk robe with the dragon symbol and a unique lacquer box with the symbol of the endless knot are just two of this pieces on display in this exhibition which opens Sunday, Nov. 21 at 2 p.m. with a gallery talk by Mrs. June Robinson.

In collaboration with the Quincy School Department's High School Chinese and ESL programs, bilingual labels will be created on some of the objects on display.

The exhibition featuring approximately 20 pieces is entitled "Butterfly, Dragon, and Endless Knot: Chinese Art for All."

For centuries, the West has had a fascination with and admiration for art of China. When Captain Robert Bennet Forbes sailed to and from China in the 1800s, he returned to America with many exquisite examples of Chinese art. Porcelain, furniture, and silk were among the treasures brought back in his cargo holds.

Encased in the patterns, decorations, and designs of these beautiful pieces of art are Chinese symbols whose meaning are locked in Chinese culture. The Forbes House Museum will use silk, furniture and porcelain in the art exhibition to uncover the meaning of the symbolism depicted in the decorations and designs on the objects.

The museum will augment the exhibition with a complete schedule of programs for adults and children. Programs include Chinese brush painting, Chinese paper cutting, Chinese games, a slide presentation on China, and a flower demonstration.

Call the museum at (617) 696-1815 for a complete schedule.

Museum hours are Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m. Admission is $3 for adults, $1.50 for seniors, students, and teachers, and free for children under 12, and museum members.

The Forbes Museum is not wheelchair accessible.

Senior Living

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

MINDS OVER MATTER

Is it true that the elderly cannot sharpen or broaden their minds and are destined to live cycles of mental inactivity and decay? According to the scientific research, the answer is a resounding "NO." The elderly have proven themselves able to learn new things and learn them well. There are three key features that are predictors of strong mental function in old age: regular physical activity, a strong social support system, and belief in one's ability to handle what life has to offer. All three of these factors can be initiated and increased later in life. Research reveals the remarkable and enduring ability of the aged brain to make new connections, absorb new information, and thus acquire new skills.

Keeping your mind active will help keep your spirit young. Reseach has shown that your mind stays alert and attentive longer if you are engaged in activities that compel you. Marina Place, a senior living residence, has been designed to serve elders with needs that may change over time. For more information, call 617-770-3264. We're just nearby at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. One study shows that older people who showed declines in inductive reasoning and spatial orientation made significant and enduring improvement after five training sessions.

November 18, 1999

Dear Wollaston Neighbors,

We are glad to be coming back!

One of life's special satisfactions is to recapture or revisit some of the good things of the past. For sixty years our family was part of the Wollaston community through the operation of the food market at 615 Hancock Street. One of us lived for several years around the corner on Chapman Street.

That store closed because medium-sized stores can no longer compete with the giant markets of today. Now we hope to be again a part of the community through the operation of a smaller store The Supreme Pantry.

This will be a neighborhood store with a good variety that can satisfy most of the everyday and last minute needs, especially at those times when you don't want to push a giant cart down those long aisles.

The location is the same. We hope you will pay a visit to see what has been done. We will be there for the opening and Store Manager Dan O'Connell will be on hand every day.

Please come and share our happy feelings.

Cordially,

We Did It!

Tom and Pat Williams

Dear Friends,

On October 25, 1999, we completed our goal of walking 26.2 miles in the Dublin Marathon held in Dublin, Ireland. Our time was 7 hours, 18 minutes and 56 seconds. The purpose of this walk was to raise funds for the Leukemia Society of America. With your assistance, we personally raised over $8,500.00 for this worthwhile cause. There were 800 other entrants from the USA who collectively raised at total of $3,200,000.00

The Dublin Marathon which occurs every October, consists of a course which is 26.2 miles long and starts and ends on O'Connell Street in Dublin. The course takes you through Dublin's suburbs, some of which consist of Grand Georgian Colonials with magnificent doorways and others that are worn out, tiny row houses which would remind you of Frank McCourt's youth in the book "Angela's Ashes".

The weather for two days prior to the event was bone-chilling cold combined with a drizzling rain. We believe that this dreary weather is one of the major reasons for the immigration from Ireland as well the development of it's pub culture. (So much for our social commentary). Fortunately on the day of the race, the weather was cool but the rain held off. Unfortunately, as you can see in the picture of us, as we finished the event we dressed for a monsoon.

If you have never prepared to walk a marathon, you would think that to do a 26.2 event all one has to do is to place one foot in front of the other for 26.2 miles. This is not the case. We have trained since last May, doing four to five miles each morning with the help of our friend Howard G. Jacobs, and 10-18 miles on the weekends by ourselves. We did this conditioning to build up our strength, toughen our feet and increase our endurance. All of the participants who represented the Leukemia Society of America did this, and our training was monitored by their staff (Thank you Francine Hughes!). However, even with this conditioning program, starting at about mile 20, our legs began to wobble and ache, and blisters developed. Nevertheless we finished the race and ran the last 100 yards to the Finish Line with a roar of applause from the Irish well-wishers.

It was explained to us by the staff of the Leukemia Society that if you try to do a Marathon without proper conditioning, you will usually fail between mile 12 and 20. Therefore, conditioning is necessary both for your body as well as for building the expectation of the race in your mind.

This was our first marathon and hopefully not our last. We enjoyed and endured our conditioning program and were enriched by meeting other runners and walkers who participated in the race. Most importantly, with your help, we were able to raise a substantial sum to help fight one of the most terrible diseases known to man. With your support and our long walk, we are hopefully one step closer to curing this disease.

Thanks again for your support and "may you live all the days of your life."

Love and gratitude,

Tom and Pat Williams

High School Graduation A Half-Century Later

They may have taken a half century longer than most, but 32 Quincy veterans of World War II are finally high school graduates.

And they have a pretty good explanation for their tardiness: they were busy saving the world.

Quincy and North Quincy High Schools recently awarded diplomas to World War II veterans who left school early for military service.

Overall 32 diplomas were awarded, six posthumously.

Quincy High awarded 25 diplomas while North Quincy awarded seven.

The event was sponsored by the City of Quincy, the Quincy School Department, and the Veterans' Services Department. It is part of a larger program called Operation Recognition, started by Bob Mckean, director of the state's veterans memorial cemeteries.

Mayor James A. Sheets and Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon made remarks at both ceremonies.

North Quincy graduates are: George Dickson, William Fitzgerald, Paul Knight and Vernon Whitman.

Posthumous degrees were awarded to: William Caddy, Leonard Purpura, and Merrill Smith of North Quincy High; and Joseph P. Menz, Ernest J. Montilio, and Herbert Shangold of Quincy High.

Caddy, a marine who died on Iwo Jima, is a Congressional Medal of Honor winner. The William R. Caddy Marine Corps Detachment is named in his honor.

Prices Rise And Supply Dwindles

Bay State Home Sales Slow A Bit In 3rd Quarter

Sales of single-family homes declined in Massachusetts for the first time in 16 quarters during the three-month period from July through September, as slightly higher mortgage rates and three consecutive years of record-breaking home sales caused housing demand to ease a bit in the third quarter of this year, according to report issued by The Massachusetts Association of Realtors.

Sales of detached single-family homes fell 5.4 percent from last year's record-setting third quarter sales pace and condominium sales slipped 1.8 percent, but average selling prices for both types of residential property climbed steadily in the quarter, due in part to strong activity in the trade-up and high-end home markets, MAR data showed.

The MAR report found that 13,908 detached single-family homes were sold in the third quarter of 1999 versus 14,707 units closed in the same quarter last year, while condominium sales decreased from 3,902 in the third quarter of 1998 to 3,832 in the comparable period this year. Although the sales declines are the first to occur in either market since the spring of 1995 when Title 5 changes slowed activity, the volume of sales transacted in the third quarter of 1999 is the second highest July-September total on record, demonstrating that consumer demand for housing remains quite healthy.

"Historically speaking, we're still experiencing high levels of activity, and a market that remains on very solid ground," said MAR President James C. Dougherty. "In most areas of the state, demand from buyers has held firm well into the fall market, and that's unlikely to change any time soon given the robust local economy."

Indeed, even though sales fell statewide during the third quarter, five of seven regions within the state reported modest to significant growth over year ago sales in the detached single-family home market. The sharpest sales gains, in fact, occurred in more rural, less affluent West and Southeast regions, where sales improved 11 percent and 6.4 percent respectively. Detached home sales also improved 1-2 percent on the South Shore and in Worcester County, while edging up a slight 0.3 percent in the Northeast region.

Separately, condo sales increased steadily over the 1998 third quarter in the West (+11.1%), Central (+14.3%) and Southeast (+30.3.%) regions, but declined modestly in the remaining regions.

Consumers are still benefiting from the current period of economic prosperity, characterized by higher wages, strong stock and mutual fund returns and low mortgage rates (7.88% on average for 30-yr. fixed-rate mortgages in the third quarter of 1999 vs. 6.92% in the 1998 third quarter), and they're using that increased buying power to purchase homes, Dougherty said. However, he suggested a moderate cooling of the market is a distinct possibility over the next 6-12 months.

"Given the high volume of home sales in recent years, I don't find it unreasonable to conclude that the market would not be able to sustain this period of unparalleled growth indefinitely. We're likely seeing the first signs of that now," Dougherty said.

A more relaxed market is, of course, good news for homebuyers, but in some areas home searches are already being extended due to low inventory levels, especially for entry-level homes. Statewide, in fact, residential listings declined 20 percent in the past year, from 39,814 homes for sale in September 1998 to 31,684 in September 1999, and the number of homes on the market for $180,000 or less is down over 25 percent since the third quarter of last year.

Not surprisingly, the combination of strong buyer demand and a tight housing supply has put upward pressure on prices. The MAR report shows the statewide average selling price for detached single-family homes rose 13.8 percent this past year, from $225,472 in the third quarter of 1998 to $256,483 in the same period this year. In addition, the statewide average selling price for condos increased 15.8 percent, from $139,397 in the third quarter a year ago to $161,396 in the same quarter in 1999.

Quincy Fire Headquarters Teddy Bear Drive Drop-Off

The Quincy Fire Department will serve as a drop-off site for the third annual Teddy Bear Drive which will benefit special children in the Greater Boston area.

The Teddy Bear Drive, which was established by Robin Phelan and her daughter, Caitlin of Ipswich, aims to collect 2,000 new teddy bears this year.

People are asked to donate new teddy bears between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Due to state health codes, teddy bears must be new.

"These are children who wouldn't otherwise receive a gift during the holidays," Phelan said. "They deserve new teddy bears anyway."

The Quincy Fire Department is among two dozen police and fire departments and other locations in the Greater Boston area serving as a collection site for the new teddy bears. Locally, the bears can be dropped off at Quincy Fire headquarters, 40 Quincy Ave. Coordinator is Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, (617) 376-1010.

In addition, volunteers are needed to help pick up and distribute teddy bears to local shelters, outreach centers and social service organizations between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Teddy bears will be picked up from police and fire departments and then distributed to children at local shelters and soup kitchens.

In its third year, the Teddy Bear Drive to benefit special children brings new teddy bears to children who might not otherwise receive a gift this holiday season.

in order to respond to this. As for the recount, we will go with a hand recount of the ballots.

"Although this will be costly--about $5,000--the integrity of the voting process has been questioned by Mr. Cain and for me, as city clerk, I feel that it is paramount that the integrity of the process be investigated and I expect, sustained."

Shea said the election went very smoothly.

"The only problem I know of was a brief one in Precinct 1 where there was a jam-up," he said. "A technician corrected it within 15 minutes. Twelve votes were involved and they were counted."

Cain said he received over 20 calls referring to "numerous problems with the voting machines, including machine jams."

Cain noted he is in the computer business and had concern "over the accuracy of relatively old machines."

Shea said the machines are only three years old, purchased in 1996 and that a technician is always available at an election should there be a problem of any kind.

In 1997, Joseph Newton lost a preliminary election nomination to Brian McNamee in Ward 6 by only 11 votes but opted not to ask for a recount.

Newton was elected Ward 6 councillor in the Nov. 2 election defeating James Stamos, 1997 to 1068.

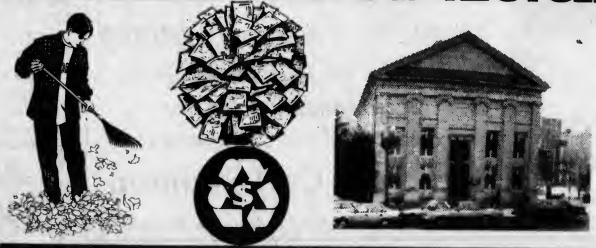
GIVE YOURSELF A BRAKE!

Aside from having your vehicle's brake pads and shoes examined regularly, watch for signs that your vehicle might need a brake job. If you hear a high-pitched metallic screeching upon applying the brakes, it may be the wear indicator contacting the spinning rotor to warn of the end of a brake pad's life. If you hear persistent grinding, the pad lining is likely worn down to the metal surface, in which case it is gouging the rotor. If the vehicle grabs or pulls to one side during braking, it may be an indication that brake fluid or grease has contaminated the brake pads. It might also mean that a brake caliper has frozen up due to corrosion.



LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We're your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: If the "check brakes" dash indicator goes on, the brake-fluid level in the reservoir is low, most likely due to a leak. Have this problem attended to immediately.

Council Wants Increase In DPW Repair Crews For Sidewalk Work

This past summer the city council appropriated $500,000 for sidewalk repair to fix what one councillor called "the crisis of '99."

That crisis continues.

The appropriation has yet to be spent for lack of a contractor, and now the council wants to try a different approach: more DPW crews.

The council passed a resolution Nov. 8 requesting that the council president negotiate with the mayor for the hiring of no fewer than five DPW employees.

According to DPW Commissioner David Colton, the city currently has "a little less than two crews" of six workers each.

Colton explained to the council that the money appropriated June 28 of this year was not spent because the contractor with the best bid already had three outstanding contracts with the city, making any prospect of finishing the job this year unlikely. For that reason Colton decided to wait but expects work to begin immediately next spring.

Although there was no blame, and indeed much praise for the efforts of Colton and his DPW crews on the part of Councillors Kolson, Raymondi, and D'Amico, the consensus was that the system for repairing streets and walkways, as it stands now, just doesn't work.

"Even when you appropriate the money, you still can't fix the sidewalks," Raymondi said. "That's how bad the system is."

Raymondi remembered a time, before the cuts of 1980's, when every ward had its own DPW crew. Although he is not suggesting an increase to that level, Raymondi said the city needed more public employees to fix the little problems before they became big problems later.

Councillor D'Amico said some of the major construction projects needed a contractor but suggested contractors lose contracts if work is not finished on time.

President Kolson said he was "disheartened" repairs were not done and supported the resolve, saying that Quincy's large senior population made fixing the sidewalks a top priority. He was also sympathetic to Colton's DPW crews who faced dwindling personnel, a backlog of projects, and New England weather. "David Colton is lucky if he has one full working crew a week," Kolson said. "Manpower is the name of the game. If you don't have it, you can't do it."

Ayers Resolution:

Construction Permit Fee Would Help Preserve Open Space

The city council Monday voted 8-0 to support Councillor Bruce Ayers' resolution calling for a .5 percent fee on all new construction permits to create a Quincy Recreation Development Fund.

This fund, said Ayers, would give the city ready money to assist in the preservation of dwindling green space in Quincy and could also be used to benefit existing greenspace, such as the city's parks. He estimated the fee would generate roughly $300,000 in funds.

Ayers said that his next step would be to ask City Solicitor Stephen McGrath to draft the resolution in the language of a Home Rule Petition. That petition could then be certified by City Clerk Joseph Shea and eventually be presented to the Legislature for approval.

Ayers, along with Councillor Durkin, is a member of the Quincy Open Space Task Force appointed by Mayor Sheets to find proactive solutions to the city's open space problem. The task force is chaired by Thomas Koch, executive director of Parks, Forestry, and Cemeteries.

"We need to create a mechanism to create fees," Ayers said. He noted that the task force had found several parcels of land across the city worthy of preservation but that money was always the biggest obstacle.

Ayers, who is also a state representative, said that the building permit fee works hand in hand with state initiatives also trying to build community war chests for opens space preservation. "The cities and towns have to do their share," Ayers said.

Mayor Sheets agreed. "It's absolutely the way to go, far better than bonding," the mayor said. "There's still land out there that has to be saved."

Currently the city faces calls from some residents to purchase the 75 acre HighPoint Development on Quarry St. and Lot 23 at Marina Bay. In both cases, locating adequate funding has been a major sticking point.

Construction Re-Routes MBTA Bus Route #212

MBTA Bus Route #212 has been re-routed until further notice because of intermittent work on a City of Quincy sewer reconstruction project on East and West Elm Avenues. The diversion is in effect Monday through Friday.

Since the construction work location will vary from day to day in its blockage of the regular bus route, the city and the MBTA want to create a consistent location where bus riders can board the bus.

The regular route leaving Quincy Center will be followed from Hancock St. to Elm Ave., then the change will be: a left to Phillips St., a right to Beach St., a left to Billings Rd. and then back to the regular route stops. The bus stop will be at Beach and Billings.

The regular route leaving North Quincy will be followed from Hancock to Billings Rd., then the change will be a right to Beach St., a left to Phillips St., a right to Elm Avenue and back to the regular route. The bus stop will be at Beach and Billings.

For more information, bus patrons should call Joseph Kelly, supervisor of Transportation, at the MBTA Quincy garage at 222-5367 or Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, at 376-1990.

Council Votes More Time For City Employees In Reserves

The city council voted Monday to increase the amount of days city workers could serve in the National Guard without losing salary or benefits.

Councillor and State Rep. Bruce Ayers sponsored the resolution, which passed 8-0, after representatives of the Massachusetts National Guard brought the state law to his attention.

Essentially, the law says that city employees, with the consent of their city council, can increase their annual service time from 17 days to 34 days without loss of salary or paid benefits. The law also applies to state, county, or town workers.

"Reserve service in the military is an important matter of public safety and something state and local government should encourage," Ayers said. "It's a way for us to help those who serve in the reserves."

Twin Rivers, worldwide producers and distributors of fatty acids, plans to invest $77 million in the former Procter & Gamble site with over $65 million of that spent within the first three years. The majority of the money will be spent on machinery and equipment but the company will also build a 4,000 square foot garage on an existing foundation within the plant. The investment, Twin Rivers representatives say, will result in 25 highly skilled technical jobs paying between $20-25 an hour.

Twin Rivers President James Ricci and Senior Vice-President Paul Angelico were on hand to explain why these tax incentives were so necessary to their company.

Ricci explained that the company was at a competitive disadvantage, given its northeast location, because midwestern competitors had easier access to raw materials from the West. The incentives, he said, would be "another arrow in our quiver" in Twin Rivers' attempts to keep prices low and remain competitive.

Angelico added that the first goal of the renovations was to increase its product line. Angelico said that other companies "bundle" their products, offering two or three products together, and that Twin Rivers must offer those same products to retain customer business. Angelico said that Twin Rivers' coconut oils, soybean oils, and animal fats appear in such products as Mobil One and Tide.

The second goal, he said, was to build a storage facility to house snowblowers, plows, salt, and other equipment.

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, spoke on Twin Rivers' behalf. He said that he had been working with Twin Rivers for nearly two months and that the tax incentives sought were similar to those given the shipyard and Boston Scientific. Mannarino pointed to the 7,000 manufacturing jobs which Quincy had lost in the last twelve years, including the 400 jobs lost to the Raytheon closing. He said that Massachusetts, and Quincy, needed to offer tax breaks just to compete with other areas.

The council did not debate the numbers but wanted answers about safety, community impact, and possible mitigation.

Councillor Cahill requested specific examples of how Twin Rivers was addressing the issue of safety since the March fire that claimed the life of Joseph Conti, an employee.

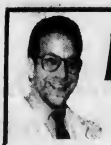
Angelico responded that fire was the biggest concern at Twin Rivers because most of their products are solid at room temperature and sometimes congeal in the pipes. Angelico said the common industry practice of heating the pipes with a hand torch, the practice which killed Conti, is no longer done at Twin Rivers. He also said that the company has put $600,000 into safety measures since March, including a full-time safety manager, a full-time pressure engineer, better access to safety showers, and better response to burn accidents. Angelico emphasized that safety was a major reason for the renovations because Twin Rivers is currently using many pieces of equipment from the old Proctor & Gamble, some of which were built in the 1940's.

At Cahill's request Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman addressed the council. Gorman said that safety issues were a long, ongoing process but that Twin Rivers was "working very hard" and had good lines of communication with the department.

Head of Assessors Marion Fantucchio also answered some of the council's concerns on the tax credits. Twin Rivers, she said, must report annually to the city clerk and could lose its TIF agreement if it doesn't follow through on promises such as new jobs.

The four measures passed but Councillor Raymondi had two amendments included. The first bound Twin Rivers to resolve "any and all" community issues, such as odor and noise, by working with the Ward 1 and 2 Councillors and the Health Department and by re-establishing a Community Awareness Group comprised of Twin Rivers' officials, city councillors, and Ward 1 and 2 residents. The second amendment addressed salary, training, medical, and insurance concerns for Twin Rivers' employees.

Tempers flared when Councillor McCauley inquired about possible mitigation on the part of Twin Rivers, mentioning the fire station at Quincy Point. McCauley noted calls from residents about noise and odor and expressed concern that the company was getting tax relief from the city and a TIF agreement (enabling it to receive the state tax credit) without giving anything in return.



Ricci responded:

"You're not going to give us anything, we earned it. If there is an issue that we're causing, we're prepared to mitigate, but no, we're not interested (in further mitigation). This (the $77 million) is a loan. We have to pay it back. We work on such a slim margin that, for us to go about building fire stations, it wouldn't be worth it for us to get the TIF. We won't do it and can't do it.

"This is not a message you want to send when trying to fill empty Raytheon buildings."

McCauley voted for the items but said he was "really disappointed" at the inflexible attitude of Twin Rivers, adding that many businesses in the city work with the council when it comes to mitigation.

Another flare-up occurred when the councillors were actually voting on the items. Florence Weeks, who lives off Washington St., interrupted the vote asking for a chance to speak and present what she said were 200 signatures opposing the odors, noise, and soot of Twin Rivers. After Weeks was informed that it was not a public hearing, a shouting match ensued between her and Council President Peter Kolson. The incident lasted on and off for approximately five minutes. At one point Weeks, who was asked to leave, wanted to know if she was going to be thrown out. "In about three seconds," Kolson responded.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

BLACK TOENAILS

Black toenails are common among active people, particularly runners and tennis players. Caused by a collection of blood -- a hematoma -- under the toenail, they result from the toes rubbing repeatedly against the shoe. Because such blood may also indicate a fractured bone, it should be seen by a doctor. Within the first 48 hours after a hematoma develops, a podiatric surgeon can save the nail by drilling a tiny hole in the nail plate to release the blood and relieve pressure. If several days have passed, the doctor may remove the nail plate to clean the nail bed. Surgeons sometimes remove the nail plate of a hematoma to prevent fungal infections. Removed nail plates grow back within three to six months.

There are many problems that can affect toenails, including black nails, ingrown nails, fungal nails, and thickened nails, and a professional diagnosis is imperative in order to begin the correct treatment plan. A complete evaluation awaits you here at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, no matter what your foot concerns. We'll also tell you ways to prevent future nail problems from occurring. Office hours are by appointment - please call 617-472-3466.

P.S. It is important to know why a hematoma developed so it can be prevented in the future (by changing shoe sizes or styles, for example.)

Olin Taylor for helping others, especially veterans, ill-children and the less fortunate as his "labor of love," 1996.

Robert Derbes for his volunteer work and many contributions to the community during a "life-long love affair" with his native Quincy, 1997.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Friday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Look Good . . . Feel Better Session At Medical Center

Look Good . . . Feel Better is a unique program designed to help patients maintain their personal appearance while undergoing treatment for cancer.

Sponsored by the American Cancer Society, the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association, and the National Cosmetology Association, the free program features cosmetologists leading group sessions.

Women currently undergoing cancer treatment are invited to attend a Look Good. . . Feel Better group session Monday, Nov. 29 from 5:30 top 7:30 p.m. at Quincy Medical Center in Conference Rooms B and C. A light supper will be served.

To pre-register, call Jane Taub at (617) 376-3112. Deadline for registration is Nov. 24.

"Being able to look your best makes a world of difference to someone through treatment for cancer," said Marilyn Mugno, American Cancer Society Regional Executive for Cancer Control. "Sometimes simple changes in makeup or an attractive way of tying a head scarf can create a turnaround in a woman's outlook and bring back her optimism."

The American Cancer Society estimates that nearly 600,000 American women will develop some form of cancer this year. The good news is that, thanks to advances in medicine, the five-year relative survival rates of all cancers is 60 percent. New cancer treatments are saving more lives, but they are not without side effects. Some women experience total or partial hair loss, changes in the skin tone and texture, and weakened fingernails.

Look Good . . . Feel Better offers free, one-time beauty consultations with a licensed cosmetologist or aesthetician to women who are currently undergoing cancer treatment. The beauty professionals provide tips and practical techniques for coping with hair loss and changes in the skin that often result from chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

The American Cancer Society offers a variety of services to patients, support programs and comprehensive cancer information through its 1-800-ACS-2345 phone number, which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in both English and Spanish, and its online information Web site at www.cancer.org.

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THAT BACK PAIN

Most people will experience some degree of back pain at one time or another in their lifetime. Experts point to the general trend in our society to do more and more sitting, coupled with a general decline in our level of physical fitness as possible causes. Regardless if the back pain is brought on by an accident, poor posture, straining while working around the house, or playing a sport, or by doing too much bending and lifting, there is a lot of confusion as to what to do for treatment.

There are some general recommendations that often prove helpful to patients suffering from lower back pain. In my practice, I strongly urge patients to apply ice immediately after injuring their lower back. The ice tends to reduce any swelling or inflammation while also serving as a natural pain reliever. People with lower back pain should avoid excessive sitting because the seated position dramatically increases the structural pressure of the lower back. The recommended posture is known as the fetal position, whereby the patient lies on his/her side with both knees brought up toward their chest. Excessive exercise, bending, twisting and/or lifting should be avoided, as these actions tend to aggravate an injured lower back.

While I have taken the liberty of offering some basic suggestions on the care of back pain, there is no substitute for a thorough evaluation and examination to correctly diagnose the cause of the problem. The doctor of chiropractic, with intensive training and knowledge of the spine, is eminently qualified to treat patients suffering from lower back pain.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment, please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Study: Drug Treatment Helps MS Patients Preserve Brain Tissue

A new study shows that individuals with relapsing-remitting forms of multiple sclerosis experience a progressive loss of brain volume -- or atrophy -- early in the course of the disease, perhaps before the patient exhibits any MS symptoms. According to the study, published recently in the journal Neurology, drug treatment can slow the progression of this brain tissue loss.

Brain shrinkage is irreversible and is associated with the advance of other common symptoms of MS, such as loss of memory, slurred speech, and reduced muscular control.

"This study is important because we now know that long before the symptoms and signs of MS appear, the disease is active in the brain, and it will continue during the early stages of diagnosis unless adequately treated, as soon as possible, to slow the progression of brain shrinkage and to preserve brain substance," said investigator Lawrence Jacobs, M.D. Dr. Jacobs is head of the Department of Neurology at the Buffalo General Hospital, chief of the Baird Multiple Sclerosis Research Center at Millard Fillmore Hospital, and Professor of Neurology at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Using a new technique developed to measure brain atrophy, researchers analyzed MRIs (magnetic resonance images) from patients with relapsing MS enrolled in the Phase III trial of interferon beta-1a (Avonex®). The data from 70 patients treated with Avonex and 70 placebo-treated patients were compared to MRIs from healthy controls.

"This new measurement tool showed that brain atrophy occurs much earlier in MS patients than previously thought, even in the early stages of the disease, when symptoms are still very mild," said Dr. Jacobs. "In addition, the study showed that patients who received Avonex had a preservation of their brain tissue -- it wasn't subjected to the same loss that the patients who received placebos underwent and the discrepancy between the two was about 50 percent. Thus, a very significant amount of brain substance was preserved by active treatment."

According to Dr. Jacobs, the study provided the following conclusions:

- MS patients indeed experience measurable amounts of brain atrophy that progresses yearly.
- Aside from its other proven therapeutic value for MS patients, Avonex significantly reduces the rate of brain atrophy during the second year of treatment.
- This new method of measuring brain atrophy, called the brain parenchymal fraction, may be a promising method of determining the severity of the disease and a valuable tool for quantifying outcomes in future clinical trials for MS therapies.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

When do I need a hearing aid?

This question is debatable, but there are several things to ask yourself. Are you turning up the TV louder than others can tolerate? Do you avoid social situations that often prove embarrassing? How often do you ask people to repeat themselves? All these symptoms point to a hearing loss that is affecting your lifstyle. A hearing loss is a frustrating experience. You should always have a loss examined in case of underlying medical conditions. If you choose to try a hearing aid, it is because you want to live life to its fullest. It's a mentally tough person that says "I want to hear better; I don't care what it takes." Years ago vanity was an issue; now with completely in-the-canal models it isn't. Background noise also has been greatly reduced with the advent of digital and programmable products. The human brain wants to hear; it is more difficult to recover from a hearing loss when you wait too long. Hearing is a learned process and the brain needs continuous practice processing information sent from the inner ear. We offer a sixty day trial, so "what are you waiting for"? Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

Quincy, North Eye Each Other On Thanksgiving

The Quincy and North Quincy high school football teams have one game left in the 1999 season - and it's against each other.

Next week's annual Thanksgiving Day clash at Veterans Memorial Stadium couldn't have come sooner as both schools lost its games over the weekend.

Old Colony League powerhouse Barnstable (6-3-0, 5-1-0) crushed short-handed Quincy, 39-16, Friday night, and North Quincy dropped its third straight game to Hingham, 10-7, Saturday afternoon. It was Hingham's first win of the season.

Quincy (0-10, 0-6) fell behind 39-3 before it finally scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter. Sophomore Chris Sullivan scored from 2 yards out and junior Joe Thorley added a 4-yard TD run. Sophomore Tom Shruhan nailed a 22-yard field goal, his first of the season.

Senior quarterback and leading scorer Dan Kelly did not play as he sat out with a knee injury. Right now, he's doubtful for the North Quincy according to head coach Bob Noble. Junior Mark Robertson started in his place.

Quincy was banged up, losing six starters during the game. The Presidents will look to snap a 20-game losing streak when it faces the Red Raiders.

With senior Sean Adams and junior Max Repoff sidelined with ankle injuries, North Quincy (2-7-1, 2-4) also started a new quarterback, sophomore Dennis Thompson.

Hingham quarterback Nick Shore tossed a 55-yard TD strike to Jamarr Humphrey with 1:52 left in the first half for a 7-0 lead. Shore also rushed for a team-high 76 yards.

Hingham made it a 10-0 halftime lead when senior tri-captain Matt Fallon recovered a fumble at the North Quincy 40. In just his third game as a kicker, Fallon booted a 32-yard field goal with two seconds left.

Senior tailback Steve Minukas led North Quincy's offense, finishing with 162 yards on 27 carries. He scored the Red Raiders' touchdown on a 1-yard run with 2:14 left in the third quarter.

Bohan, MacDonald On All-Star Swim Squad

Junior Sheila Bohan and sophomore Katelyn MacDonald of the Quincy-North Quincy cooperative girls' swim team have been selected to the Pilgrim Conference All-star Team.

Bohan has qualified for both the states and sectionals in the butterfly, and has made the sectionals in the 200- and 500-meter individual medley.

MacDonald made the sectionals in the 50- and 100-meter freestyle.

North Girls Volleyball Battle Barnstable For Title

As the new millennium approaches, the North Quincy High School girls' volleyball team still has to take care of business in the 1990s.

Saturday, the Red Raiders knocked out top seed and undefeated Framingham to capture the Division 1 Central Sectional championship for the eighth time in the past nine years.

Today (Thursday) they will battle with league rival and defending Division 1 state champs Barnstable at Medway High School at 7 p.m.

North Quincy swept Barnstable in the regular season, winning 2-0 at home and 2-1 on the road. North Quincy has won the state championship three times since 1987, the last one in 1992. Barnstable is looking for its fourth straight title.

"Knowing we have beaten them not once but twice, especially in their own gym has been the high point of the season," the team told Channel Five sports reporter Mike Lynch. "We also know that we have to continue to play a smart, aggressive game and take advantage every time we see an opening."

North Quincy dropped Game 1 to Framingham, 15-13, then rebounded to win the next three, 15-12, 15-11, 15-8, in the two-hour, 20-minute hard fought match.

Seniors Meghan Ginty and Jessica Lorman led the Red Raiders in Game 2. In Game 3, head coach Jim Rendle made some line adjustments, alternating Jessica Barbeau and senior co-captain Caitlin Powers to come up with three well-timed saves in the win. Amy Jellison and sophomore Beth Houghton powered North Quincy in the clincher.

North Quincy finished the regular season with a 20-2 record to earn the No. 3 seed in the Central Division. Its only losses were to New Bedford and Medway.

In the first round, North Quincy easily beat No. 14 Burncoat of Worcester, 15-0, 15-0, 15-4. Senior co-captain Katie Jellsion and her sister Amy led the offensive attack. Houghton, Lisa Della Crocce and Tia Harris were the defensive specialists.

Rendle provided his novice tournament players the chance to gain valuable postseason experience. Heather Lynch, Kahli Dearani, Lauren Campbell, Shannon Desmond, Maureen McCarthy, Kristen DiMatteo, Julia McGonagle and Casey Lorman gave the fans a glimpse into the future.

In the quarter final match against No. 6 Milford (16-3), North Quincy came out strong to win the first two games. Five consecutive service points by Powers and the crisp consistent setting and net coverage of Ginty carried the early momentum. Milford rallied from a seven points down to take Game 3. Quincy won the final game, 15-1.

"We let down a little in Game 3," Rendle said. "But everyone pulled together in the final game and did what they needed to do."

North Quincy beat Newton North last Tuesday, 15-5, 15-10, 15-3, to move on to face Framingham. Lorman, coming off a back injury that sidelined her for the past month, came back strong. Her timing and presence at the net forced several Newton North errors.

Amy and Katie Jellison combined for 28 of the 45 game points. Ginty, Barbeau and Harris all came up with blocks and carefully placed tips. Houghton and Powers also played well.

Neighborhood Gyms Program Starts Saturday

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct supervised recreation programs in 10 neighborhood school gymnasiums on Saturday beginning Nov. 20.

The Saturday gym programs are free of charge and are open to boys and girls age 8 through high school. The time varies for each of the age groups.

All programs have a walk in registration at each location, and are open only to Quincy residents. Participants may attend the location of their choice, not just their neighborhood gymnasium.

Assorted gym activities such as floor hockey, tag football, basketball and relay races will be conducted under the supervision of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff. The core schedule is from 8:30 to 9:45 a.m. for elementary age youth, 9:45 to 11:15 a.m. for middle school age, and 11:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. for high school age. Some adjustments in this time schedule may be. made at different locations to accommodate differences in attendance by age group.

The Saturday schedule is offered at the following locations: Atherton Hough, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Clifford Marshall, Wollaston, and Atlantic.

Despite Frustration, Football Still Fun For Quincy's Kelly

By CHRIS POISSON

Dan Kelly has already heaved a 26-yard touchdown pass and hurdled a player for a 10-yard TD run to pull Quincy within striking distance, 21-13, of Plymouth South in an Oct. 29 game at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

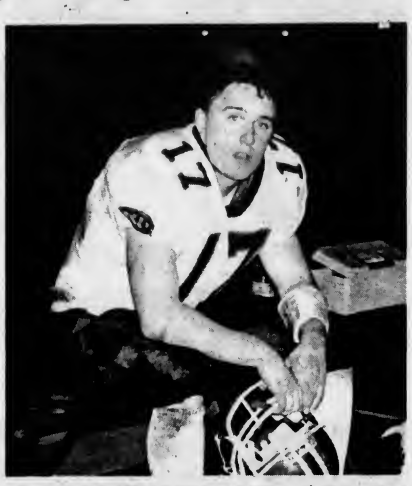
It's now late in the game and he's sitting on the bench near the water cooler, praying the defense can get the ball into his miraculous hands again. He had just misfired on wideout Andy Tam's third-down deep route, a throw he would like back.

When Quincy's Chris Regens breaks through the line for a huge third-down sack, No. 17 hops off the bench and, with his jersey looking like half an Oreo cookie, the back dirtier than a lineman's and the front as white as a kicker's, trots onto the field with 3:13 left in hopes of a splendid fourth-quarter drive.

On the first play, Regens is stuffed for no gain and one faithful fan, irked by head coach Bob Noble's play call shouts, "Throw the ball, will ya." Words he would like back.

On the ensuing play, Kelly zaps a lead pass to Russell Mullen in the backfield, but the ball glides off his fingertips, falls to the ground and a P-S player picks up the live ball and scoots the other way for a touchdown.

Comeback over. Game over. Season almost over.



That's the way 1999 has been for Quincy. It can't seem to make the one play to come up with that elusive win. Since its last victory, John Elway has won two Super Bowls, retired and is now doing those Original Coors' commercials with ESPN's Dan Patrick.

The program has lost 20 straight games. The signal caller in 19 of those games is Kelly. He didn't play in Friday's 39-16 loss at Barnstable because of a knee injury, and is doubtful for the Thanksgiving Day game.

Quarterback is the most visible position on the field and with the way the last two years have gone you might be thinking, "Why is this kid still out there? He's high school football's Anthony Young (he lost over 20 straight games with the Mets in the early '90s)."

The truth is the 6'1", 200-pound senior just might be the best kept secret in EMass high school football, except to his familiar foes in the Old Colony League.

So far this season he has passed for 1,216 yards, 7 TDs and rushed for 8. Chris Noble holds Quincy's season passing record with 1,834 yards. Kelly had a legitimate shot at surpassing Noble if it weren't for his knee injury.

SENIOR DAN KELLY has not won a game in two years as Quincy's starting quarterback, even though he is one of the league's elite signal callers. He might not get the chance to notch his first victory in next week's Thanksgiving Day game because of a knee injury.

"He's an intensely competitive individual," says Noble. "He wants to be the best he possibly can be. He's not satisfied simply with just playing well. He wants to get better."

Need more? Kelly has factored in on 96 of the team's 129 points. He's 74% of the offense. Take him out of the starting lineup and Quincy struggles to even move the chains.

"He's an outstanding player. No question about it," says Noble. "He's a helluva player. His abilities speak for himself. He's as good as, if not better than any quarterback around. He can throw it and he can run. He's a big, strong kid and he's tough to bring down."

"It would be nice," says Kelly of the record. "But it doesn't make up for the losing. I'd rather win games than set a record. It's really not that important. I'd trade it in for wins."

Kelly isn't accustomed to losing, especially for this long a time. He played on the varsity team his sophomore year when the Presidents went 5-5, including a 7-0 shutout against North Quincy for their fourth consecutive Thanksgiving Day victory. He won some games on the jayvee team. And in eighth grade, he quarterbacked the Manets to the Quincy Youth Football League championship.

"It's been pretty tough," says Kelly. "We haven't won a game in two years. It's tough practicing, going out there everyday. It's pretty hard when you know you can beat the teams, but you're not playing to your potential."

"He's extremely frustrated," says Noble. "Danny is just a reflection of all the kids. I just can't tell you the level of frustration where're all at."

Although Quincy has been blown out, dropped a couple heartbreakers and yielded more points than an arena football team, Kelly enjoys taking the snaps from week to week.

"Yeah, it's still fun," says Kelly. "I come out here and have fun. Basically you're playing for fun anyway because the season is just about over. You can't really do anything. We're just waiting for North Quincy and the Thanksgiving Day game.

"It's really important. My first couple of years in high school we played them and beat them. It's really important to beat them this year. It's my senior year and I'd like to win the game."

Quincy's last win came in the 1997 Thanksgiving Day game. Kelly and everyone else knows that. His friend Kevin Moore, who was seriously injured in a car accident in May of 1998, was the starting QB.

"He was a good quarterback," says Kelly. "He knew how to play. He won games. He really didn't have a strong arm but he was a smart quarterback. That's what I learned the most from him."

Kelly has a different style. His right arm is like both a rifle and a catapult, capable of firing a bullet or lofting a touch pass. He's not fast, but he's not shy of tucking the ball away and taking off, either. Kelly admired the way Joe Montana stood cool in the pocket and feels that's the strongest part of his game.

"I'm not a bad runner but I'm a little slow. Basically, my strength is just staying in the pocket and throwing the ball. I like the way Montana stood in the pocket. But he didn't run the ball a lot like I do," says

Football Still Fun For Kelly

Kelly with a grin.

Kelly, though, seems to play with more of a Brett Favre-like mentality. Sometimes like the smooth three-time MVP. Other times like his wild days with the Falcons and Packers. He's not fearful of throwing the ball anywhere at anytime. In fact, he'd love to air it out every down.

"If I had to find a weakness in terms of what he does, I think he tries sometimes to do too many things," says Noble. "Sometimes, I think he feels he has to do quite a bit. Almost everything. He doesn't. He has to let his teammates carry their share of the load, too."

"I think I try to take on too much once in a while," admits Kelly. "It's tough playing quarterback. You think you have to make all the plays."

"That's both a strength and a weakness," says Noble. "He wants to make a play. You want a kid who isn't afraid of the pressure of having to come up with the big play. He certainly isn't afraid of that."

Right now, Kelly is undecided about his future. Division 2, Division 3 and prep school are all possibilities for a post-high school career.

But Kelly is not looking that far ahead. There's still next week's Thanksgiving Day game to play, if he's able to, and then a basketball season, where he's nearing the 1,000 career-point mark.

Somehow, you get the feeling he'd take a win over a 20-point game any day.

Hair Place Clippers Men's Softball Champs

Hair Place Clippers swept Brigham and Women's Hospital in four games to capture the Quincy Men's Softball championship recently.

Hair Place took Game 1, 19-8, behind Steve Touma's two home runs. John Riley had a strong defensive game in center field.

Brigham blew leads of 6-0 and 10-3 as Hair Place came back to win, 16-11, in a sloppy Game 2. Hair Place tallied 11 runs in the fifth inning. Richie Kelly slugged two homers.

In Game 3, Brigham actually had a 3-0 lead but were blown away in the end, losing 27-7. Hair Place had an 11-run third inning. Third baseman Sean Gately and shortstop Dave Tocchio shined in the field. Ron Affsa and Rob Hannah chipped in with three hits apiece.

Missing Jim Peters, Kelly and Tocchio in Game 4, Hair Place banged out 33 hits in its 22-11 series-clinching win at Faxon Park in Quincy.

Kevin Duffy stroked four singles and Gately had three hits. The Clippers' win was highlighted by a 13-run sixth inning.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

It has been said that, "Human nature being what it is does not change." True? Absolutely not! To those that claim, "Human nature never changes," it is fair to reply, "It is human nature to change itself."

There have been people down through history who HAVE changed the directions of their lives. They have come to a moment in life when they said, "From here on out I intend to alter my ways, to change my course of living."

Before we give up all hope in man changing; before we throw our weight to those who do not give man the benefits of the doubt, should we not remember the twice-born men, like Paul, who changed the course of their lives?

The power of God on the human heart can change a person's habits, impulses, and tastes. The important fact is that religion can take men where it finds them and changed them into what God wants them to be.

God wants men who are weak, for in Him they become strong. God wants men who are afraid, for if they let Him, He can make them men of courage. God wants men who are profane, for when they gamble their lives on Him they become men of great praise. In short, God wants you!

Lower MBTA Assessment Means Local Aid Windfall

Quincy's MBTA assessment for the Fiscal Year 2000 budget gives the city a large, unanticipated increase in local aid, announces Quincy's legislation delegation.

"Quincy's legislative delegation successfully worked to equalize Quincy's MBTA assessment--the payment the city makes to the state for its MBTA usage--with the assessments that all communities pay for their MBTA usage," Sen. Michael Morrissey said.

Quincy's MBTA assessment was decreased by more than $2.1 million under the state budget recently passed by the legislature.

"Quincy's lowered MBTA assessment translates directly into a much needed local aid increase for the city," said Rep. Steve Tobin.

"During the last fiscal year, Quincy paid an assessment of $3,730,191. During FY00, the city will be assessed $3,638,740, dropping to $1,671,905 over the next five years," said Rep. Ron Mariano.

"With the city's property tax rate rising substantially to support Quincy Medical Center," Morrissey added, "this unanticipated windfall in local aid could not come at a better time."

Rep. Bruce Ayers said, "This change in Quincy's assessment is particularly timely because with no change in the MBTA's funding method, Quincy would have been slated to pay $3,823,446--an increase of $93,255."

"The city can use this unexpected funding for our schools and to mitigate its contribution to the merger of Quincy Hospital with Boston Medical Center," Tobin said.

"An additional $91,000 in local aid is a small but important windfall for the city," Ayers added.

The MBTA assessments paid by municipalities are determined using a formula weighing a municipality's distance from Boston and its population, among other factors. "In order to equalize the cost among all municipalities that benefit from using the MBTA, 78 municipalities were added to the group that pays an MBTA assessment," Morrissey said.

"This increase in the number of municipalities sharing the cost of the MBTA means that each community previously assessed will pay a lower assessment in the years to come. The change in MBTA assessments is a part of the legislature's larger plan to 'forward fund' the MBTA by setting out an annual budget for MBTA spending," Mariano said.

At present, the MBTA spends the amount it requires to operate for the year without a previously approved spending plan.

Raymondi Resolution Seeks City Control Of Quincy Avenue

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi thinks the city can do a better job maintaining Quincy Avenue than the Massachusetts Highway Department.

Monday night the city council agreed.

The council voted 8-0 to pass Raymondi's resolution notifying the MHD that the city wanted control of the 5,000 foot stretch of Quincy Avenue from Scammel St. to the Braintree town line.

Raymondi cited the major expansions currently underway in that area and how important it was to have clean, safe, and well-maintained sidewalks and adequate traffic controls. He also said that the area as it stands now was not well maintained.

David Colton, the city's DPW commissioner, addressed the council and agreed with Raymondi's recommendations. The state, he said, no longer really took care of the roads and that constantly needing state approval for renovation projects was frustrating. "We can do a better job keeping the roads cleaner and better repaired," Colton said.

New Kolson Program Rewards Volunteerism

Ward 1 Councillor and Council President Peter V. Kolson announces that he has instituted a new program, the "Community Hero Card Program," to reward volunteerism in the city.

Kolson, who said the program will also benefit retail businesses, has asked the Mayor's office to follow up on it during the next year.

In the program, a credit card is used when volunteering for social and functionary causes in the City of Quincy. The hours are then credited to the volunteers by retailers who participate in the program.

CHCP, Kolson said, is modeled after similar programs he has been studying for some time which started in the mid-western states and in Florida.

Kolson said he will work with the Mayor's office to sign on retailers as soon possible and has asked representatives from the program to speak and present details within the coming weeks.

"This is an important and stimulating program for the next century," Kolson said. "The mayor is very interested in the project."

80 Other Property Owners Receive Honorable Mention

The Quincy Park Department announces 25 winners of the 1999 "Neat Neighbors" contest which honors those residents who maintain their yards and properties in a spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy.

Winners were chosen from more than 120 nominees. Another 80 property owners received honorable mention. Winners and honorable mention recipients are listed with this story.

Each winner will receive a flowering shrub that my be planted in their yard.

"The city is happy to recognize these people who make a positive aesthetic impact on entire neighborhoods through their hard work and dedication," said Thomas Koch, executive director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"We are able to achieve a more beautiful city, a more livable city, because of the work of our 'Neat Neighbors' winners. We all owe them a debt of gratitude for the impact they make on the quality of our neighborhoods," Koch said.

From Memorial Day through Labor Day, residents were asked to nominate a friend or neighbor who maintains their yard and property in the spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy. Once the nominations were received, Park Department personnel inspected the properties to ensure that they met the requirements of the contest.

Twenty-five winners were chosen at random from the qualifying nominees.

"All of the nominees should be recognized for their commitment to keeping their yards clean and beautiful. Both our winners and honorable mention designees should be proud of the work they have done. They should know that their hard work has gone unnoticed by their friends and neighbors," Koch added.

This is the second year of the "Neat Neighbors" contest. The contest was initiated by Mayor James Sheets and Koch to spread the message of Cleaner, Greener Quincy to cover private properties as well as parks, playgrounds and open space areas.

In addition to the Neat Neighbors contest, the Park Department also conducts a Yard Care Conference in the spring to help residents with information on the best way to care for their lawn, garden, trees and yard.

Men Needed As Big Brothers

Big Brother Association of Greater Boston is seeking men to become volunteer mentors to boys waiting in the Greater Boston communities.

Information sessions about the program will be held at the agency's Quincy office, 1509 Hancock St., Suite 205, Monday, Nov. 22 at 6 p.m.

Individuals interested in becoming Big Brothers, or signing up to attend the commitment-free informational session are asked to call (617) 542-9090. "Walk in" attendees are also welcome.

Generally, Big Brothers meet with their "Littles" for a few hours every week or every other week. Though participating in a variety of activities, the few hours spent together have a profound effect on both the Big's and Little's personal development.

A recent survey by Public/Private ventures of Philadelphia found that boys who have Big Brothers are 52% less likely to skip school, 37% less likely to skip class, 46% less likely to start using drugs and 37% less likely to start drinking than their peers.

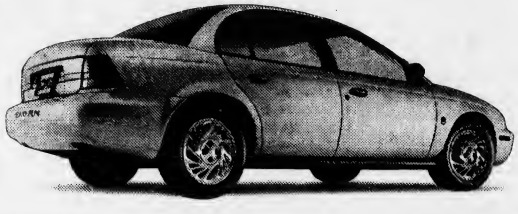
Bellotti Presents $1,000 Grant To Quincy Police DARE Program



Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently presented a $1,000 check to the Quincy Police Department to be used for DARE programs.

Police Chief Thomas Frane and DARE Officer John Grazioso received the check at a luncheon at the Norfolk County Correctional Center.

"DARE has been an effective tool in persuading our young people to stay off drugs and avoid violence," said Bellotti. "Like other community policing resources, DARE has played a role in our declining crime rates."

At a recent luncheon attended by most of the 28 police chiefs and their DARE officers in Norfolk County, Bellotti distributed checks for $1,000 to each department. All told, the Sheriff's Office donated $28,000 to DARE programs throughout the county.

McDermott Gains 3 Votes, Cain Satisfied With Ward 3 Recount Result

Incumbent Patrick McDermott gained three votes over John Cain in Saturday's recount requested by the latter.

Only one of the five precincts -- Precinct 1 -- was examined before the recount was called off with Cain's consent.

McDermott picked up three votes in the precinct while Cain remained the same, making McDermott the winner by 800 instead of 797 votes in the Nov. 2 city election.

The official vote now stands at 1,955 for McDermott and 1,155 for Cain.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said McDermott's three vote gain came from ballots that were previously counted as blanks.

"There was a smudge or a slight mark on the three ballots that the recount by hand showed should have gone to McDermott."

McDermott, who was at the recount, proposed after the three-vote gain that the recount be called off, noting it was "costing money," Shea said.

PATRICK MCDERMOTT

JOHN CAIN

Cain and his advisers conferred and concurred with McDermott's motion and the Board of Registrars, supervising the recount, agreed to call it off.

"The system works pretty good," Shea said afterward.

Cain thought so as well. "I was pleased with the recount," Cain said. "I have a right to petition for a recount. If only I had received less phone calls, I probably wouldn't have done it, but I received over 20.

"The first manual recount was so accurate that there was no reason to proceed any further. I agreed with Councillor McDermott."

Cain also said that everyone involved was gracious and courteous and that Shea "was a real gentleman about it."

Shea estimated the cost of the abbreviated recount at about $4,000. If it had gone all the way through the four other precincts in Ward 3, the cost would have run "about $6,000," he said.

This was the ninth election and only the first requested recount since the present voting system was initiated in the 1996 presidential primary.

Cain, making his first run for elective office, said he

Plans To Ride In Christmas Parade

Sheets Returns To City Hall, Making Progress

Mayor James Sheets returned to City Hall Monday still hurting from the hip injury he suffered in a ladder fall at his home Nov. 6.

"I'm tired, still have some aches and pains," he told The Sun. "But I'm making progress as the doctors expected -- absolute progress."

He said he was looking forward to the Christmas parade Sunday.

"I'll probably ride in the parade," he said. "I don't think I will be walking this year."

Sheets had been doing some work at home last week after being hospitalized at the Quincy Medical Center.

JAMES SHEETS

He suffered a badly bruised hip and shoulder bruises when he fell an estimated seven feet when an attic ladder gave way while he was storing household articles.

The hip bruise was so severe that doctors were fearful of potential blood clotting and had him under close observation at the medical center until he was released Nov. 20.

Sheets was credited with being the catalyst in keeping the then Quincy Hospital open by securing a $12 million no-interest loan from the state allowing it to affiliate with Boston Medical Center.

Sheets said he stressed the need to keep the hospital open and its convenience to Quincy residents.

He said he personally found out just how needed and convenient it is.

A Woman Mayor: When? Who?

Twenty eight men have been elected mayor since Quincy became a city in 1888.

That's 111 years of political male power.

As we approach a new century and millennium, a timely question: will Quincy someday have a woman mayor?

In all those 111 years, we have had only three women city councillors: Edna Austin (elected 1947), Joanne Condon (1977) and Patricia Toland (1981).

The current city council is all-male and the new one to be seated in January, 2000 is also all-male.

It would seem women could do better than that at the polls considering that approximately 56 percent of the city's registered voters are women.

Will there be a Her Honor in Quincy's near future? Is there a potential one on the political scene right now?

If there is, it would seem to be Christine Cedrone who in the recent city election led the school committee field and was one of the three top vote getters overall.

CEDRONE

Cedrone racked up a vote of 11,154, third highest in the election. Only Mayor James Sheets (14,487) and Councillor at-large Paul Harold (11,564) topped her.

There's already speculation that she might make a councillor at-large bid in 2001. A win there might start her thinking about that big third floor office at City Hall.

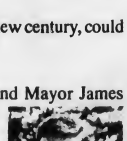
Cedrone is only 29 and now in her third year at New England Law School. She makes an attractive candidate for any office.

Of course being able to get one of three votes running for school committee or councillor at-large isn't the same as running one-on-one for mayor.

But the 11,154 votes she got this year is still quite impressive.

If she were to run, she wouldn't be the first woman to do so. Two come to mind: Grace Saphir and Joanne Condon who unsuccessfully challenged incumbents Walter Hannon and Frank McCauley.

If being a woman is a political drawback Cedrone would have to overcome that if she ever decided to run for mayor.



And one other little obstacle: she's a Republican in a Democratic stronghold.

But city elections are non-partisan and the last mayor before Sheets was Frank McCauley, a Republican and now a councillor at-large.

If there's a woman mayor in the new century, could her name be Christine Cedrone?

FORMER CITY COUNCILLOR Richard Koch, Jr., who gave up a promising political career here has a new one going on the Cape.

KOCH

Koch, who left Quincy 10 years ago to join the Brewster Police Department, was elected this year to the Nauset Regional School Board.

He had been urged to run for selectman but as a police officer, it would have been a conflict.

His wife, Nancy, is a teacher in Chatham but no conflict there. Koch represents Brewster and not Chatham on the school board.

Koch came up from Brewster to attend the dinner tribute to Bob Foy.

HOW WOULD THE media handle the end of the world?

Dr. Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College, sends also these suggested headlines:

Wall Street Journal: Dow Jones Plummets As World Ends

Sports Illustrated: Game Over

Rolling Stone: The Grateful Dead Reunion Tour

Elle: What To Wear To The End Of The World

Martha Stewart's Living: 101 Classic Things You Can Make From Cinders & Slag

Lady's Home Journal: Lose 10 Pounds by Judgement Day With Our New Armageddon Diet!

TV Guide: Death And Damnation! Nielson Ratings Soar!

America On Line: System Temporarily Down. Try Calling Back In 15 Minutes.

(How would The Sun handle it? In the same spirit, being strictly a Quincy community newspaper and letting other media cover the rest of the world, maybe we would come up with something like: Quincy Says Solong!)

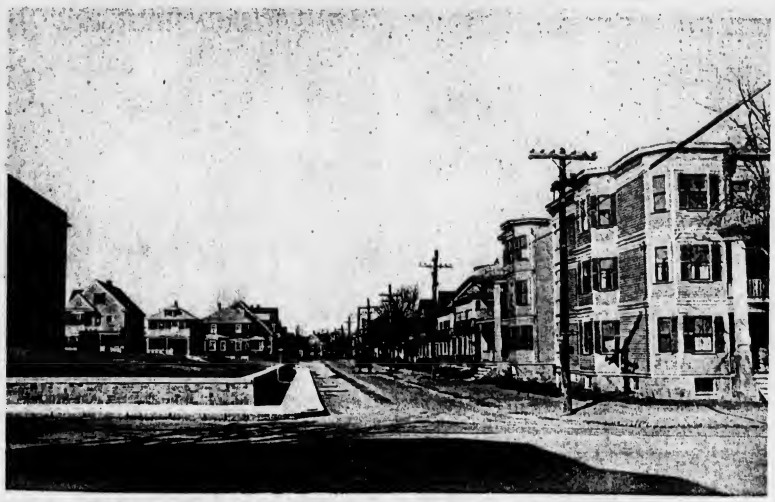
AND: BILL DRAICCHIO, a member of the Board of Voter Registrars, turned a young 75 the other day.



DRAICCHIO

That will make a lot of former Pollard and St. Joseph's school students feel a little older. Draicchio was "Officer Bill" to them for some 33 years crossing them at Washington St. and Southern Artery from the 1950s until his retirement in 1989.

Draicchio now is known as the "Candy Man" around City Hall. At, last count, he had 43 jars of assorted candies in the city clerk's office. Everybody in the hall seems to find a reason to stop by and sample the goodies.

Draicchio also is the sharpest dresser around City Hall. A carry-over from the days he worked at Remick's. (And guys, don't you miss Remick's?)

Urges Support For Children's Protection Act

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Each day in Massachusetts, our children are needlessly being exposed to toxic pesticides in their schools, day care centers, and playgrounds. These pesticides have been linked to learning disorders, cancer, reproductive and nervous system damage. With children being incredibly susceptible to the harmful effects of chemicals, this matter is extremely urgent.

The Children's Protection Act, now in the Massachusetts legislature, would protect kids from being unnecessarily exposed to pesticides. It would also promote safer, cost effective, successful alternatives.

Unfortunately, chemical manufacturers have managed to block this important legislation from passing. Massachusetts' children deserve to be able to attend schools which do not pose a threat to their general health.

I urge everyone to stand up for our children's rights by contacting your Representative and Senator and urging them to pass the Children's Protection Act.

A Note Of Thanksgiving From The Tupe Family

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At this time of giving thanks, our family would like to remember the McLarnon family.

The McLarnon Family awards a memorial scholarship to a senior member of the football team of Archbishop Williams High School. The recipient must be a student with a good work ethic; well liked and a respected member of the Archbishop Williams community.

Our heartfelt thanks to them for choosing our son, Kiva Tupe -tri-captain of the 1999 AWHS football team as the recipient of the. Matt McLarnon Memorial Award. We are honored that the McLarnons considered our son worthy of a scholarship in memory of their son.

Matt McLarnon was a graduate of the Class of 1992.

Both the McLarnon and Tupe Family are from Quincy.

Congratulations To The NQHS Girls' Soccer Team

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Congratulations to the North Quincy High School girls' soccer team on its success this season.

The girls worked together and in spite of injuries and other setbacks remained focused and accomplished much more than many people expected. A great deal of credit should be given to Coach Paul Bregoli.

The girls' soccer team was at one time considered an easy win for all the teams in the Old Colony League. During his five years of coaching the team Mr. Bregoli has changed that. The team and Coach Bregoli are now highly respected in the Old Colony League.

As a former player I have experienced not only the knowledge that Mr. Bregoli brings to the field but also his enthusiasm. He encourages the players to do their best not only on the playing field but in all areas of their life. The City of Quincy should be proud of these girls and their coach.

PTA Cites Overcrowding At North Jr. High

Nov. 18 - 24

By PAUL HAROLD

North Junior High School PTA officer Mrs. Ralph Bradshaw was among those parents who met with Supt. Paul Gossard regarding overcrowding in the school's auditorium, cafeteria and gymnasium.

There were 800 students in the junior high school with only 750 seats in the auditorium. The capacity in the cafeteria shared with NQHS was 400, with 600 students per luncheon shift and students had to take gym classes at the Montclair school.

Part of the school department's problem was the post-war shortages of construction materials, particularly steel.

Dr. Gossard said his long range solution to the overcrowding was the construction of a new junior high school on the lower side of Merrymount Park, beyond the stadium.

HANCOCK MONUMENT DEDICATED

City government and business leaders joined representatives from the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company in dedicating the huge bronze bust of John Hancock on the grounds of the Adams Academy.

The monument was given to the city by the insurance company and placed on the academy property which was built on the site of Hancock's birthplace.

Delcevare King was chairman of the committee that included granite manufacturer "Cliff" Canniff and city historian William Edwards. On behalf of the city, Mayor Thomas Burgin accepted the memorial from George Thompson, Jr., of the insurance company.

SHIPYARD EMPLOYMENT SEEN DOUBLING

Henry Hazard, general manager of the Fore River Shipyard, predicted that employment at the yard would double from 4,400 to 10,000. The yard recently gained a new contract for an $8 million high speed cargo ship.

Despite shortages of copper and aluminum, the yard was working over-time. Shortages of machinists forced some of those workers to put in a 12-hour over-time day.

Six Quincy High School Students Earn AP Honors

The College Board has named six Quincy High students AP Scholars in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level AP examinations.

Stacie Bush, Haiheng Huang, Beth Perry, and Jimmy Tan qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP examinations with grades of 3 or higher.

David Haendler and Elden Tam qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning a grade of at least 3.25 on all AP exams taken with grades of 3 or above on four or more of these exams.

Over 700,000 students, approximately 23 percent of America's graduating seniors, took one or more AP exams. Of that group, only 13 percent performed at a sufficiently high level to merit AP Scholar recognition.

AP examinations take place in May after students complete challenging college-level courses at their high schools. The tests are graded on a five-point scale with five being the highest.

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit, advanced placement, or both for grades of 3 or above. More than 1,400 institutions award a year of credit (sophomore standing) to students presenting a sufficient number of qualifying grades.

There are 32 AP examinations offered in 18 subject areas, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response (essay or problem solving) questions.

(Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

David, Jessie Minkofsky Celebrate 60th Anniversary

David and Jessie Minkofsky of Swan Rd. will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary Nov. 30.

But the couple said they will honor the occasion, as they do every year, by volunteering at the Thanksgiving meal at Father Bill's Place to feed the homeless.

The Thanksgiving holiday is an important one for the Minkofskys: They met Thanksgiving of 1932, were married Thanksgiving of 1939, and moved to Quincy Thanksgiving of 1959.

Both are originally from Boston's West End.

The two have volunteered Sundays at Father Bill's Place for the past 10 years. On Thursdays they can be found at the Sun-Bridge Nursing Home in Randolph, where they have volunteered for the past six years.

David, an auto parts manager for 40 years, is a World War II veteran, having served in the U.S. Army Engineer Corps. He is past commander and current graves registration officer for the Jewish War Veterans and officer of the day for the Quincy Veterans Council. He and his wife, along with his mother-in-law Sophie, have been volunteering at the VA Hospital for over 20 years.

He has been awarded the Veterans' Citizen of the Year Award and the 1985 Adams Shore "Good Neighbor Award." He is also a Deputy Sheriff, Constable, Notary Public and a member of the Shriners.

The Minkofskys have three children -- Ryna, Marsha, and Stephen -- as well as five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Seaside Gardeners To Light Squantum Christmas Tree

Seaside Gardeners of Squantum will host its first annual "Lighting of the Tree" to welcome the holiday season to Squantum on Sunday, Nov. 28 at 4:30 p.m. at the Gilbert Memorial Park, corner of Huckins Ave. and East Squantum St.

"I hope everyone takes a break before the hectic onset of the holiday and millennium celebrations to join us and make it part of the memories of the season," said Maureen Spinale, chairperson and spokeswoman for the event.

"There will be a very special surprise for children, young and old. Home baked goods and refreshments will be served."

Every year, homeowners in Quincy donate trees to be used for the holidays. According to Park-Cemetery-Forestry Executive Director Thomas Koch, the tree to be used for the Squantum celebration is a 20-foot blue spruce donated by a Merrymount homeowner.

"Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and Mr. Koch are to be thanked for having been instrumental procuring and setting up the tree and making arrangements with the utility company for the lighting," Spinale said, adding she hopes the event becomes a holiday tradition.

Marshall Legrice of Lansdowne Street will officially usher in the season by lighting the tree. For the evening, he will also be the official "Papa Christmas."

Rita's Sweet Potato Casserole

Today's recipe for a delicious sweet potato casserole given to me by our daughter Rita,, is a great side dish with meat or poultry or a main dish with a salad. It can also be made without the pancetta (Italian bacon) but with a favorite vegetable instead. It also can be made ahead of time, which I plan to do as a side dish at Christmas dinner.

Sweet Potato Casserole

2 large sweet potatoes (peeled and thinly sliced)
1 medium onion (chopped)
1 or 2 shallots (chopped)
2 cloves garlic (chopped)
1/4 ounce pancetta or bacon (chopped)
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup Gouda or other semi soft cheese (grated)
1/3 cup parmesan (grated)
1/4 cup sherry
salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 and grease a 2 quart baking pan. Peel and slice the potatoes. Saute the pancetta or bacon in olive oil until crisp. Add the onions, shallots, chopped garlic and saute until lightly browned. Add the sherry and cook until reduced by half. Place this mixture in a bowl and cool it slightly.

In the greased baking pan, layer the potatoes in three layers, adding 1/3 of onion mixture and cheeses to each layer, ending with onion and cheese on top. Cook for 30-45 minutes covered until potatoes are tender.

New School Committeeman's Views:

Phelan Advocates Small Class Sizes To Increase Student Achievement

By CRAIG SALTERS

WILLIAM PHELAN

William Phelan, newly elected member of the School Committee, wants to increase student achievement by decreasing class size.

And he wants those classes to shrink first in the elementary schools, grades 1-3 especially.

Those years, says Phelan, are the years public education can have its strongest, and most lasting, impact.

Phelan, a general practice attorney in Quincy who lives on Monroe Rd. with his wife Tracey and four children, finished second in the November School Committee elections with 9,808 votes. It was his first time running for elected office.

Phelan's campaign platform, he said, rested upon three issues: class size, school safety, and technology. "But my main focus was class size," he said, "because it goes hand and hand with everything else."

"Class size has been moving in the right direction throughout the mayor's tenure, quite frankly," Phelan continued. "But maintaining current class sizes is not enough. We must decrease them more, particularly in the youngest grades, 1-3."

Phelan said that decreasing class size had always been a high priority for him but was made more so after speaking with Janet Cochlough, a Quincy teacher who alerted him to the hard data found in a Tennessee student/teacher ratio study called Project Star.

Project Star is a 14-year study started in the 1980's in which roughly 12,000 students were placed in small (13-17) or large (22-25) classrooms from kindergarten through grade 3. The study showed that students in the smaller classes tested higher both in the classroom and on standardized tests, including the SAT. The benefits of smaller classes early on extended throughout their schooling: 45 percent of students from smaller classes graduated with honors, as opposed to 29 percent from the larger classes.

The Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) touts Project Star as one of the most credible and significant studies on the subject and recently had a principal investigator for the project, Dr. Helen Pate-Bain, present her research findings in Boston.

And Phelan is a firm believer. "It was incredible what an effect the low class size at an early age had. It's at that crucial time when a child is just learning to read. A credible study like this shouldn't be ignored."

Phelan believes that investing more in the early ages, with lower class sizes, reading specialists, and more training for teachers, will pay for itself in the long run because older students will have more skills, better self-esteem, and less resistance to learning. And, Phelan adds, those students with LD problems will be identified earlier and given the help they need sooner.

Phelan also supports full-day kindergarten and is anxious to see the results of a pilot program currently underway in the city.

When it comes to the issue of school safety, Phelan says that creating the director of security position, currently held by Ken McPhee, was a smart idea but draws a clear distinction between "secure" and "safe." Said Phelan:

"You can have security cameras, guards, and locks to make it secure, but safety has to do with smaller classes, teachers knowing the student population, teachers trained in diversity, mutual respect between teacher and student; those go much further in creating a safe environment. A student should feel secure enough to concentrate on learning and not worry about daily safety issues like teasing or bullying."

The Education Reform Act of 1993 and MCAS, Phelan said, are positives because they increase parental input and place focus back on the improvement of public schools. However, Phelan wants less fear about MCAS tests and more attention to special needs students who must take it. "I think it's up to the administrators and teachers to assure parents that students will be taught within the framework of MCAS," said Phelan. "But the anxiety surrounding the test is more of a problem than the test itself. And more must be done to accommodate children with special needs who are required to take that test."

Phelan is very pro-technology and points out that Quincy is one of the few communities in the state whose classrooms are 100 percent wired for the Internet. The problem, he says, is getting PCs into the classrooms. Phelan favors using existing relationships with the city's strong business community to achieve that goal and promotes the idea of an annual fundraiser so that keeping pace with technology won't be a continual drain on the school budget.

At this point, Phelan is not in favor of a second athletic director for Quincy Public Schools and says it is his understanding that the School Committee must vote for a new position to be created.

Phelan supports the building of a new high school.

The shortage of teachers, Phelan said, will become an even bigger issue in the coming years, especially in the subjects of math and science. Phelan wants to examine incentive programs to bring young, quality teachers to Quincy.

Phelan said he has planned a tour of each public school in the city and has visited several already.

Phelan, who received both his undergraduate degree and law degree from Suffolk University, attended Beechwood Knoll Elementary and Central Junior High School. He is a graduate of North Quincy High School.

"Feed The Hungry" Campaign Launched To Help Needy

"Feed the Hungry Campaign" to benefit the Pantry Shelf in Quincy was launched with a donation of $1,000 by each of the campaign chairs, Happy Wilkinson-Jacobs and Atty. Thomas F. Williams.

For more than 25 years the Pantry Shelf has provided nutritious and wholesome food as well as counseling to families and individuals in financial need in all the South Shore communities. Last year the Pantry Shelf served more than 5,000 people throughout the region, of whom 2,000 were children.

"I am excited about this campaign because it enables the community to come together in support of its most vulnerable residents. Our need for donations is urgent due to the demands of the holiday season." said Mary Ann Walsh, executive director of the Pantry Shelf.

"Feed the Hungry Campaign" will celebrate its success at a special performance of It's A Wonderful Life at The Company Theatre I Norwell on Thursday, Dec. 2. Anyone donating $100 or more will receive two tickets to this special performance, as well as a pre-show reception.

Allerton House Hosts Social Security Seminar

The first in a series of monthly educational seminars was recently held at Allerton House at Hancock Park on recent developments regarding Social Security and the role of long-term care insurance in financing senior care services.

Margo Jones, a representative from the Social Security Administration, discussed new policies regarding Social Security. Noreen Carey-Neville, CLU, ChFC, explained how long-term care insurance allows the consumer financial options when he or she must consider additional personal care services at home, in an assisted living facility, or in a skilled nursing facility.

Residents of Allerton House and Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center and their families attended this very informative session.

Allerton House at Hancock Park, a 42-unit assisted living resident, is owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

SENIOR LIVING

BENEFITS OF VITAMIN E

Recent research has proved to be so compelling that even the most cautious among health professionals are beginning to warm to the idea of taking vitamin E supplements. First, Tufts University researchers found that people aged 65 years and older who took 200 units of vitamin E daily significantly improved the strength of their immune systems. Then, a scientist at Columbia University found that taking 2,000 units of vitamin E daily helped those with moderately advanced cases of Alzheimer's disease delay progression of its effects by seven months. This latter piece of research has led the American Psychiatric Association to recommend vitamin E supplementation to Alzheimer's patients "to delay the progression of the disease."

During Alzheimer's month, we recognize the challenges faced by those dealing with this disease and offer our support. At Marina Place (617-770-3264), a senior living residence, we have a special program that caters to those with dementia and early-state Alzheimer's. Ask us for more information. Stop in and see us at Four Seaport Drive.

Please join us for our Thanksgiving Open House November 26, 27 and 28 from 11:00 am to 2:00 pm. Refreshments will be served and tours will be offered. Don't forget to ask about our one time residency offer. Please call 617-770-3264 for more information.

P.S. The latest Alzheimer's research raises the hope that there may someday be a vaccine for the disease.

Manet Health Center Marks 20th Anniversary

With a turnout of over 220 people, Manet Community celebrated its 20-year history of community service Oct. 21 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

In opening remarks Mayor James A. Sheets presented a proclamation recognizing the significant contribution Manet has made providing needed access to primary care with over 53,000 visits annually. Sheets also commented on Manet's crucial support for the transition of Quincy Medical Center.

President of the Board Gertrude Peter and Rosemary Wahlberg, recipient of the Community Service and Leadership Award, recalled the hard work of the community and local officials to establish the center with limited resources.

Two of Manet's original physicians, Fred Dolgin, MD, and Rolf Knight, MD, recognized the importance of the extended medical community by presenting the Clinician Award to Robert Pressberg, MD, for his special contribution and assistance in caring for patients with multiple complicated issues. Dr. Pressberg likened Manet Community Health Center to the original physicians of 5,000 years ago who took care of those in greatest need.

Jim Hooley, CEO of the Neighborhood Health Plan, was awarded the Health Service Development Award for his continued commitment to bring financial resources to community health centers. Hooley noted the high quality of care at community health centers and the leadership of Manet.

Judy Kolson provided remarks for an award given to Senator Kennedy for his "dedication to Health Care access." The federal resources supported by Senator Kennedy were instrumental to the start of Manet Community Health Center with its three Quincy sites and Hull Medical Center site. Also, Kennedy's leadership on health center legislation and benefits expansion directly impacts Manet and its patients.

Over 800 Vehicles At Hazardous Waste Collection

More than 800 vehicles carrying a wide variety of hazardous items were processed at the city's recent two-day Household Hazardous Waste Collection.

A record high number of 281 propane tanks were among the items dropped off by residents. Others included pesticides, insecticides, oil based paints and paint related materials, antifreeze, car batteries, nickel-cadmium batteries, aerosol cans, acids, solvents, gasoline and kerosene.

Materials were disposed of through a combination of wastewater treatment, incineration, fuel blending and recycling.

Car batteries, propane tanks and nickel-cadmium batteries are recycled.

A new system was initiated to expedite the collection with residents dropping off materials at the Public Works Department yard in order of the wards they live in.

The collection took place Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 6-7 with this collection schedule.

Saturday: Wards 1 and 2, from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m., Wards 3 and 4, noon to 2 p..

Sunday: Wards 5 and 6, from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m.

Under state regulations, a licensed professional in the management of hazardous materials must be contracted to conduct the collection. This year the contractor was Clean Harbors Environmental Services of Braintree. The DPW required the contractor to provide 15 employees to ensure the proper handling of the collected materials.

A total of 498 vehicles were processed on Saturday, averaging 40 cars per 15 minute period and 326 on Sunday, averaging 41 cars per 15 minute period.

The new by-ward system reduced waiting time for vehicles to a maximum 15 minutes and improved organizing and preparing materials for transportation and disposal from the DPW yard.

As residents entered the DPW Yard, volunteers checked identification to prove Quincy residency and gave residents an informational handout on recycling and disposal alternatives for non-recyclable items with contact names, addresses and telephone numbers.

Residents remained in their vehicles as material was inventoried and removed for processing.

Residents were informed of the event via advertising in the media as well as by a 24,600-piece mailing to each household that was designed, printed and mailed through the Quincy Data Processing Department.

"By having the capabilities and talent of the Data Processing Department available to assist in the public outreach process, a substantial savings is realized in the coordination of the Household Hazardous Waste Collection each year," said Public Works Commissioner, David Colton.

The Department of Traffic, Signs and Signals in conjunction with Quincy Police Department details coordinated traffic flow, and several DPW employees were on hand to assist in keeping the event and material management organized. Recycling Commission members along with Quincy residents donated valuable weekend time to assist with the event and support the City's efforts.

The Mayor's office and the DPW thanked all who assisted in making the event a success especially volunteers, Sally Owen and Joan Pierce of the Recycling Commission as well as Quincy Point residents, Brad and Leonie Howard.

DPW Program Manager, Rosemary Nolan, commended Quincy residents for their level of environmental awareness and responsibility. Attendance at Household Hazardous Waster Collection in Quincy surpasses other municipalities in the state.

"Quincy residents are to be applauded for their community spirit and the example being set for their children through active participation in quality of life issues within the City," Nolan said.

MORE THAN 800 vehicles with hazardous items were processed at the city's recent two-day Household Hazardous Waste Collection. A new by-ward system expedited the collection and reduced waiting time for residents. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

A Thank You To Quincy Churches

(A Copy of the following letter was submitted to the Quincy Sun for publication.)

An open letter to the Churches of Quincy:

Thank you!

It is important that the churches of Quincy receive special thanks for their faithful support of the Quincy Crisis Center. An extra measure of gratitude is due the people of the Covenant Congregational Church, the United First Parish (Church of the Presidents), and Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

Quincy Crisis Center has provided a feeding program for the homeless and near homeless of Quincy for over 18 years. Most of the 13,000+ meals that we have served each year have been provided by the churches of Quincy. For the last 8 years, Covenant Congregational Church has generously provided its fellowship hall and kitchen, free of charge, to be used as the feeding site. Members and friends of Covenant Congregational Church have also assisted among the volunteers serving those meals.

At the end of October, at the request of Covenant Church, the QCC feeding program vacated their building to allow the church the opportunity to use that space to expand their ministries into other areas. Covenant Congregational Church has been a generous and gracious host and has served Quincy well by providing this ministry for so many years. I want everyone to know how thankful Quincy Crisis Center is for the generous and gracious hospitality of Covenant Congregational Church.

Quincy Crisis Center has faced this transition as a challenge and an opportunity. We thank the churches of Quincy for standing with us again during this time. Thank you to those churches that continued to provide meals to us to serve from our van. Thank you to the parish of St. John the Baptist Catholic Church for allowing us to park our van behind the school for the last few weeks to continue feeding the homeless. And thank you to the many pastors and congregations who expressed their support through prayers, creative ideas and offers of help.

Special thanks must go to First United Parish who has offered the use of their fellowship area to house our feeding program through the winter. The Quincy Crisis Center hot meal program has resumed indoors, Monday through Friday at 1 p.m. due to their generous offer. Special thanks are also due the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene which is providing their kitchen for the preparation of the meals to be served at the Church of the Presidents. The details of these arrangements are still being worked out, but it is important that our gratitude be expressed now when we are all focused on Thanksgiving.

Thank you Quincy for your faithful and generous support of the ministries of Quincy's Crisis Center.

In Christ's service and yours,
Rev. David B. Wooster
Program Director, Quincy Crisis Center
Executive Coordinator, Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion

TUGGED IN AN UNWANTED DIRECTION

It stands to reason that a vehicle should track straight on a flat, straight road. When it pulls to one side, start investigating the simplest possible cause - incorrect tire pressure. If that checks out, look for uneven tread wear. If the wear is uniform, interchange the left front wheel-and-tire assembly with the one on the right. If the drifting problem disappears or reappears on the opposite side, a tire is the culprit. Otherwise, pulling to one side may be due to incorrect steering caster, which is an alignment angle that can be adjusted with a wheel alignment. The side with the wheel that has the most negative caster angle is the side to which the vehicle will pull.

Is your car tracking straight? Our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency, whether it is something as simple as an oil change, to more complex engine work. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: An incorrectly angled caster can cause a vehicle to drift to one side without causing abnormal tire wear.

REAL ESTATE

DANIEL J. FLYNN & Co. recently negotiated the sale of this former meat processing plant, located at 604-606 Washington St., Quincy Point, for $258,000. Scott Buffington, a commercial broker for the real estate firm, handled the negotiations. The building will become the new home of a Quincy-based retailer.

Flynn & Co. Sells Quincy Point Building For $258,000

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. commercial broker Scott Buffington recently negotiated the sale of a 4,000 square foot commercial building located on Washington St., Quincy.

The property, at 604-606 Washington St., Quincy Point, sold for $258,000. Formerly the site of a meat processing plant, the building will become the new home of a Quincy-based retailer.

The closing was one of several that Buffington has recently negotiated. Among his other completed transactions were five leased properties in Dorchester and Quincy. The leases included: 2,400 square feet of office and storage space on Granite St., Dorchester to Starving Students Inc., a California-based moving company; 1,000 square feet of office space on Foster St., Quincy to McKay Associates, a counseling service; 1,500 square feet of retail space on Gallivan Boulevard, Dorchester to Five Star Management, a transaction negotiated in conjunction with Flynn & Co. broker Jay Nuss; 400 square feet of office space on Clayton St., Dorchester to a sports marketing firm; and 3,400 square feet of office space on Clayton St., Dorchester to Bell Foundation.

Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski attributes Buffington's success to his aggressive property marketing strategies. "Scott has a proven skill for attracting a great deal of attention to a variety of types of properties, and ultimately, for negotiating and closing property transactions," Talkowski said.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. is a full service real estate firm specializing in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate and real estate auctions. For more information, call (617) 479-9000 or visit www.djflynn.com on the web.

What Losses Protected By Homeowners Insurance?

Q: What kinds of losses are protected by my homeowners insurance, and what is the best way to shop for a policy that offers the best value for me?

A: There are wide differences among the various homeowners insurance policies available, so it's important to compare companies and packages. Most insurers offer a comprehensive package with higher costs for more coverage and low deductibles and lower costs for less coverage and high deductibles. Many policies include coverage for your home, its contents and even credit card theft, personal liability and medical coverage if someone is injured on your property.

Most basic policies cover damage to structure and contents, damages from smoke, fire, thunderstorms, hail, vandalism, theft, broken glass, explosions, riots, damage by vehicles and aircraft, and even volcanoes. Broad-form coverage typically includes all this coverage plus other damages, such as ice and sleet, or problems resulting from malfunctioning appliances, plumbing and other systems. Read all policies carefully and ask what coverage is included and what is excluded, for example, floods, earthquakes, war and other occurrences.

It's worth reassessing your current policy periodically to make sure you are adequately protected against catastrophic losses with an up-to-date, thoroughly researched policy. Some experts recommend insuring your home for at least 80 percent of its replacement cost.

However, your home will increase in value while the loan amount decreases, so your potential liability can grow. To limit your risk, it's wise to consider 100 percent coverage. You can save a lot by raising your deductibles, and still be assured of good coverage.

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

QB Kelly, Other Starters 'Doubtful'

Noble: 'We Just Have To Go Out And Do Our Best'

By CHRIS POISSON

Dan Kelly, knee, doubtful. Sean Fitzpatrick, knee, doubtful. Brad DiMartino, concussion, doubtful. Eric Wass, concussion, doubtful. Russell Mullen, concussion, doubtful. Tim Pezzulo, ribs, questionable.

This is the injury report Quincy head coach Bob Noble listed off at practice last week. All are starters and an integral part of this team if it's to be successful in tomorrow's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day showdown against cross-town rival North Quincy.

"Who else am I missing," asked Noble, who will be in his 15th Thanksgiving holiday classic but first as head coach. "Actually, that's enough. They have not been cleared to play by doctors. The standard medical practice from what I understand is a week to 10 days. So it's marginal at best. Injuries are definitely a concern right now."

So Quincy (0-10, 0-6) limps into Veterans Memorial Stadium tomorrow morning with hopes of notching its first win of the 1999 campaign and snapping a 20-game losing skid. But the Presidents aren't using injuries as a scapegoat. It's part of the game. All teams go through it and even North Quincy is banged up a bit.

"We just have to go out and do the best we can in terms of what we have available," Noble said. "I know we're going to show up."

The first man on the injured list of concern is Kelly, the team's starting quarterback the past two seasons. Kelly is simply the best QB in the league, period. His recent selection to the Old Colony League all-star team by the coaches proves that.

The senior signal caller passed for over 1,200 yards and seven touchdowns and rushed for eight. Of the team's 129 points, he had a hand in 96 of them. Starting to get the idea of his value?

Kelly did not start Quincy's last game against Barnstable. Junior Mark Robertson, an honorable mention to the OCL all-star team as a defensive back, took over the reigns for his first varsity start.

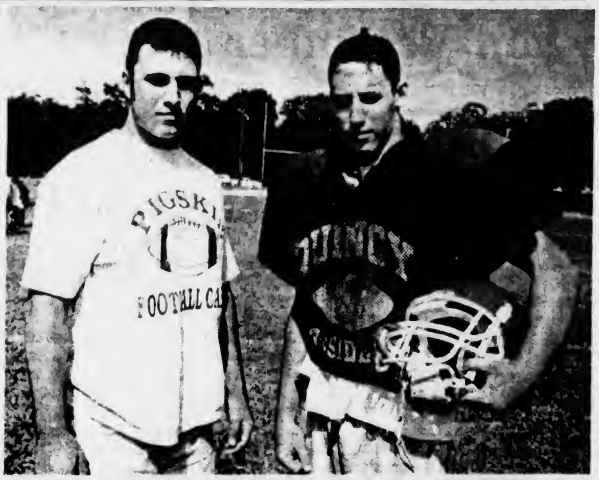
"If Kelly can't go, Mark Robertson will play quarterback," Noble said. "He actually did pretty well the other night. I feel confident with him. He's probably the quarterback of the future."

Well, the future is tomorrow for Robertson. He has the opportunity to rescue what has been a lost season up until this point. With Robertson taking the snaps Noble said he will not change is offensive game plan. He'd be the first to tell you that he favors pass over run. It's his philosophy.

"I'm very confident in Mark's abilities as far as throwing the ball is concerned," Noble said. "All of our quarterbacks are schooled up as to what to do with the ball. So I don't have any problem continuing with what we've done all year. This time of year you're not going to change anything."

The passing game is Quincy's ace in the hole. And Robertson has a talented crop of receivers to throw to. Seniors Andy Tam, Nick DiStasi, Jeff Peterson and junior Gregg Walsh make it a royal flush.

As for the ground game, if senior tailback Mullen can't go, senior captain Pezzulo is next in line. But if the torn cartilage in his ribs keeps him on the sidelines, junior Justin Curran will be lining up in the backfield.



Quincy's rushing attack hasn't been that strong this year, but Mullen did emerge as the most consistent runner. Curran hasn't seen much time, so it would be asking a lot for him to shoulder the running game.

The Presidents had a decent offensive punch this season. They were able to move the ball, but it was the

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

Adams 'Probable' At Quarterback, Thompson Back-up, Repoff Out

Chrisom: 'We're Going To Mix It Up'

By CHRIS POISSON

North Quincy captured the first Thanksgiving Day crown and tomorrow it will try to win the last one of the millennium to position itself as the team to beat in 2000.

The Red Raiders (2-7-1, 2-4) are looking to win back-to-back holiday games and they smell blood. They know the Presidents are walking wounded into Veterans Memorial Stadium for tomorrow's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day game. They know Quincy might be short six starters, including its prized possession, quarterback Dan Kelly.

But they're playing it as if the Old Colony League all-star QB will be behind the center taking the snaps. After all, their season has caused some headaches and a win in one of the city's biggest sporting event would be like popping a couple aspirins: relief.

"I'm planning Kelly is going to be there," said head coach Peter Chrisom who will be in his 14th Thanksgiving game but first as head coach. "Both quarterbacks [Kelly and backup Mark Robertson] are very good. Both control the ball very well.

"We're going to put our best people out there and have them do what they've done all year. We're not going to make any drastic changes. We'll go with what we have. They know it's going to be a tight game. They know the whole season comes down to this one game. It will be decided on the field."

N. Quincy Scoring	TD	2PT	PAT	FG	PTS

North Quincy's quarterback situation is a bit wobbly, but not like its counterpart's. Junior Max Repoff who took over the starting duties in the middle of the season is listed as doubtful with an ankle injury, and in all likelihood will not play.

Senior Sean Adams, who won the starting job in training camp, also has an ankle injury but is listed as probable and should play. If he can't go, or if he re-injures himself during the game, the ball will be placed in the young hands of sophomore Dennis Thompson.

"Hopefully Adams will be ready," Chrisom said. "He has a clearance to be back."

Thompson started North Quincy's last game against Hingham and Chrisom turned to his backfield combo to take the heat of his rookie QB. Although it lost 10-7, the ground game responded with seniors Steve Minukas, an OCL all-star, and Brian Deptula rushing for a combined 212 yards.

"That was his first time," Chrisom said. "We felt we had to run the ball. He got a game under his belt so he knows what it's going to be like. We're going to have to work with him and get him ready just in case."

Thompson should be ready if he goes. He had the week before Hingham to work on his game and he's had 10 days to prepare for tomorrow's battle. No matter who goes, Chrisom will stick to his regular game plan.

"We're not going to change anything," Chrisom

Quincy's Kelly, North's Minukas Old Colony League All-Stars

Dan Kelly of Quincy High School and Steve Minukas of North Quincy were recently selected to the Old Colony League football all-star team.

Mark Robertson of Quincy was named an honorable mention as a defensive back. The junior is also the backup quarterback and kickoff returner.

Kelly, a senior quarterback, has 1,217 passing yards and seven touchdown passes. He also has rushed for eight TDs. The coaches chose him even though his numbers aren't up there with the other top quarterbacks of the league.

Minukas, senior tailback, has rushed for three touchdowns and several 100-yard games. He's been the stabilizer in the backfield for the Red Raiders.

He rushed for 162 yards on 27 carries with a touchdown in North Quincy's last game against Hingham.

Kelly is listed as doubtful for tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day game.

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

QB Kelly, Other Starters 'Doubtful'

Noble: 'We Just Have To Go Out And Do Our Best'

By CHRIS POISSON

Dan Kelly, knee, doubtful. Sean Fitzpatrick, knee, doubtful. Brad DiMartino, concussion, doubtful. Eric Wass, concussion, doubtful. Russell Mullen, concussion, doubtful. Tim Pezzulo, ribs, questionable.

This is the injury report Quincy head coach Bob Noble listed off at practice last week. All are starters and an integral part of this team if it's to be successful in tomorrow's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day showdown against cross-town rival North Quincy.

"Who else am I missing," asked Noble, who will be in his 15th Thanksgiving holiday classic but first as head coach. "Actually, that's enough. They have not been cleared to play by doctors. The standard medical practice from what I understand is a week to 10 days. So it's marginal at best. Injuries are definitely a concern right now."

So Quincy (0-10, 0-6) limps into Veterans Memorial Stadium tomorrow morning with hopes of notching its first win of the 1999 campaign and snapping a 20-game losing skid. But the Presidents aren't using injuries as a scapegoat. It's part of the game. All teams go through it and even North Quincy is banged up a bit.

"We just have to go out and do the best we can in terms of what we have available," Noble said. "I know we're going to show up."

The first man on the injured list of concern is Kelly, the team's starting quarterback the past two seasons. Kelly is simply the best QB in the league, period. His recent selection to the Old Colony League all-star team by the coaches proves that.

The senior signal caller passed for over 1,200 yards and seven touchdowns and rushed for eight. Of the team's 129 points, he had a hand in 96 of them. Starting to get the idea of his value?

Kelly did not start Quincy's last game against Barnstable. Junior Mark Robertson, an honorable mention to the OCL all-star team as a defensive back, took over the reigns for his first varsity start.

"If Kelly can't go, Mark Robertson will play quarterback," Noble said. "He actually did pretty well the other night. I feel confident with him. He's probably the quarterback of the future."

Well, the future is tomorrow for Robertson. He has the opportunity to rescue what has been a lost season up until this point. With Robertson taking the snaps Noble said he will not change is offensive game plan. He'd be the first to tell you that he favors pass over run. It's his philosophy.

"I'm very confident in Mark's abilities as far as throwing the ball is concerned," Noble said. "All of our quarterbacks are schooled up as to what to do with the ball. So I don't have any problem continuing with what we've done all year. This time of year you're not going to change anything."

The passing game is Quincy's ace in the hole. And Robertson has a talented crop of receivers to throw to. Seniors Andy Tam, Nick DiStasi, Jeff Peterson and junior Gregg Walsh make it a royal flush.

As for the ground game, if senior tailback Mullen can't go, senior captain Pezzulo is next in line. But if the torn cartilage in his ribs keeps him on the sidelines, junior Justin Curran will be lining up in the backfield.

Quincy's rushing attack hasn't been that strong this year, but Mullen did emerge as the most consistent runner. Curran hasn't seen much time, so it would be asking a lot for him to shoulder the running game.

The Presidents had a decent offensive punch this season. They were able to move the ball, but it was the

Quincy Presidents vs. North Quincy Red Raiders

Adams 'Probable' At Quarterback, Thompson Back-up, Repoff Out

Chrisom: 'We're Going To Mix It Up'

By CHRIS POISSON

North Quincy captured the first Thanksgiving Day crown and tomorrow it will try to win the last one of the millennium to position itself as the team to beat in 2000.

The Red Raiders (2-7-1, 2-4) are looking to win back-to-back holiday games and they smell blood. They know the Presidents are walking wounded into Veterans Memorial Stadium for tomorrow's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day game. They know Quincy might be short six starters, including its prized possession, quarterback Dan Kelly.

But they're playing it as if the Old Colony League all-star QB will be behind the center taking the snaps. After all, their season has caused some headaches and a win in one of the city's biggest sporting event would be like popping a couple aspirins: relief.

"I'm planning Kelly is going to be there," said head coach Peter Chrisom who will be in his 14th Thanksgiving game but first as head coach. "Both quarterbacks [Kelly and backup Mark Robertson] are very good. Both control the ball very well.

"We're going to put our best people out there and have them do what they've done all year. We're not going to make any drastic changes. We'll go with what we have. They know it's going to be a tight game. They know the whole season comes down to this one game. It will be decided on the field."

North Quincy's quarterback situation is a bit wobbly, but not like its counterpart's. Junior Max Repoff who took over the starting duties in the middle of the season is listed as doubtful with an ankle injury, and in all likelihood will not play.

Senior Sean Adams, who won the starting job in training camp, also has an ankle injury but is listed as probable and should play. If he can't go, or if he re-injures himself during the game, the ball will be placed in the young hands of sophomore Dennis Thompson.

"Hopefully Adams will be ready," Chrisom said. "He has a clearance to be back."

Thompson started North Quincy's last game against Hingham and Chrisom turned to his backfield combo to take the heat of his rookie QB. Although it lost 10-7, the ground game responded with seniors Steve Minukas, an OCL all-star, and Brian Deptula rushing for a combined 212 yards.

"That was his first time," Chrisom said. "We felt we had to run the ball. He got a game under his belt so he knows what it's going to be like. We're going to have to work with him and get him ready just in case."

Thompson should be ready if he goes. He had the week before Hingham to work on his game and he's had 10 days to prepare for tomorrow's battle. No matter who goes, Chrisom will stick to his regular game plan.

"We're not going to change anything," Chrisom

Quincy's Kelly, North's Minukas Old Colony League All-Stars

Dan Kelly of Quincy High School and Steve Minukas of North Quincy were recently selected to the Old Colony League football all-star team.

Mark Robertson of Quincy was named an honorable mention as a defensive back. The junior is also the backup quarterback and kickoff returner.

Kelly, a senior quarterback, has 1,217 passing yards and seven touchdown passes. He also has rushed for eight TDs. The coaches chose him even though his numbers aren't up there with the other top quarterbacks of the league.

Minukas, senior tailback, has rushed for three touchdowns and several 100-yard games. He's been the stabilizer in the backfield for the Red Raiders.

He rushed for 162 yards on 27 carries with a touchdown in North Quincy's last game against Hingham.

Kelly is listed as doubtful for tomorrow's Thanksgiving Day game.

Game, Set, TITLE!
North Quincy Volleyball State Champions Again

The North Quincy volleyball team is finally back on top after coming so close in recent years.

North Quincy (26-2) captured its fourth state title, its first in seven years, with a 3-1 triumph over Dracut in the Division 1 state championship at Eastern Nazarene College Saturday night.

The Red Raiders torched Dracut with a 15-2 win in the first game but fell, 15-10, in the second game. They recovered in the third with a 15-3 win and proved to be too much in the fourth game, taking home a 15-8 victory for the title.

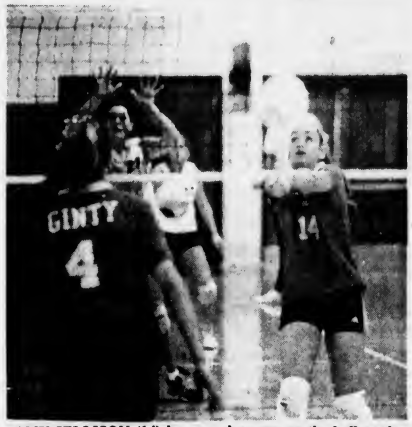
In the first game, senior Jessica Lorman, coming off a back injury, had five service points and senior Jessica Barbeau and co-captain and all-star Katie Jellison came up big down the stretch.

In game two North Quincy let a 4-0 lead slip away, but in game three they turned in a strong defensive effort led by Lorman and senior Tia Harris

North Quincy's depth showed in the fourth and deciding game with everyone seemingly making plays.

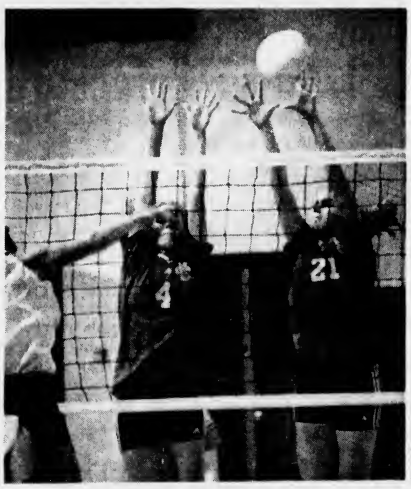
Last Thursday North Quincy had to get past league rival Barnstable, which knocked the Red Raiders out of the tournament the past three years, winning the state title each of those years. Last year Barnstable beat them in the state final.

But this time around, North Quincy came out on top with a 3-1 win (15-10, 7-15, 15-12, 15-12) in the semifinals.



For the seniors - Jellison, Harris, Barbeau, Lorman, co-captain Caitlin Powers, Meghan Ginty and Lisa Della Croce - they finally had Barnstable's number this year, sweeping Barnstable in the regular season, 2-0 and 2-1.

Barnstable held the lead in all of the games but North Quincy fought back. Trailing 7-1 in game one, Harris led the comeback with nine kills.



After losing game two, the teams played a tight game three before Barbeau stroked the game-clinching ace.

The Red Raiders only losses this year were against New Bedford and Medway, which won its eighth Division 2 state title Saturday against Lynnfield.

North Quincy beat Burncoat of Worcester, Milford, Newton North and top seed Framingham in its ride to the championship.

AMY JELLISON (14) keeps a close eye on the ball as she sets up teammate Meghan Ginty (4) in front of the net.

Senior Day Special For Quincy's Butch Palaza

BC Eagle Credits Quincy High With Preparing Him For Division 1-A Football

By CHRIS POISSON

For the 12 Boston College seniors, the recent 34-17 triumph over Big East foe West Virginia guaranteed them something they've never tasted in their careers at Chestnut Hill.

The Eagles will be soaring into either Nashville for the Music City Bowl Dec. 29 or Tucson for the Insight.com Bowl Dec. 31 - their first bowl game since the 1994 Aloha Bowl.

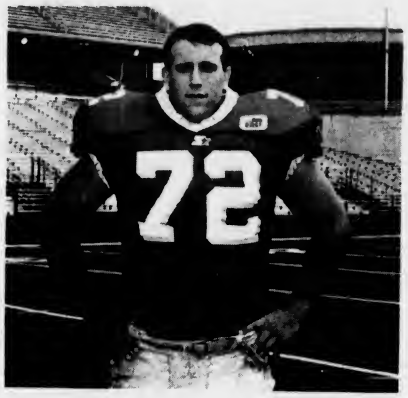
If BC can upset No. 2 Virginia Tech this week, and with Saturday's win over Notre Dame, it might have a shot at the Gator Bowl.

The seniors picked the best time to clinch a bowl bid: Senior Day. And they couldn't have thrown a better sendoff party in their final game at Alumni Stadium.

One senior, however, almost missed the post-game celebration. Fifth-year senior and starting center Butch Palaza, a Quincy native, left the field with 6:55 remaining in the game after tearing cartilage in his left rib cage. His return was questionable.

"We were running an inside play and somehow [junior offensive lineman] Paul Zukaukas and a defensive lineman landed on top of me," Palaza says.

He didn't return to the game but convinced the trainers to let him back on the turf when it ended.



"They wanted me to go straight to the hospital," Palaza says. They wanted to take precaution and I understand that. But I told them, 'Look, this is my last game at home and it would mean a lot to me to be out there with the other guys who've been through it all.' I thank them for that. They were considerate."

As Palaza strolled across the 50-yard line shaking hands with teammates, most of the seniors were "Lambeau Leaping" into a sea of yellow shirts, the BC superfans behind the south end zone.

"I don't even know if I could've even got up that high," jokes the 6-4, 300-pounder.

Palaza is a former Quincy High School track and field star, but his forte was the shotput, not the high jump. Yeah, he was also a football standout and, unfortunately, he won't be able to attend tomorrow's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day game because he'll be at Virginia Tech for the final game of the regular season.

Palaza won only one Thanksgiving Day game at Quincy and it came during his senior year (1994) when he recorded 65 solo tackles, 50 assists, 11 sacks and four pass breakups to make the Old Colony League all-star team.

BUTCH PALAZA

That was the first of four straight Thanksgiving Day victories for the Presidents after they had dropped the previous three by a score of 41-7.

"This tradition is almost 70 years deep," Palaza says. "It's old. It's a rich tradition. When you go to the games you see the same folks coming back year after year."

Although he won't be at Veterans Memorial Stadium this year, Palaza has managed to check out his old team occasionally and knows the program is struggling right now. But he believes the coaching staff can turn things around quickly.

"If the kids follow the coaching staff and put in the time to be successful, I don't see why they can't turn things around and take home a league championship in a few years," Palaza says.

It's former head coach Jack Raymer and the coaching staff that Palaza credits for preparing him for the grind of Division I football, particularly Bob Noble who is currently the head coach but was an assistant coach at the time.

"Butch is a tremendous example of hard work," Noble says. "He realized relatively early that he was blessed in terms of size and athletic ability. Butch took every advantage of the weight training program that we ran. He enhanced his God-given abilities the best he could."

"Coach Bob Noble went running with me three hours a week over the summers at 7:30 in the morning," Palaza says. "He ran our strength program and I give him a lot of credit him.

"But it wasn't like they forced it upon me. They showed me the door and I had to walk through it."

Once he walked through the door he must have thought he stepped into another galaxy. After redshirting his freshman year, things started to spiral downward.

It wasn't too long ago when this senior class, four of which are fifth-year guys, watched their program sink to the depths of Division I football.

In the fall of 1996, a gambling scandal involving several players hit campus and the story broke across the country. The program had been tarnished, leaving many players questioning if they had chose the right college.

"I'd be lying to you if I said the thought of transferring didn't cross my mind," Palaza says. "But I'm glad I stuck it out. I came here for an education and top football."

Palaza not only had to play while the school rebounded from the scandal, he also had to overcome a neck injury in '96, make the transition from guard to center in '97, and last year he had to play behind Damien Woody, a first-round draft pick by the New England Patriots.

"It's been a tremendous experience for him," Noble says. "I know he had some tough times early, but he got some great advice from Jack Raymer and all of us. And Butch took that to heart. It's one of those stories that has a real happy ending."

So you can understand how emotional Saturday's victory was, and wouldn't have been surprised if he ignored his injury and followed his peers into the crowd.

"It was probably the most emotional game I've ever been involved in," Palaza says. "It was the last time at home for us and we've been through a lot. My folks were there. It couldn't have ended on a better note.

"I told my friends that going to BC, with what we've been through and then being able to lead this turnaround, I wouldn't trade it in for the world. I'd do it all over again."

Conference Budget Includes $250,000 For Tide Gates

State Sen. Michael W. Morrissey and State Rep. A. Stephen Tobin announces the Fiscal Year 2000 Conference Committee Budget includes $250.000 for the repair of the tide gates located on Quincy Shore Drive.

The funding was placed in jeopardy by Gov. Cellucci when he vetoed approximately half the money allocated in the line item resulting in insufficient money to fund all the projects earmarked. The House and Senate voted overwhelmingly to override the Governor's veto, thereby fully funding these projects on the last day of the first half of the 1999-2000 leglislative session.

"We are pleased that the House-Senate Conference Committee saw the value and importance of repairing the tide gates as part of the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project," Morrissey said. "This funding is a good start for the largest drainage project ever undertaken by the Massachusetts Highway Department."

"The Governor's veto of funding for this project in this past summer's Capital Supplemental Budget was a severe set back on moving this project forward," Tobin added.

The Metropolitan District Commission owns the tide gates and the tide gates have been inoperable for several years.

"The tide gates are essential to ensuring that the high tide does not contribute to flooding upstream during heavy rainstorms," Ayers said.

"It is a crucial part of the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project which directs the flow of water coming from upstream," Tobin said.

The nature of the project requires all repairs, construction and restoration to start downstream at the base of Furnace Brook and work upstream to Cunningham Brook in Milton.

While this is certainly good news, there is still more work to be done. The Transportation Bond Bill recently approved by the House and currently before the Senate Committee on Ways and Means includes an earmarking of $350,000 for costs associated with the Cunningham Brook-Furnace Brook Drainage Project.

In addition to this earmarking, the legislative delegation is working to ensure that there are sufficient overall funds in the Transportation Bond Bill to pay for the project.

"This is a very complicated project which needs much more work, but securing this funding is a very important start on moving this project forward," Morrissey said.

The Quincy legislative delegation will continue to work closely with the Milton legislative delegation, city officials and residents on this important project. The city is working with the Metropolitan District Commission on an agreement to allow the City to operate and maintain the tide gates.

Knights Of Columbus Honor Former Chaplain

The North Quincy Knights of Columbus Council honored the late Rev. Gerard V. Dever, their former chaplain, at recent ceremonies.

The ceremonies took place at their council hall at 5 Hollis Avenue.

Rev. Dever was the Knights of Columbus chaplain while serving at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston, where he began in June of 1993.

Rev. Dever died in December of 1997.

The night began with a memorial Mass for all deceased members and was celebrated by the council's new chaplain, Rev. James Robertson of Sacred Heart Church.

Following the Mass, members dedicated a picture and a plaque to Rev. Dever.

Grand Knight Joe Lyons said Rev. Dever was "well loved" by the Knights and shared a passion for golf with some of its members. Lyons also said several of Dever's family attended the dedication.

Rev. Thomas Keane, who was Rev. Dever's pastor at St. Ann's, also attended the dedication. He remembered a "very enthusiastic man, full of good humor, who brought everyone he knew closer to God."

Rev. Keane said that Rev. Dever had also spent 10 years as a priest at St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester.

Knights of Columbus members Bob Trahan, Gerard Weidmann, and Patrick O'Brien comprised the committee to honor Rev. Dever.

Basic Advice For Avoiding Traumatic Brain Injuries

Every year, 400,000 Americans are hospitalized as a result of a traumatic brain injury (TBI); 90,000 of these individuals suffer injuries that result in life-long disability.

The physicians of the Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital Network see the effects of TBI in their patients every day. They know that the only real cure for TBI is prevention.

Her is some basic advice to help avoid these terrible injuries:

•Motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of TBI. To help avoid injury in the event of a mishap, always buckle your seat belt and never allow your child to ride without a seat belt, even in the back seat. Never place an infant who rides in a rear-facing safety seat in front of a car.

•Obey the speed limits. Higher speeds result in more severe crashes and in more disabling injuries.

•Never drink and drive. Driving while intoxicated is a principal cause of TBI.

•Make sure you and your children wear helmets when riding bikes. According to the Brain Injury Association, studies have shown that wearing a helmet can reduce brain injuries by 88 percent. Buy a helmet that meets the criteria of the American National Standards Institute or the Snell Memorial Foundation. (In Massachusetts it is illegal for children 12 years old and under to ride a bike without wearing a helmet.)

•Be sure your young athletes wear helmets when participating in contact sports, such as football. Wearing a helmet can protect an athlete from suffering a concussion - one of the most common types of brain injury. An estimated 300,000 concussions are sustained annually in contact sports and recent studies have shown that concussions can have far-reaching consequences.

•Falls from windows and at playgrounds are among the leading causes of brain injury in children. Teach your children about windows and safety. Never leave children alone in a room with an open window. And, be sure that all windows in your home have screens and that the screens are securely fastened.

•Urge school, playground, and park officials to provide protective surfacing in play areas that is soft enough to cushion falls. These protective surfaces should contain a minimum of 12 inches of wood chips, mulch, sand, or pea gravel.

•Drowning and near drowning are also leading causes of brain injury in children. A child can drown in only a few inches of water. Never leave a child unattended when near water - this includes not leaving a child alone near a bucket containing water or other liquids. Supervise young children in the bathtub at all times.

•Some special reminders to parents and children this Halloween. Falls are the leading cause of head injuries on Halloween. Wearing costumes that are too long, walking in the dark, and being in unfamiliar neighborhoods raise a child's risk of injury.

•On Halloween, children are at greater risk than usual for being hit by motorists. Parents should teach their children to stop at all corners and to look both ways before crossing the street. Children should trick-or-treat in their own neighborhoods and travel from house to house along an agreed-upon route. Children should wear brightly-colored costumes that reflect light so that motorists can see them at a distance.

Facts About Diabetes And Your Feet

An estimated 16 million people have diabetes and yet about half of them do not yet know it, putting themselves at serious medical risk.

Each year, more than 67,000 persons with diabetes lose a foot or leg due to complications from the disease. As many as one-half of these costly, lower limb losses could be prevented with proper foot care by a podiatrist.

If you are at risk for developing diabetes, or have diabetes already, it is essential that you see a podiatrist regularly. Many amputations are the result of poor blood flow and nerve damage, serious problems with persons with diabetes.

Because nerve damage often leads to lost sensation in the feet, people with diabetes often feel no pain when they injure a foot or toe. As a result, minor injuries can become infected and without proper treatment, can lead to amputation.

In observance of American Diabetes Month in November, the Massachusetts Podiatric Medical Society offers some important tips for persons with diabetes to keep feet healthy:

• Check and Wash Your Feet Every Day - Check your feet for cuts, blisters and swelling, and wash your feet in warm, but not hot water every day. Dry your feet well, be sure to dry between the toes.

• Keep the Skin Soft and Smooth - Check with a podiatrist to see if lotions may be appropriate.

• For Care of Corns and Calluses and Nail Trimming - It is recommended that you see a podiatrist regularly to avoid risk of infection.

• Wear Shoes and Socks at all Times - Never walk barefoot. Wear comfortable shoes that fit well and protect your feet. Feel inside your shoes before putting them on each time to make sure the lining is smooth and there are no objects insides.

• Protect Your Feet from Hot and Cold - Wear shoes at the beach or on hot pavement. Wear socks at night if your feet get cold.

• Keep the Blood Flowing to Your Feet - Put your feet up when sitting. Wiggle your toes and move your angles up and down for 5 minutes, 2 or d3 times a day. Don't cross your legs for long periods of time. Don't smoke.

• Be More Active - Plan your physical activity program with your primary care physician and podiatrist.

• See your Podiatrist - Have your podiatrist check your bare feet and determine if you are at risk for serious foot problems. Call your podiatrist right away if a cut, sore, blister or bruise on your foot does not begin to heal after one day. Follow your podiatrists' advice about foot care.

For more information about proper foot care for persons with diabetes, contact the Massachusetts Podiatric Medical Society at (978) 689-4701.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Is there help for background noise?

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

The greatest hurdle for the hearing impaired, is understanding speech in the presence of noise. In a normal working ear, the brain can process complex sounds easier than in a hearing impaired ear. Traditional hearing aids (analog) amplify all sounds equally, even the ones that you don't want, making it difficult to carry on a conversation in the presence of noise.

Today's state-of- the-art in hearing aids is digital. A digital hearing aid can make 40 million calculations in one second! These are programmed for your hearing loss and designed to work more like normal hearing in the presence of noise. The volume adjusts automatically to adapt to noisy as well as quiet situations. Annoying feedback or "whistling" is also controlled by the digital circuitry. As impressive as these products have shown to be in the past 2-3 years, there is nothing better than normal natural hearing.

Take care of what you have and protect your hearing from loud noises. Call or write for brochures on digital products. Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

SUPPORTIVE SHOES & INSERTS

Poor foot mechanics - the way your foot moves as you walk - can lead to pain and problems in the knees, hips, and back. Supportive shoes, shoe inserts, and custom-made orthotics may help suppress unnecessary foot movement. Shoes with good arches and low heels support the foot well. For more support, wear shoes that firmly hold the heel so it does not slip and slide when you walk. Most drugstores and shoe stores sell arch supports and heel cups, which you insert in the shoe to control some problems. Orthotics are made from casts of your feet and allow only a prescribed amount of foot movement. They may also serve as shock absorbers when the foot strikes the ground.

Just like individualized foot care, custom orthoses are designed to meet the specific needs of each and every patient who comes to us for treatment. They also are the most non-invasive, professional way to begin treating problems with foot mechanics. Tired of painful steps taking the smile out of our day? It's time, then, for specialized podiatric care. We welcome your call at 617-472-3466. Office hours are by appointment at 110 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

Dr. Hacker and his staff wish you and your family a very Happy Thanksgiving Day. We hope you have a wonderful holiday season.

P.S. Orthotics may also help compensate for a hip or knee problem that affects foot movement.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

It has been a long time since many Americans went into the woods and shot their Thanksgiving dinner. Also, it has been a long time since many housewives went to the market and brought home a turkey that was not already pre-plucked and pre-cleaned.

It is hard for us to imagine how it must have been on that first Thanksgiving in 1621, when a tiny band of only 55 Pilgrims who had survived that first harsh winter in the New World paused in their labors to give thanks for their first harvest.

Yet, despite the remoteness of that original Thanksgiving in terms of year, it is not so far away in spirit if we but reflect on the manifold blessings we have to be thankful for in this great nation.

Thanksgiving is a special day. Between the feasting and the football watching, let us all take a few minutes to think about why it is so special. . .

25,000 Christmas Lights Displayed By Park Dept.

The Quincy Park Department has finished assembling and displaying more than 25,000 lights for the Christmas season, including the highlight of the holiday season displays, Quincy Center, which will feature more than 15,000 lights.

Along with the Christmas lighting, the Park Department will also display the giant Santa Claus and Frosty the Snowman at City Hall Plaza. The Nativity Scene will be on display at the Hancock Cemetery. A new addition to this year's holiday displays will be a twenty-foot tall toy soldier character, inspired by "The Nutcracker."

All assembly and hanging of the Christmas lights has been accomplished by Park and Forestry Department personnel. The City of Quincy Traffic and Parking Department and Massachusetts Electric have offered valuable assistance to the Christmas displays as well.

"I am proud of the work done by the employees of the Park and Forestry Departments. They have taken a distinct pride in making our Christmas lighting displays the finest around. Our Christmas lights, decorative banners, and other holiday displays create an atmosphere of holiday cheer and good will throughout our city," said Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

The Park Department has also placed a "Santa's Mail Box" in front of City Hall so children of all ages can make their Christmas wishes known.

The Christmas lights at City Hall Plaza will be featured during the Christmas Committee's "Turning on the Lights Ceremony" Friday, Nov. 26 at 6:30 p.m. The lights will remain up until after the New Year.

Delahunt, Mariano Join Union Protests At Victory

Congressman William Delahunt and Rep. Ronald Mariano joined over 100 union protesters Sunday in front of non-union Victory Supermarket on Hancock St.

The two were lending their support to the United Food and Commercial Workers protests concerning Victory, which opened at the former Shaw's Supermarket Oct. 22.

Victory Supermarkets, a family-owned supermarket chain based in Leominster, bought the site from Shaws after federal regulators ordered Shaws to sell off some of its locations after acquiring the Star Market chain.

Shaws is a union supermarket and, although Victory President Arthur P. "Jay" DiGeronimo said that 29 of the 33 former Shaws employees were hired by Victory, the union's ultimate goal is to unionize the Victory workers.

DiGeronimo maintains that Victory is being unfairly targeted and that Star Market, now owned by Shaws, is also non-union.

had been informed by residents that voting machines were moved and replaced at one of the polling places. He said he was informed of problems in four precincts (1, 3, 4, and 5) such as jamming.

He did not seek a recount in Precinct 2, his home precinct which he carried 418 to 273.

Shea said there were no machines moved and that he knew of only one other machine jamming that was corrected in 15 minutes. It involved 12 votes, he said, which were counted.

"The election went smoothly," Shea said.

Quincy Medical Center Receives Check For $12.1 Million Loan

William O'Leary, State Secretary of Health and Human Services, presented Monday a blow-up check of the state's $12.1 million no-interest loan for the now Quincy Medical Center in the hospital's main lobby.

He then joined city and state officials, including Mayor James A Sheets, state Sen. Thomas Birmingham, Rep. Paul Haley, and Rep. Ronald Mariano on a tour of the facility led by Quincy Medical Center CEO Jeffrey Doran along with Paul Drew, vice president of QMC's new affiliate, Boston Medical Center.

Specifically, Doran showed his guests the transition care unit, one of the largest on the South Shore, and the newly renovated surgical sub-specialty units, part of Quincy's Medical's plans to increase surgeries at the hospital in the coming years.

Doran said that QMC will perform hand, plastic, and vascular surgeries as it begins expanding its surgical services. It will also consider orthopedic surgery in the near future.

The new services, Doran said, will begin Dec. 6 and be led by Chief of Surgery Dr. Timothy Babineau and Chief of Medicine Dr. Jack Ansell, two of the more than 20 Boston Medical doctors who've joined the QMC staff full or part-time.

The goals, Doran said, were to provide convenience for patients on the South Shore who would normally have to travel to Boston and to increase the amount of surgeries and related tests provided at Quincy Medical Center. "It's important that people

Harold Unimpressed, Calls Plan Vague

Shipyard Seeks $145-M Refinancing

By CRAIG SALTERS

Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) announced Tuesday that it has been seeking a $145 million commercial refinancing of the Fore River Shipyard.

But the news, which comes on the eve of MHI's scheduled installment payment of $5.1 million to Fleet National Bank Dec. 1, doesn't contain enough facts to suit Councillor Paul Harold.

Harold said he will continue his plans to revoke the shipyard's tax breaks for what he says are broken promises.

Harold called the refinancing plan vague and wanted a more complete update from MHI. Said Harold:

"Right now it's my understanding that it's a plan for financing, not (the actual) financing. This plan is a mystery, like everything else at the shipyard, with unnamed banks and so on. They have to pay for double loan payments (Dec. 1) and they knew that deadline was on the horizon, that they would need to make some public pronouncement."

The roughly $145 million in refinancing, MHI said, would allow the company to make good on its loans and resume stalled renovations to the nearly completed shipyard, hopefully building ships by next summer.

James Dunkel, MHI's chief financial officer, said in a statement that MHI had been in discussions for several months with two undisclosed New York investment banking firms. "A considerable amount of work has been done by those firms in reviewing MHI's business plan and the program to finish the initial renovation work to put the Shipyard back in business," said Dunkel.

According to Dunkel, some specific details, such as the names of the investment banking firms, were not released because of the confidential nature of the negotiations, but he said that MHI would have more information "within the next few weeks."

The commercial refinancing, Dunkel said, would allow MHI to pay off a $55 million loan from Fleet Bank which is guaranteed by the U.S. government and also its $6 million loan from the Massachusetts Development Finance Agency.

Dunkel said that that the city of Quincy loan and the

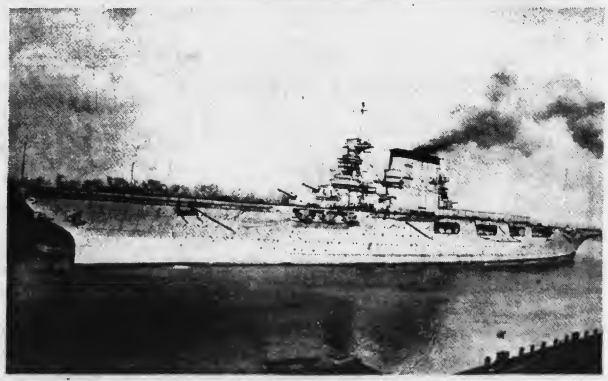
The Other Attack On Pearl Harbor

(Next Tuesday, Dec. 7, marks the 58th anniversary of the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, a date President Franklin D. Roosevelt predicted "will live in infamy."

It has.

But do you know about the other attack on Pearl Harbor - the first one?

Rev. John C. Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston and a former Navy chaplain tells of that first one in the following article written for The Sun.)



The First Pearl Harbor
By Rev. JOHN C. SWANSON

The admiral stood on the bridge wing of the big carrier. Through his binoculars he caught the faint form of an escorting destroyer struggling through the big North Pacific swells. He looked at his watch, 04:18 Time. With a deep breath he paused then turned to his aide and said "Execute."

The attack on Pearl Harbor was on!

The big carrier turned into the wind along with her sister ship, another large carrier. Escorting destroyers rushed to take up stations. On the flight deck the engines of the Martin bombers exploded into life. The noise of their Pratt and Whitney engines was deafening. Down the flight deck they roared and flew off into the

THE USS LEXINGTON built in the 1920's at the Fore River shipyard, played a role in "the other attack" on Pearl Harbor. This Lexington was sunk in 1942 in the Battle of Coral Sea in the Pacific. But another Lexington came out of the Quincy shipyard to take her place and helped avenge that sinking, playing a major role in the defeat of Japan in World War II.

One Firefighter Injured

Quincy Square Fire Guts College Bookstore Causes $200,000 Damage,

Fire officials blamed an overloaded surge protector for a $200,000 fire that gutted the College Book Store and caused smoke damage to three other businesses and offices at 1359 Hancock St., Quincy Center, early Friday morning.

Firefighter Richard Sullivan fell approximately 10 feet from a ladder while battling the blaze and landed on his head on the pavement.

He suffered a bone fracture in his right hand, a bruised hip and a head cut. He was treated at Quincy Medical Center and released.

An inventory of books valued by Quincy College at $100,000 was destroyed by flames.

The law offices of Atty. Sumner Gillette on the second floor directly above the bookstore had the second most damage.

Phase II Jewelry, J.B. Optical and Photo Quick on the street floor adjoining the bookstore had smoke damage but were open for business Saturday.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman estimated the total damage at about $200,000.

He said the surge connector in the book store was plugged into a tonic machine causing an overload.

Gillette, who arrived at the scene during the fire, praised firefighters. "They did a fantastic job of containing the fire," he said.

He said he also witnessed Sullivan's fall and said it was a miracle that he wasn't injured more seriously.

"He was on a ladder yanking at boards," Gillette said. "And then fell flat on his back and rolled on his neck. It was horrific."

As of Monday Sumner's offices, located on the second floor of the two-story building, were still without electricity but had not shut down due to the fire.

Deanna Gazarian, owner of Phase II Jewelry Gifts and also president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, said that power was restored to the other tenants late afternoon Friday and that she and several business owners took stock of the damage Saturday morning. Gazarian reported some minor soot problems but emphasized the store's jewelry was "untouched."

To Undergo $2 Million In Repairs, Renovations

USS Salem Departure For Overhaul Delayed By Storm Threat

USS SALEM

The USS Salem's departure from its berth at the Fore River Shipyard, en route to a South Boston drydock and $2 million in renovations, has been postponed until Friday between 6 and 7 a.m.

The ship was originally scheduled to leave early Wednesday but a developing ocean storm and high winds scheduled to hit New England caused a delay in the timetable.

The cruiser is scheduled to pass under the Fore River bridge before 7 a.m. Friday. The total travel time is estimated at 4-5 hours at a speed of four knots.

The Salem, a Des Moines class heavy cruiser which is the centerpiece of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum (USNSM), will be dry docked at the Boston Ship Repair Company in South Boston for 60-75 days.

Workers will inspect the structure and watertight integrity of the ship's hull and make any necessary repairs. Other repairs and upgrades will include modernization of the ship's fire alarm and electrical systems and the installation of additional, modern toilet facilities.

The ship's hull will be completely repainted.

"This is a major undertaking," said Robert Duetsch, the museum's executive director. "The Salem has not been dry-docked in nearly 40 years. We are thrilled about our upcoming plans, and look forward to the ship's return to Quincy and reopening with two exciting, new exhibits."

The USS Salem (CA-139) is one of three Des Moines class heavy cruisers, the last in the world. The ship was named after Salem, MA, and is 716 ft. Long and weighs 17,000 tons. It was built at the Fore River Shipyard, and commissioned in May of 1949.

Her main mission was training, shakedown cruises, and rescue efforts. While the Salem was launched just after the end of World War II and never saw combat action, her activities during her 10 year career were consistent with her name, which means "Peace." She was instrumental in rescue efforts in Greece when a major earthquake devastated the Greek Islands. And she showed the flag in both the Mediterranean as the Sixth Fleet Flagship and in the Caribbean.

In October of 1994, the Salem made her way back to her original birthplace of Quincy, where she now serves as the centerpiece and current home of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

The USNSM's historical collection consists of books, prints, artwork, photographs and documents covering all periods from the Revolutionary War to the Persian Gulf and historical information about the trade of shipbuilding at the Fore River Shipyard. It also boasts a large collection of military armament, and a special WWI collection of weaponry, personal effects, and related artifacts.

The USNSM closed to the public Nov. 22 to prepare for the ship's relocation. The USS Salem will return to the Fore River Shipyard in February 2000, resuming its overnight program and weekend schedule. Starting in May of next year, the museum will reopen seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., offering group tours of the ship, permanent exhibits, and the museum's archive and research center and souvenir shop.

The $2 million renovation project is funded by the state.

Bragg Has School Vice-Chairman Votes

Jo-Ann Bragg will be the new vice-chairman of the Quincy School Committee.

Four votes are needed on the seven-member board for the two-year vice-chairmanship term.

BRAGG

"I have more than four," she confirms.

She doesn't say so, but she actually had five going into this week.

"I hope to make it unanimous before the organizational meeting in January," she says.

The vice-chairmanship is the second most powerful on the school committee, second only to Mayor James Sheets who is chairman by virtue of his office as mayor.

Bragg is completing her sixth year on the school committee, the first half of her second four-year term.

She will succeed Linda Stice who under school committee rules is not eligible for a second successive term.

Bragg seems eager to plunge into work as vice chairman.

She already has 21st century goals and priorities lined up for accomplishment in the next two years.

"We have to take a good look at the MCAS testing--our weak and strong points," she says.

"We should have a full-time nurse in every school. We are close to that now but have a little more to go.

"Reducing class sizes but adding teachers are two more matters that need looking into," she says.

She favors a new Quincy High School but says it must be a comprehensive one incorporating technical programs into it.

"We should establish a time-line for improvements to the other school buildings," she says.

She would also like to see new windows and shades installed at the Broad Meadows and Atlantic Middle Schools.

"They get a lot of wind and sea air causing deterioration," she says.

And another important matter, she notes, is the selection of a new principal at North Quincy High School to succeed Eileen Feeney who is retiring at the end of this year.

She apparently is looking forward to a busy agenda as vice-chairman in 2000-2001.

BRIAN BUCKLEY, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging, has his celebrity Christmas card out early this year.

And this one's a beauty.

Posing with him for the card is model Christie Brinkley, looking gorgeous.

BUCKLEY and CHRISTIE

Buckley met her recently at a fund-raiser for birth defects at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

He asked her if she would pose for a photo with him and she purred, "Absolutely."

"She was really nice and is naturally beautiful," Buckley says.

Even prettier, he thinks, than Bo Derek and Marjorie Vincent, Miss America of 1990 who posed with him in other years.

This year's card, you might say, is a collector's item and not just because of Christie.

"This is the last one," says Buckley who has been sending out his celebrity cards since 1970.

"It's the last year of the century and I'm going to end it with this card. Finish out the century."

Buckley says he is mailing out over 400 of the cards this year. And that's the end.

Down through the years, his celebrities have included:

President Jimmy Carter, Ray Charles, Shaquille O'Neal, Bobby Hull, Johnny Cash, Bobby Orr, Rodney Dangerfield, Bob Hope, Burt Reynolds, Jack Nicklaus, Reggie Jackson, Monty Hall, George Wendt, Carroll O'Connor, Rafery Johnson, Nick Nolte, Jerry (The Beaver) Mathers, Ted Danson and Robert Shapiro, O.J. Simpson's lawyer.

"All of them were nice when I asked them to pose," Buckley says.

But there were two who turned him down: the late Gene Autry and Penn State football coach Joe Paterno.

It was bad timing for Paterno. It was just before the kick-off. He has no clue about Autry's rejection.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1923 POSTCARD is a view of Beach Street in Wollaston looking towards Wollaston Beach. The picture was taken from in front of what is now the Wollaston Post Office; Kemper Street is to the right. Clearly a winter scene, no leaves on the trees and topcoats on the group across the way, it's interesting that the touring car in the distance has its top down. A close look at the unpaved street shows why all houses in those days had built-in mudrooms.

Disappointment

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy City Council President Peter Kolson couldn't have said it better when asked about his recent loss in the campaign for a councillor-at-large seat - "217 people at the bottom of the ocean is a tragedy, losing an election is a disappointment" was his answer. An honorable and classy response that I believe voters will remember should he seek election again in the future.

I remain perplexed in my search for that gracefulness and acceptance in the face of defeat in the outcome of the Ward 3 City Council race. The reported price tag for a candidate's "disappointment" in this case: approximately $5000 in city (read taxpayer) funds for a recount in a contest that on election day was decided by 797 votes out of nearly 3000 cast. One may recall that many far more closely decided races, including Steve Doherty's 77 vote loss in 1995 (Ward 3), Joe Newton's 11 vote loss in 1997 (Ward 5), Mary Ann Mahoney's 46 vote loss in 1999 (Ward 5), didn't generate such a recount request.

What could $5000 pay for? My passion is children and schools. How about 150 home visits for the Family Commission Parent-to-Parent Newborn Home visiting program. How about 5 I-Mac computers, or educational field trips to the Museum of Science or Plymouth Plantation for 600 kids, some equipment for athletics, or musical instruments for band. Just 20% of that figure would have bought T-shirts for the elementary school AllStar band which they have been unable to acquire. When it comes to schools the list can be endless. Your interests may point to other needs such as a couple of sidewalks repaired, or extra trips for the Senior Van for senior citizen doctor or other appointments. Suffice it to say that this money could have met a variety of needs and for me that is a real disappointment.

It's my humbly submitted opinion that an amendment to the statute that governs elections, MGL Chapter 54, requiring some reasonable threshold that has to be attained before allowing a recount, is in order. We need to exercise some reasonable control over our costs for someone's disappointment.

Dear Chief Gorman:

On behalf of our family and Phase II Jewelry in the Burgin Platner Building, please accept our thanks for the efforts that were made yesterday (Nov. 26) in the fire at our building.

Although the total loss of the bookstore is devastating and our loss will present some very difficult times for us in this holiday season, we appreciate the efforts of your entire department in keeping the fire contained as much as they did. General Hooker Deserves Better

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In front of the state house in Boston is a statue of Major General Joseph Hooker on a horse.

The only word engraved on the base is "Hooker." This word alone is an affront to a heroic general during the Civil War. During the Mexican War, his skillful leadership and personal bravery won for him the sobriquet of "Fighting Joe."

Although he wasn't the greatest of the union generals, he did fight with distinction in the Battle ot Chattanooga and at the so-called "Battle of the Clouds" on lookout mountain.

The legislature at the time must have recognized his leadership qualities to erect a statue in his honor since he was born in Hadley, Mass. The additional wording on the base should be:

A Thank You For Senior Police Academy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The graduates of the Senior Police Academy at the Bauer House in Quincy wish to thank Sgt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Force and all the instructors at the classes for all the important information given to us.

Through hands-on demonstrations we learned how to protect ourselves against attackers and purse-snatchers, as well as information from the EMTs on how to stabilize patients before they (EMTs) get to the scene.

Health insurance and the different HMO policies were discussed and we were given information on how to get in touch with these different agencies.

We were also given information on medications and medical aids and how to use them properly.

When traveling, we were warned never to leave our luggage unattended as it could be snatched very easily.

We enjoyed a really informative, happy and very humorous time and we are very grateful to all who participated.

By PAUL HAROLD

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Sr., re-iterated his preference for a second road to Germantown as the best was to provide quick response to the peninsula neighborhood.

The chief's remarks came in response to a call by the Germantown Improvement Association for a new station in Germantown. The chief said instead of a new station, a bridge should be built across Rock Island Cove connecting Germantown to Houghs Neck so that the station there could respond in Germantown. The bridge would reduce the run from Houghs Neck by two and a half miles.

Gorman said that if any new a station in the area is contemplated, it should be located in Adams Shore at Curlew Rd. and Sea St. to best serve all the neighborhoods on the peninsula.

BRAINTREE SEEKS TRANSFER OF DAM

Braintree Selectmen met with Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa at city hall, asking for the transfer of the city's property in their town, the Braintree Dam, for use as a park and recreation site.

The city was considering selling the dam for $40,000 to the shipyard that was using the water for industrial purposes. The selectmen wanted the dam as a gift. The mayor said he'd consider transferring the dam for free if Braintree paid back to Quincy all the taxes it paid for the site over the years.

SHIPYARD WORKERS UNDERPAID

James McGonnigal, the executive secretary of Local 5, charged that 1,500 workers at Fore River were being underpaid. They were all working on the nuclear cruiser the Long Beach. He lodged his complaint with the Navy Department and the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission.

Reported wages ranged from $2.33 to $2.45 an hour, while the actual wages were $2.33 to $2.45. Of the 265 electricians only two were paid the top rate of $2.80 with the average rate at $2.33.

McGonnigal said that Sam Wakeman (the general manager) was asking for quality, yet he refused to pay the proper wage.

Thomas Crane Holiday House Tour Sunday

The Thomas Crane Public Library Holiday House Tour, a festive seasonal event to benefit the Crane Library Building Fund, will be hosted Sunday, Dec. 5 from 1 to 5 p.m.

The tour will include four private homes and the Furnace Brook Golf Clubhouse on Forbes Hill in Quincy. In celebration of the season, each house and the clubhouse will be decorated for the holidays.

The tour features four gracious homes built between 1931 and 1940 and the golf clubhouse, originally constructed in 1923-24, on Forbes Hill, a small secluded area of winding hilly streets in Quincy.

Forbes Hill was developed beginning in 1870 when lots sold for 12 cents a foot. The area now boasts large, attractive homes on tree-lined lots with scenic views. A 75 foot tower of Quincy granite still stands today, all that remains of a reservoir constructed in 1902 and later filled in.

The homes presented in the tour include a 1931 English Cape with many windows affording views of the surrounding greenscape; a 1932 ivy-covered Tudor of brick and stucco with evergreen topiary; a 1935 Royal Barry Wills Colonial Revival with a gabled portico and interior oak finishes, and a 1940 Colonial effectively set on a corner lot. The Furnace Brook Golf Clubhouse offers spectacular views across the golf course from two windowed walls as well as an inviting interior with a large fire place.

Inside there are many interior features of note, such as arched doorways, built-in cabinets, beautiful wood work, doors, and wainscoting, unique fireplaces, original fixtures, interesting windows and wall coverings, use of natural light, warm sunrooms and three-season rooms, and personal decorative touches. The landscaping, gardens, and variety of trees complement the sites.

The tour starts at the Bernazzani Elementary School, 701 Furnace Brook Parkway, where parking and trolley transportation through the neighborhood will be available. Carolers in the neighborhood and a Quincy Symphony string quartet performing at the golf clubhouse will add to the holiday spirit, and refreshments will be served at the clubhouse following the tour.

Tickets are $15 in advance and $18 on the day of the tour, and are available at all Crane Library branches, (617) 376-1301, as well as at area business locations.

Children over 12 are welcome; flat shoes are preferred; homes are not wheelchair accessible; and no cameras please.

Auditor Certifies $26,211 For Local Election Costs

State Auditor Joe DeNucci has certified $26,211 to Quincy to cover expanded polling hours related to the upcoming 2000 September primary and November elections.

"Although citizens now have more time to vote, these extra hours have increased election day staffing costs for the Commonwealth's municipalities, DeNucci said in announcing a total of $1,137,579 in election funds for cities and towns across Massachusetts.

A 1983 state mandate established minimum polling hours from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at state elections. DeNucci said it is the responsibility of his Division of Local Mandates (DLM) to determine how much the state must pay cities and towns to implement state mandates.

The polling law requires communities to document any additional election costs and then submit them to DLM for certification. The Massachusetts secretary of state must then distribute the funding.

Cities and towns will receive funds for the extra polling hours prior to the next state primary.

WHAT IS "NEUROPATHY?"

The 12th edition of The American Pocket Medical Dictionary defines neuropathy as: any nervous disorder." The year this was published was 1922. This simple definition begins to open the door to the complexity of what neuropathy truly is and the different forms of how it can manifest itself. Podiatrists see and treat "peripheral neuropathy" affecting the nerves of the lower leg and foot. It has been estimated that at least 50% of Diabetics taking insulin have symptoms related to neuropathy.

Signs and symptoms commonly associated with neuropathy can include the following: numbness, increased sweating, burning and "shooting pains, inability to detect temperature changes, wasting of the small muscles in the foot, tingling sensations, decreased reflexes, "overly" sensitive skin, inability to distinguish the position of joints (whether they are up or down) and to detect vibrations and, finally the formation of calluses over areas that bear weight. The complexity of the combination of these factors is what makes a person susceptible to injury and possible complications like infections.

If you are experiencing any of the above signs and symptoms in your feet, you may have peripheral neuropathy. There are other causes of neuropathy besides Diabetes and a well-trained Podiatrist can help you try to find them.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

JOSEPH O'CONNELL receives his Purple Heart from Thomas G. Kelley, commissioner of veterans' services, as O'Connell's wife Rita looks on. O'Connell received the medal for wounds received in Gafsa, Tunisia during World War II.

56 Years Later

Quincy Resident Receives WW II Purple Heart

Joseph O'Connell of Virginia Road, a Quincy resident of 53 years and former practice goalie for the Boston Bruins, received the Purple Heart Monday for injuries he received during World War II.

Thomas G. Kelley, commissioner of Veterans' Services, presented O'Connell his long overdue medal for wounds he received in Gafsa, Tunisia in March of 1943, wounds which put an end to any thoughts of a career in the NHL.

Teammate, friend, and fellow World War II veteran Milt Schmidt, the Bruins' "captain of the century," was on hand for the ceremonies.

O'Connell thanked his wife Rita, his children Joan and Richard, and the Department of Veterans Services for the honor. He said it was his son Richard who was instrumental in his obtaining the medal after all these years.

O'Connell was the practice goalie for the Bruins from 1939 to 1941 when they went to the Stanley Cup finals twice behind starting goalie Frank Brimsek. "Teams only carried one goalie back then," O'Connell recalled. "They only had six goaltenders in the entire NHL."

O'Connell was drafted into the U.S. Army in 1941 and became part of the 17th Field Artillery of the Second Army Corps. Luckily O'Connell was not with his outfit when Rommel's Afrika Korps "decimated" them at Kasserine Pass in Tunisia, North Africa, but he was later strafed by a Stuka dive bomber, his truck hit by a bomb and blown off the road.

O'Connell did not report the incident at the time. "We had lost too many guys at Kasserine," O'Connell said. "The outfit couldn't afford to lose any more."

He fought on until he collapsed months later.

O'Connell retired in 1995 from his position as production director at The Atlantic Monthly after 32 years at the magazine.

City's Computer Systems Y2K Compliant, Says Phelan

The city's computer systems are ready for the year 2000, reports Charles Phelan, director of Data Processing and Y2K coordinator for the city of Quincy.

The city, Phelan says, has been working since March of 1997 to avoid possible Y2K computer failures with special attention given to what Phelan calls "mission critical" areas such as police, fire, and DPW.

CHARLES PHELAN

Phelan himself, along with a technician on duty, will spend New Year's at the city's 911 center and says that each "major department" (defined as one in use seven days a week, 24 hours a day) has been assigned a specific contact person with a specific phone number in case of emergency.

Phelan also said that utility companies such as Bell Atlantic, Mass Electric, and Boston Gas have all signed off on Y2K readiness and the city has been working with companies such as Stop & Shop, Osco, and Walgreens to make sure the new year is a smooth one for Quincy residents.

"We did more than just fix the city's computer systems," said Phelan. "We contacted vendors and looked at the system's ability to deliver services."

To that end Phelan's department has been working with the city's financial institutions to make sure matters such as direct deposit of paychecks are no problem.

Phelan also said that the Health Department has signed off on Quincy Medical Center and that the MWRA's water supply to Quincy is 100 % gravity-fed and, therefore, not a concern.

Phelan likens the Y2K bug, where some computers might mistakenly read the "00" in 2000 as 1900 and shut down, to the storms that constantly threaten the New England coast: whether it hits or not, preparedness is the key.

Phelan recommends a flashlight with batteries, a radio with batteries, and extra food and drinking water, the same preparations one might make for a heavy snowstorm.

"I really do not foresee a lot that can go wrong," Phelan said. "But you can't take that risk. So we're ready."

A full Y2K report, as well as valuable links, is available on the Internet at http://www.ci.quincy.ma.us./htm/y2k.htm. For further information, call City Hall at 376-1120.

QUINCY HOSPITAL received this hefty check Monday at ceremonies held in its main lobby. The oversized check represents the $12.1 million no-interest loan to QMC, the state's contribution to saving what is now Quincy Medical Center. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

see their investment was well worth it, that we are literally investing in the future," Doran said.

Doran's tour made a believer out of Secretary Healy. "I was very impressed," Healy said of QMC's renovations. "We're very glad to be in a partnership with Quincy Medical Center."

Sen. Birmingham agreed. "It's definitely a work in progress," said Birmingham after the tour, "but there's no substitute for seeing something, for meeting people, directly. This shows that saving Quincy Hospital, the hospital that wouldn't die, was the right thing to do."

Mayor Sheets said that, thanks to his recent hip injury which kept him at Quincy Medical Center for several days, he had a chance to see first hand what QMC meant to the city. "It gave me an opportunity to speak with the patients, the employees, to see how valuable it is to have a hospital right here."

Rep. Haley, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said that he was excited about the changes at QMC and glad that the state "could help out in a small way."

"But it's the community that kept it open," Haley added. "And it's the community that's going to make it work."

Foot Notes
by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

ANKLE SPRAINS

Ankle sprains may be the most common acute orthopedic injury. People often sprain their ankles during athletic activities, but it can happen stepping off a curb or into a hole. The injured person usually has a history of turning the ankle frequently. Sometimes the patient feels a pop or snap when the ankle turns. Following the incident, people have difficulty walking and the ankle swells. An ankle sprain means that the small ligaments on the outside of the ankle have stretched or torn. A physical exam almost always shows swelling and black-and-blue discoloration over the outside part of the joint. Range of motion is often limited, but strength is usually not affected. X-rays are done to rule out fractures.

Podiatrists are trained to care for ankle and foot injuries. Skilled at diagnosing injuries and establishing a treatment plan, we strive to decrease your pain and other symptoms, protect your injury so it can heal, and prepare you for a return to activity. We'll also counsel you on how to prevent future injuries. You'll find foot care for the family here at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy , in our comfortable , state of the art facilities. Please call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. Wear a brace or tape the ankle during activities with a high likelihood of ankle turning.

Wollaston Manor Tenants Celebrate Housing Referendum

The Wollaston Manor Tenants Association (WMTA) Tuesday celebrated the passage of "Question 3" on the Quincy ballot on Election Day in November at the manor's community room, 91 Clay St.

Awards were presented to local and state officials who have been supportive of WMTA's efforts to protect the affordability of their housing.

Wollaston Manor is a federally subsidized apartment complex, occupied almost entirely by seniors and people with disabilities. However, the affordability of Wollaston Manor is a risk, due to the owners' option to "prepay" their subsidized mortgage and raise rents. The owners of Wollaston Manor have refused to give the concerned seniors any guarantee that they will not prepay the mortgage, said Bob Markle, Wollaston Manor tenant leader.

In response, WMTA has been working over the past several months to adopt state and local protectors for their housing. Question 3 was a non-binding ballot question that asked Quincy voters if they were in favor of adopting such protections in Quincy. Due largely to the Election Day efforts of the WMTA, and despite large amounts of misinformation spread by the real estate industry, Quincy voters returned a "Yes," Markle said.

On Tuesday, WMTA celebrated the victory and thanked elected officials for their efforts to pass Question 3 at the local level and the Enabling Act at the State House. The state legislation, already passed unanimously by the Senate, is still awaiting House action.

When the Enabling Act passes, there will be a binding referendum that will decide whether or not the protections should be adopted by the Quincy City Council.

Stephen O'Donnell Named District Highway Director

Stephen T. O'Donnell of Quincy has been appointed District Highway Director for MassHighway's District 4 Office in Arlington.

O'Donnell will oversee state road and bridge construction projects in 81 cities and towns in the Greater Boston area, and supervise more than 400 MassHighway employees.

"Steve brings extensive experience in highway design, construction and management to District 4," Commissioner Matthew Amorello said. "I know he'll do an outstanding job in his new position."

O'Donnell began his career at MassHighway in 1984, serving as resident engineer for numerous construction projects. In 1992, he was promoted to Contracts Manager in the department's Highway Engineering Division in Boston.

"I thank Commissioner Amorello for appointing me to this important position," O'Donnell said. "I'm looking forward to the challenges of overseeing this busy highway district."

Massachusetts is divided into five MassHighway districts. District 4 is comprised of 81 communities in Eastern Massachusetts, stretching from the New Hampshire border south through Boston to the Quincy/Braintree area, and west to Route 128 and portions of the Route 495 corridor. It has the most bridges (1200) and lane miles of roadway of any of the state's five districts, as well as the largest population.

O'Donnell lives in Squantum with his wife Pamela and his two sons, Colin and Ryan. He is a U.S. Marine Corps veteran, serving two tours of duty with an international peacekeeping force in Beirut, Lebanon.

Y2K Ward 5 Topic

The Ward 5 Community Association will conduct its monthly meeting on Thursday, Dec. 9 at the Beechwood Knoll School on Fenno St. at 7 p.m.

All are welcome.

Featured speakers will discuss what the average homeowner should expect and the necessary preparations that should be taken for the Y2K situation.

Professor Ned Vankevich, a published author on Y2K, will discuss what preparations and precautions people might want to think about before Jan. 1, 2000. Vankevich has spoken at many different forums on the Y2K issue over the past year.

Charles Phelan, director of Data Processing for the City of Quincy, will discuss the measures the city has taken to ensure that services remain uninterrupted after Jan. 1. Phelan, who is responsible for overseeing the city's entire computer systems, will help people sort through the facts versus the myths of the Y2K issue.

Senior Living

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

OLDER AND BETTER

If baby boomers have any misgivings about getting older, they should compare themselves with their parents or grandparents when they were the same age. Did they jog, rollerblade, wear blue jeans or decide to change careers abruptly? Middle and old age are far more interesting and fruitful times of life than they have ever been, Not only are we living longer with greater health and independence, but we are enjoying far fewer societal constraints than was ever the norm. Even 20 and 30 years ago, women struggled with their roles when the children left home and men tended to define themselves in terms of a single life-long job. Today, we can be virtually anything we want to be.

To fully enjoy your senior years, it's helpful to adopt a flexible attitude and to be willing to learn and adjust as your life changes. Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers independent and assisted living. The sea is just nearby and there's plenty of wonderful shopping and lovely places to walk. For more information, call us at 617-770-3264. (Four Seaport Drive).

Marina Place invites you to explore the philosophy of Feng Shui. Join us for a presentation by Myra Bushell, M. Ed. on Wednesday, December 8, from 2 to 4pm. Please call 617-770-3264 to reserve your seat.

P.S. The most important thing we can do to ensure a comfortable and interesting old age is to plan for one.

The Other Attack On Pearl Harbor

darkness. The launch was over within an hour.

The attacking force found the American battle fleet exactly where the admiral said it would be and as he promised them - totally unprepared for the attack.

The totality of the surprise was complete. The attacking force swept in. Dividing into three sections they attacked and decimated the battle fleet at anchor, the air base at Hickman Field and the oil tank farm and submarine base. A few hours later virtually unscathed the attacking force returned to the two big carriers.

Surprise had been complete. Victory beyond the admiral's expectations.

The admiral was Rear Admiral Harry Yarnell. The two big carriers, the USS Saratoga and the USS Lexington (built in Quincy in the 1920's). The date Feb. 7, 1932.

The attack was a stimulated one designed by Admiral Yarnell and his staff to show that an attack on Pear Harbor by a carrier force was feasible and that the battle fleet at Pearl Harbor was vulnerable.

Yarnell believed an attacking force observing radio silence and black out conditions could approach Pearl Harbor from the North undetected, launch a predawn attack on a Sunday morning and catch the fleet unprepared. With little cost or danger to the attacking forces, the fleet would be decimated.

On Feb. 7, 1932 Yarnell proved his point. The lessons of the "attack" however were quickly forgotten.

Nine years later on another Sunday morning, another admiral would launch a real attack, Admiral Isoraku Yamanoto, Dec. 7, 1941.

Quincy Recreation Dept. To Receive Award From U.S. Tennis Assn.

The United States Tennis Association of New England has selected the Quincy Recreation Department as its first recipient of an annual award for its contributions involving city tennis programs for children and adults.

Recreation Director Barry Welch and his staff were cited for building fine tennis programs at nine playgrounds and 22 city tennis courts. Over 250 youngsters are receiving tennis instruction during summer vacations. The Recreation Department also sponsors tennis camps at its Russell Park facility for over 90 children.

BARRY WELCH

The department's Tennis Championships Tournament is believed to be New England's oldest and largest municipal tennis tournament. It has had upwards of 100 juniors and adults in it for 29 years. Many of its graduates have been ranked in New England for many years.

Because of these accomplishments, Welch, representing the Quincy Recreation Department, will be honored Dec. 4 at the Hilton Hotel at Dedham Place, Dedham.

Shipyard Seeks $145-M Refinancing

MWRA financing "would be kept in place for some time."

According to the plan, approximately $42 million of the refinancing would be used as a secured loan to MHI's first major customer, Intermare. That money would give Intermare enough equity to complete the financing of its six-ship contract with MHI.

"It is worth noting that major commercial shipyards around the world assist customers in financing contracts for new ship construction," Dunkel said.

Dunkel continued:

"MHI has disclosed its refinancing plan to Fleet Bank, the Maritime Administration, Mayor Sheets of Quincy, and officials at the Massachusetts Development Finance Agency and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

"We are confident that as the refinancing plan progresses, we will be able to make satisfactory arrangements for all loan payments that are due, including payments to Fleet Bank and the City of Quincy. We are also confident that MHI will soon be able to resume its renovation project at the shipyard and will be able to reopen the Shipyard next summer."

The Fore River Shipyard's $90 million renovation project, which according to a Stone & Webster, Inc., report is 80% done, is over a year behind schedule, has been put on hold due to contractor disputes, and has resulted in missed loan payments from MHI.

Harold is trying to rescind the tax breaks MHI has received since 1997 when it promised to create 588 jobs by now, jobs which have yet to materialize. "They haven't even come close," Harold said. "It's a very simple agreement. Right now we're losing $2 million a year in tax incentives and it's been a year since we've had an update. Sitting back and hoping for the best doesn't best protect the interests of Quincy."

Harold argued that the de-certification process, which could take two months, would give the city preferred creditor status in the event the shipyard project fails.

Mayor Sheets disagreed, saying that he is still confident and making a clear distinction between city tax dollars and the HUD funds which the city has received for the shipyard. "These are not city funds," the mayor said. "These are federal funds which the city gets."

Sheets said that, in the event of an MHI default, the creditors would be the federal government, the state government, Quincy, and others, in that order, which he said was fair. "I think we're protected," Sheets added.

Sheets' confidence in the shipyard was buoyed by a recent federal grant of $1 million to send 100 workers to Halla, South Korea to train in the latest robotic and computer technology. Those workers will then return to train others at the Fore River Shipyard.

Sheets said that the technology at the South Korea site is identical to what is found at Fore River but found nowhere else in the United States.

Sheets also made note of a $250,000 state grant which will be used for more advanced training in the coming years.

Of the 100 workers who will be chosen for overseas training, Sheets said, Quincy residents would receive top priority.

Senate Secures Income Tax Credit For Seniors

A tax relief initiative which would provide an income tax credit up to $750 for seniors supported by Sen. Michael Morrissey and included in the Senate budget also will be included in a House-Senate compromise budget.

"Our effort to target tax relief to seniors experiencing financial constraints has met with success," Morrissey said. The tax credit, called a circuit breaker, will provide income tax credits based on applicable property taxes and rental payments.

"We all know seniors who have raised children here, have friends here and contribute to our community, and they deserve help to stay here to enjoy retirement," Morrissey said. "We were able to propose a fair and rational approach to help address a serious problem."

More than 130,000 seniors in the state would benefit from this tax break which when fully phased in will provide a maximum income tax credit of $750. Eligible seniors are those who as single fillers have incomes of $40,000 or less, who as heads of household have incomes of $50,000 or less, or who as joint filers have incomes of $60,000 or less, and who are qualified either as property owners or renters. Qualified property owners are those with homes assessed at $400,000 or less.

The value of credit would be determined by the extend to which property tax payments exceed 10% of income for the eligible senior. Qualified renters are those for whom 25 percent of their annual rental payments exceed 10 percent of their income.

The value of the credit would be determined by the degree to which that portion of rent exceeds that portion of income and the maximum value would be $750, once the tax credit is fully phased in for the 2002 tax year.

"The Senate made an effort, in the context of a balanced and responsible budget, to address inequities that remain in our generally positive economy," Morrissey said. "This tax relief initiative for seniors is one example of that, and one which I am very pleased has been incorporated in the budget we are submitting to the governor."

South Shore Center For The Blind Hosts Pre-School Thanksgiving Party

The South Shore Center for the Blind in Squantum, under the auspices of the Quincy Department of Elder Services, hosted a Thanksgiving party for a group of youngsters from Beechwood by the Bay Pre-School.

Seniors enjoyed a children's songfest and children were entertained by performances by the seniors.

Children were served refreshments and were presented with stuffed animals.

Handling Of Stillborn Fetus An Issue At QMC

Quincy Medical Center, formerly Quincy Hospital, is involved in a dispute over the proper handling of a stillborn baby who died of a bacterial infection in October of 1995.

David and Patricia Williams of Wollaston, the parents of the stillborn child, want answers as to why the baby's remains were stored for four years without their knowledge.

Although the Williams signed papers giving permission for an autopsy and disposal of the body, they said they have spent years trying to discover what exactly happened to their child.

They learned earlier this month that the remains were still at the hospital.

In a statement released earlier this week, Quincy Medical Center said they understood the trauma the Williams family was going through but stressed that "The Williams family gave the hospital authorization to perform an autopsy and be responsible for the fetal remains."

QMC also said that, when the family continued to raise concerns, their pathology department decided to retain the fetus, rather than just tissue samples, in the event more testing was necessary.

The Williams have already filed lawsuits against the attending obstetricians and are considering a suit against the hospital.

PUT A CAP ON IT!

Replacing a lost gas tank cap may be way down on your list of things to do. Worse yet, you may think replacement is unnecessary and that a rag stuffed in the filler pipe will suffice. Be advised, however, that the gas tank cap is a rather important piece of equipment. Most are equipped with valves that compensate for pressure build-up inside the tank or equalize the difference when atmospheric pressure is greater than the internal tank pressure. In short, it is an important part of a sealed, pressurized system. Using a rag as a substitute cap not only compromises the efficiency of the fuel-delivery system, it creates the very real risk of explosion in the event of an accident.

Most everything in your car is part of a "system," even the gas cap. For most of your cars's maintenance needs, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

HINT: If any part of a gas tank cap's gasket is missing, the cap should be replaced.

$2.5 Million Contract For Phase II Of I-93 Noise Barriers

State Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan and MassHighway Commissioner Matthew J. Amorello have announced a $2.5 million contract has been awarded to the R. Zoppo Corporation of Stoughton for construction of Phase II of a noise barrier on I-93 in Quincy and Milton.

"These barriers will reduce road noise by over 50%, improving the quality of life in the neighborhoods adjacent to I-93," said Commissioner Amorello. "They will also be enhanced by extensive landscaping and plantings."

The project calls for constructing noise barriers for 5,100 feet along the northbound and southbound sides of I-93 through Milton and Quincy. Northbound, barriers will be built in Milton from Squantum St. southward along Granite Ave. to a point just north of Antwerp St.

Southbound, barriers will be constructed in Milton and Quincy from State St. in Milton southward along Bryant Ave. to Bates Ave. in Quincy, and in Milton from Squantum St. southward along St. Agatha St. to a point just north of Adams St.

Construction of Phase I of the noise barrier on I-93 is ongoing, and is more than two-thirds complete. Construction of Phase II is expected to begin in the spring of 2000.

Loan Program Gives Borrowers A Chance To Lower Interest Rates

By CAROL BULMAN
Conway Financial Services

It's the best thing since sliced bread.

That's how I feel about Fannie Mae's recently announced "Timely Payment Rewards Program." Fannie Mae is the nickname for the Federal National Mortgage Association, the largest buyer and seller of home loans in the country.

This program is brand new and will be rolled out to home buyers across the country shortly by Fannie Mae to customers via a select group of lenders. A customer does not deal directly with Fannie Mae, a member of the secondary mortgage market, but with a local or national lender or mortgage broker such as Conway Financial Services.

Fannie Mae's goal is simple: To assist borrowers currently serviced by higher-priced mortgages

CAROL BULMAN

(starting at 2 percent above going rates) by offering these buyers a better-priced alternative, and if eligible, the opportunity to lower their interest rate proving a successful payment record.

Soon, through Fannie Mae's initiative, a customer who previously had very few choices for mortgage financing will be able to purchase a home with a reasonable interest rate and terms. And if they stay current, Fannie Mae will allow a 1-percent decrease in interest rate -- no extra cost, and no catch.

The candidate for this loan has experienced past credit problems, has a limited amount of cash available for down payment or closing costs, has a limited amount of cash left over after closing and may have difficulty verifying a two-year consistent history of employment, but has a sincere desire to own a home.

Under this new program, buyers are required to make their mortgage payments on time for 24 consecutive months in order to qualify for an automatic interest-rate decrease of one percentage point. If this perfect payment record cannot be achieved during the first 24 months of the loan, Fannie Mae will allow two additional attempts at a 24-month perfect-payment record.

To qualify for the Timely Rewards program, a borrower must be found ineligible for standard Fannie Mae loans, which carry the best interest rates. Local lenders or brokers can quickly determine buyers' eligibility through Fannie Mae's automated underwriting system.

Known as Desktop Underwriter, the system will determine the applicant's risk-level assessment and whether he or she is able to obtain a loan through conventional standards. If not, the applicant may be considered a candidate for the Timely Rewards Program, which offers loans with interest rates that are generally 1.5 percent above the going rates.

This program is long overdue. Borrowers with less-than-perfect credit have occasionally found themselves the victims of abusive and predatory lending practices. This issue has gained the attention of our legislators, who are trying to formulate solutions that will protect the consumer.

But with the backing of the U.S. government through Fannie Mae, these customers are now well protected and fairly treated.

Beginning the first part of November 1999, a limited number of companies are offering this program, and Conway Financial Services is among the few. Call (718) 681-9400 for more information about the Fannie Mae Timely Payment Rewards program.

(Carol Bulman is president of Conway Financial Services, a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway and Company, that maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top mortgage lenders in the east and originates a full line of mortgage products. Jack Conway and Company is the largest independent real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.)

For Quincy, A Game To Remember

Presidents Prevail Over North Quincy, 21-13

By CHRIS POISSON

The last Thursday of November is one day the 1999 Quincy High School football team will never forget.

For two years it has been trapped in what's been the program's Dark Ages. For two years it has been locked in the basement of the Old Colony League. For two years, spanning 20 games, it has been denied victory.

Heading into last Thursday's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day game at Veterans Memorial Stadium, not many gave Quincy a chance of coming out on top. Not with six starters banged up, one of them being its all-star quarterback.

Somehow, though, these once-dead Presidents (1-10, 1-6) ended an era and beat the odds, grinding out a 21-13 triumph in a hometown showdown with North Quincy (2-8-1, 2-5-0) for their fifth holiday celebration in six years.

"It's about time," said Bob Noble, who notched his first win as head coach. "It's about time for this to happen. Our kids never quit on us or themselves. It all paid off today. If there's one day you want it to happen, today was the day."

For the 15 seniors, they desperately needed a win and they were determined to reel it in on their final cast of their careers.

"It's a great moment for them," Noble said. "I just can't tell you how happy I am for those seniors. They're tremendous kids."

For the first time in a while the Presidents turned in a complete-game effort as all cylinders clicked. The offense had its reliable aerial assault with a surprising ground attack, anchored by a determined Russell Mullen. The defense created turnovers. And special teams came up with the play of the game.

Quincy's defense had just held North Quincy's OCL all-star, senior tailback Steve Minukas, to 5 yards on a third-and-nine play late in the first half. The Red Raiders were forced to punt deep in their own territory and the Presidents came with an all-out rush.

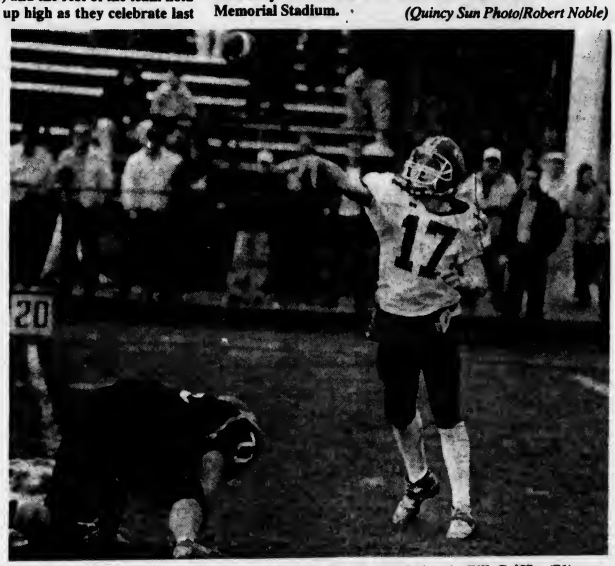
Senior co-captain Tim Pezzulo, who played an inspiring defensive game with torn cartilage in his ribs, broke through the line, leaped and swatted down the punt attempt. Mullen, a senior, scooped up the ball and returned it 20 yards for a touchdown to snap a 7-7 tie with 1:56 left in the half. Sophomore Tom Shruhan's extra point made it 14-7.

"All sides of the ball contributed today," Noble said. "Offensively, we moved the ball real well, particularly in the first half. The defense came up with stops. And special teams had a great block for the touchdown. That's the turning point. Special teams is always a huge part of the game."

Indeed it is. The Presidents had their share of special teams' blunders that cost them games this season. Blocked punts, long kickoff returns, punt returns for touchdowns and botched PAT's were as frequent as Mark McGwire home runs - it seemed like it happened every game.

"I guess turnabout is fair play," Noble said. "What goes around comes around, eventually. All the difficult things that happened to us over the last two years came our way. The bounce went our way this time."

But it wasn't bouncing Quincy's way at first. Playing on a rain-soaked field, both teams struggled to adjust to the slick conditions early on.



North Quincy went three-and-out on its first series but junior Mark Robertson, an honorable mention to the OCL all-star as a defensive back, bobbled the punt and the Red Raiders took over at the Presidents' 24. On the first play from scrimmage senior quarterback Sean Adams couldn't handle the snap and Quincy seemed to have caught a break with the recovery.

Not so. On the second play, Mullen ran left for about six yards but received a bone-jarring hit and coughed the ball up, giving it back to North Quincy at the 24.

This time the Red Raiders capitalized. The backfield duo of Minukas and senior fullback Brian Deptula showcased North Quincy's potent rushing attack. Nine running plays later, Minukas plunged in from 1 yard out for a 7-0 lead with 2:28 left in the first.

"We gave them some situations early in the game as far as turnovers," Noble said. "But we settled down and played well. We gave them the ball deep in our territory and they took advantage of it and scored. To our credit we came right back down the field on a beautiful march and tied it."

That beautiful march was a five-play, 73-yard blitz orchestrated by the right arm of senior Dan Kelly (7 for 11, 113 yards), who missed the previous game with a knee injury. After three unsuccessful run plays resulting in negative two yards and a fumble, Noble turned to the team's savior.

On his first attempt, Kelly hit senior fullback Chris Regens for 6 yards on play-action. He followed that with a 5-yard bullet over the middle to junior wideout Gregg Walsh for a first down. Then, on a fake reverse, found senior wideout Andy Tam for 28 yards.

Kelly's precise passing set up Mullen's 33-yard TD scamper, the longest rushing TD of the season, knotting the game at 7-7 with 12 seconds left in the first.

Quincy was not supposed to be able to run the ball on North Quincy. It hadn't showed a consistent ground game all season. But the offensive line - Sean Fitzpatrick, Chris Ricupero, Eric Wass, Roy Papkey, Joe Cox - bullied the opposition in the trenches as Quincy gained 114 yards rushing, 75 from Mullen who played his best game of the season.

"We ran it well, particularly in the first half," Noble said. "We showed them some things they weren't expecting and might have confused them a little. We did a good job offensively.

"Kelly threw the ball extremely well. He's a great quarterback. We're very proud of our tradition here of great quarterbacks. He's just another one of them in long line."

The Presidents came out running in the second half and scored on their first possession, despite losing senior co-captain Nick DiStasi (broken collar bone) early in the second quarter. On third-and-10, Kelly tossed a 21-yard strike to a wide open Jeff Peterson (2 catches, 53 yards) for the first down at the North Quincy 34.

Mullen, Kelly and Regens picked up the remaining yards on the ground, capped by Kelly's 2-yard TD keeper, his ninth of the year, for a 21-7 lead with 6:23 left in the third.

Quincy fans had seen this situation a few times before: their team holding a lead in the second half only to lose late in the game. Randolph and Falmouth ring a bell.

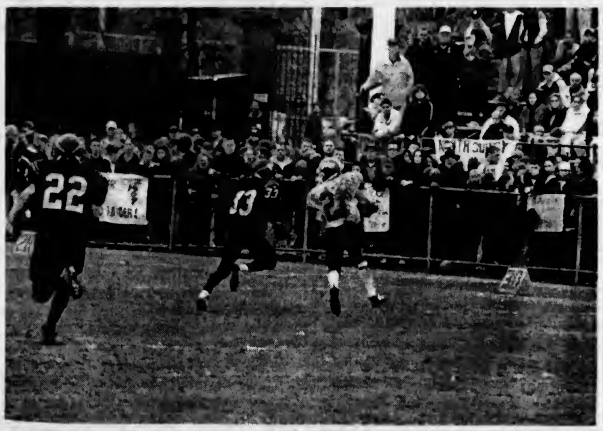
The defense, though, was able to make plays in this game. Following Kelly's touchdown, North Quincy drove to Quincy's 38-yard line but on fourth-and-one, Minukas was stripped of the ball. Stop No. 1.

The Red Raiders did score on their next series when Minukas darted 8 yards into the end zone on a great block by senior Joe O'Connell. Mike Reidy's PAT was tipped at the line and Quincy held a 21-13 lead.

Quincy escaped disaster on the following possession when Kelly avoided a safety with a last-second shovel pass attempt.

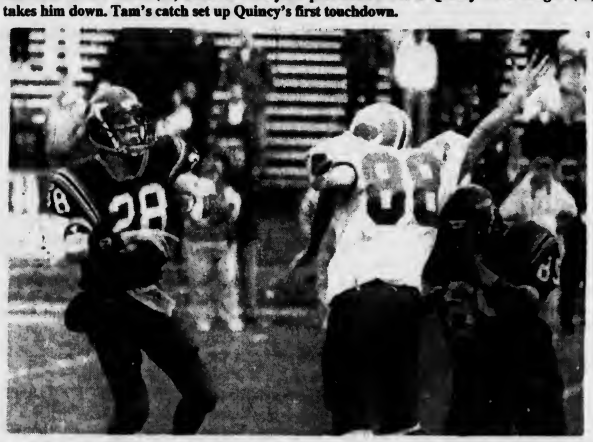
"That's a situation where you don't know what they're going to call," Noble said. "I had a heartattack, to be honest with you, on that."

It might have been two points in the first 10 games but not in this one. North Quincy did get great field position with the ball at Quincy's 37 after the punt.



After Minukas' 16-yard gain to the 21, the defense stiffened. It gang-tackled Minukas for a 2-yard loss. Adams misfired on second down. On third-and-12, Ricupero pressured Adams and nearly had a sack. On fourth down, Quincy finally reached Adams and he fumbled. Stop No. 2.

North Quincy did get the ball back with 2:19 left on the clock for one more shot at a comeback. On its first play, North Quincy went for a hook-and-ladder. Adams hit senior wideout Jody Bravo in the left flat and he pitched it to Minukas, but Quincy defenders were on the spot and, once again, yanked the ball out of Minukas's hands. Stop No. 3.



Robertson returned the loose ball for a touchdown but it was called back as Quincy was whistled for blocking below the knee. No problem, though. The game was over.

"We came up with some huge defensive plays towards the end of the game," Noble said. "I only wish that last one ran for a score. All credit goes to Bill Reardon. He came up with a tremendous defensive scheme. We pretty much had them figured out with what they wanted to do.

"It would've been easy to quit and just go through the motions with reference to the way the last two seasons have been. But they never, never did. Not once. These kids have never stopped trying to be the best they can be."

SENIOR ANDY TAM (21) hauls in a 28-yard pass before North Quincy's Pat Bregoli (33) takes him down. Tam's catch set up Quincy's first touchdown.

SENIOR SEAN ADAMS (28) sneaks a pass over the outstretched hand of Jeff Peterson (88) who is being blocked by Brian Deptula (89).

An Estimated 5,000 Attended Game

Last Thursday's 67th annual Thanksgiving Day game unofficially drew 5,000 fans to Veterans Memorial Stadium to watch Quincy battle rival North Quincy. The Presidents prevailed, 21-13, behind two touchdowns from senior Russell Mullen. Quincy leads the series 34-28-5.

'Nothing To Lose' Inspires Presidents

In Quincy's 21-13 victory over cross-town rival North Quincy in last Thursday's Thanksgiving Day game, sophomore linebacker Kris Kamborian delivered a few inspiring words to his fellow Presidents.

Kamborian wrote a pep speech, "Nothing To Lose," which Stephen Maze, a 1997 Quincy graduate and former football player, read in the locker room before the game.

It read:

"Together we are like a spirit, we don't eat, we don't sleep, and we don't stop until victory is ours. As a family we have nothing to lose, except for ourselves in the love of the game. We spill our blood for each other and ourselves just to gain respect. It's the adrenaline inside of us that says 'do not let your fear bleed with your tears.' It's pride, it's hope, it's desire, it's determination, it's life.

Day after day, hour after hour, we find out if we're ready to go to battle. We look at ourselves in the mirror and lay our fears to rest, and proclaim that the pain we are about to face runs hard and only scars will tell. The sleepless demons inside of us can not die, but only force images of angelic faces. But soon after we walk the honest mile on to the field we know we will not die cold. Anger brings hate, but only faith will bring victory. We have nothing to lose, but only to gain. And together the thorn of fear that the selfsame well from which our anger comes would also bleed with our tears . . ."

North Girls Bow After Courageous Effort

SOCCER

Battling a howling wind and No. 3 Plymouth North on its home turf, the North Quincy girls' soccer season came to an abrupt end, losing to the Eagles, 3-2, in the Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinals.

With eight minutes left in the game and the score knotted at 2-2, the Eagles scored on their own indirect kick as Debbie Flynn, unmarked on the weak side, tallied her second goal and the game-winner.

"My kids came up with a courageous effort in this game and played like a typical North Quincy kid: tough, aggressive and never say die," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "I've never been prouder of a group of girls because they played through so much adversity and never made excuses. The team played together and cheered for each other continuously."

North Quincy and Plymouth North battled on even terms through the first 34 minutes of the game. North Quincy, with the wind at its back, was unable to sustain pressure. Good scoring chances came off the feet of Lauren Kalil and Caitlyn O'Donnell.

The Eagles got on the scoreboard first when the speedy Flynn took off from midfield and put a breakaway goal past keeper Lauren Sleeth with six minutes left in the half.

Plymouth North took a 2-0 advantage as a second attempt at a corner kick found Erica Pikor unmarked from five yards out.

"Sleeth was terrific in goal," Bregoli said. "You'd never know she'd never played that position before. She handled the pressure well."

As it has all season, North Quincy stormed back. Freshman Erin McFarland made a great run with the ball and was fouled 25 yards out. Senior Ashley Murphy touched the indirect kick to McFarland, who buried her shot into the far corner with 17 seconds left in the half.

The Red Raiders, playing with more intensity in the second half, used its physical play to slow down the speedy Eagle forwards. Kelly Rice, Jen Conley, Stacy Szcesuil and Sleeth denied each foray into Raider territory.

"Jen Conley, Mo Holleran and Kelly Rice were all physically beat up but they played through pain and gave great efforts," Bregoli said.

North Quincy's persistence paid off at the 20-minute mark when McFarland again took a direct kick. Eagle keeper Ashleigh McLean tipped the shot off the crossbar where junior forward Casey Ridge rammed it home, tying the game at 2-2.

"This senior group showed great leadership, starting with captains Kristin Coughlin, Ashley Murphy, Caitlyn O'Donnell and Mo Holleran," Bregoli said. "The other seniors were great helps in bringing our younger players along like Lauren Awed, Kathlyn Gates, Lauren Enos, Janelle Hersey and Lauren Pizzi.

"The future looks bright with many skilled players among the underclassmen. We hope to better our 12-7-1 record and win the OCL and Division I South tourney next year."

North Boys' Season Most Successful In 15 Years

The North Quincy High School boys' soccer team ended its most successful season in 15 years with a 3-1 loss to eventual champ Needham in the Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinals.

The Red Raiders finished with an 11-6-3 overall record and fourth place in the Old Colony League, the highest since they entered the league in 1989. It was the second straight year they made the state tournament.

"This has been a wonderful season for what I consider to be a truly remarkable team," said head coach Bob Dano. "They don't understand the meaning of the word quit, and put on the finest stretch run of 9-1-1 that I have ever seen for a North Quincy team.

"I wish I could have gone on, but how can anyone be disappointed by the level this team has reached."

North Quincy committed two costly errors in the loss to Needham. It dominated most of the first half but was unable to convert on several scoring chances.

The Red Raiders scored on an unassisted goal by senior midfielder Brian Deshler in the second half. Needham, however, re-established its two-goal lead by scoring with 10 minutes left in the game.

Needham went on to defeat New Bedford and previously undefeated Weymouth to win the title.

In the first round of the tournament, North Quincy faced OCL champion Bridgewater-Raynham for the third time this season and pulled out a 1-0 victory.

"We had beaten them twice this year," Dano said. "But we were wondering how likely beating a strong team three consecutive times would be. We knew we could do it based on experience, but the odds had to be against us."

Junior Ryan Graeber picked up his seventh shut out in his first year as a varsity goalkeeper.

In the three games, the North Quincy defense, consisting of senior Bill Miller and juniors Shawn Jafarzadeh, Tim Lombard, Mike Petrucelli and midfielder Rick Loughmiller, allowed only a single goal to B-R.

Loughmiller had the formidable task of covering the league scoring champ for three games and he held him scoreless.

North Quincy had three golden chances in the first few minutes of the contest but was unable to register a goal. B-R took over the first half but did not create many scoring chances, with Graeber making a spectacular kick save sliding to his left on its best chance.

The brunt of B-R's pressure came during the early stages of the second half with B-R forwards hitting both the goal post and crossbar. Regulation ended in a scoreless tie.

The first sudden overtime was back and forth with North Quincy taking over play late but unable to end the game.

In the second overtime, sophomore midfielder David Rochon gained possession of the ball just outside the B-R penalty area, and chipped a pass to senior striker Graham McShane. With two defenders on him, McShane settled the ball and rolled it past the B-R goalkeeper.

At the team's annual awards banquet Nov. 10, McShane (10 goals, 6 assists) and Rochon (14 goals, 6 assists) were selected as first team all-stars and Jafarzadeh made the second team.

The OCL Sportsmanship Award was given to Miller.

Rochon also won the team MVP award and Graeber won the team most improved player award.

Captains for the 2000 season will be Jafarzadeh and Petrucelli.

Raiders Shine At All-State Cross-Country Championship

All three North Quincy High School harriers turned in outstanding performances at the Allstate championships Saturday at Mt. Northfield Recreation Complex.

Jeff Bartoloni finished 16th out of 200 on the 5K course, even taking a brief lead 500 yards into the race. The first 1,000 yards of the course went straight up, which had mixed results for some of the field.

"Jeff planned an aggressive race and did well," said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "And he's a junior so watch out next year."

For the girls, Lynda Wilson finished 15th, receiving a medal and beating nemesis Michelle Palmer of Plymouth South, the league's MVP. She finished behind Barnstable's Amy Lyon who led her team to the Division I state title.

Natalie Caron finished 25th in what was her finest race of the season.

"We've always done well at this site over the years," Hennessy said. "This was real cross country, and Wilson and Caron always do well under adverse conditions. This was Lynda's fourth year making it to Allstate and has improved every year. She runs her best in the biggest races. That marks a champion."

North Quincy will be participating in Saturday's Footlocker Northeast Regional at Van Cortland Park in New York City.

At the recent Eastern Mass. championships the girls' team finished sixth with 197 points. Last year they finished second after an undefeated season. But this year they couldn't overcome illness and injury and finished at 7-2.

The top 5 teams advanced with Cambridge (GBL champs), Barnstable (OCL champs), Newton North (Baystate champs), Brookline (Baystate runner-ups) and Lexington (Middlesex champs) all making the cut with a combined record of 49-1.

"With the exception of Newton, all the teams that qualified had an influx of two to three super-talented kids new to its programs," Hennessy said. "That's unusual. But we did beat Falmouth for the first time this fall."

North Quincy avenged three-point duel meet and two-point league meet losses to the Clippers.

"I said in September that keeping healthy was the key to our success," Hennessy said. "But a couple of kids struggled all season with injuries and we don't have the depth to overcome that."

Wilson (14th, 19:57), Caron (20th, 20:22), Linda Nguyen (27th, 20:34) and Sarah Houghton (34th, 20:53) were all in the top 50.

On the boys' side, Bartoloni grabbed an early lead and challenged top Mass. harrier Said Ahmed of Boston English. The two runners along with eventual winner Brian Getchell of BC High hooked up in a barn-burner, running three abreast up Bear Cage Hill 1 1/2 miles into the course.

Bartoloni refused to break off the challenge while Ahmed dropped out at the two-mile mark. Somerville's Josh Barchard overtook Bartoloni over the final 800, but Bartoloni finished third (16:01).

John Fidalgo (18:04), Frank Alibrandi (18:45) and Steve Barkowski (19:01) placed in the top 200. North Quincy was without the services off Brian Breslin who was hampered by a leg injury.

Steve Rochon Soccer All-Star

Senior striker Steven Rochon of the North Quincy High School boys' soccer team was selected to the EMass All-star team for the second consecutive year by the Eastern Mass. Soccer Coaches Association.

Rochon led the team in scoring with 14 goals and six assists. He also led the team is scoring last year with 17 goals and one assist.

He finished third among Old Colony League scoring leaders and his total of 31 career goals makes him the highest scoring player at North Quincy in the last 15 years.

Rochon was also named an Old Colony League All-star and voted Most Valuable Player by his teammates.

Keeping Three Preventable Diseases At Bay

(NAPS)—Measles, mumps and rubella, once very common infectious diseases, have all but faded from the public's memory. Routine use of the vaccine known as M-M-R°II to prevent all three, and the implementation of a second-dose policy, have virtually eliminated these diseases in the U.S.

However, with Americans traveling farther and more frequently, and many more visitors and immigrants passing through our country every year, the opportunity of being exposed to measles, mumps and rubella is no longer limited by local or national boundaries.

Dr. Samuel Katz, Professor emeritus of Pediatrics at Duke University states, "In this day and age, the phrase 'it's a small world' rings more true than ever, and outbreaks are only a plane ride away. In fact, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reported that in 1997, 53 percent of the 138 measles cases in the United States originated from outside the country."

In fact, in Texas, the number of rubella cases this year are seven times greater than in 1998 due to the importation of the disease by people visiting Mexico, where an epidemic has taken place.

Since its introduction nearly 30 years ago, M-M-R°II has been responsible for a greater than 99 percent decline in the incidence of measles, mumps and rubella in the U.S. However, many countries do not have the same vaccination coverage that is available here, resulting in a large population of susceptible people who could contract and spread the diseases.

If people who have not been vaccinated, or who have not been given the important second dose of M-M-R°II come in contact with any of the diseases, the risk of becoming infected is high. Although most cases of measles, mumps and rubella are not life-threatening, serious complications are associated with these diseases, including miscarriages, pneumonia, encephalitis, stillbirths and birth defects in babies of women exposed to rubella during pregnancy.

It is the goal of public health officials that everyone, no matter what age, receive a total of two doses of M-M-R°II.

In 1989, the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) of the CDC recommended a second-dose program for M-M-R°II. The guidelines established by the ACIP recommend vaccinating infants with the first dose of M-M-R°II at 12 to 15 months of age, followed by a second dose at four to six years of age.

It is the goal of public health officials to have everyone, no matter what age, receive a total of two doses of M-M-R°II. This would help to ensure the total elimination of indigenous measles, mumps and rubella in the United States in the not-too-distant future.

The effectiveness of this policy has been remarkable. Last year saw the lowest incidence of measles and mumps since M-M-R°II was introduced in the United States, while rubella rates were at a near record low. These figures support the fact that a second dose of M-M-R°II, as part of a complete immunization schedule, is critical to maintaining good health and protecting our families and communities.

The most common side effects associated with M-M-R°II are: stinging and redness at the injection site, malaise, sore throat, coughing and slight fever. Occasionally, high fevers, nausea or vomiting may occur.

For more information about vaccinations and M-M-R°II, please see your doctor.

Nutrition Basics Make For Healthier Babies

(NAPS)—Mothers and mothers-to-be can help their babies develop properly if they understand the basics of infant nutrition.

However, according to a national survey conducted by The Institute of Pediatric Nutrition, more than 95 percent of the 300 women surveyed were unable to correctly identify appropriate feeding choices in five basic areas—cow-milk introduction, fruit juice use, breastfeeding milk concerns, allergic reactions during infancy and iron-fortified formulas.

The Institute expressed concern that unfamiliarity with these nutritional basics may result in feeding decisions that put some babies at risk. Improper infant nutrition can affect growth, organ development and maturation of the nervous system and brain.

"If parents make the wrong nutritional decision, their baby may not grow and develop at a healthy rate," says Susan Baker, MD, Institute chairwoman.

Dr. Baker explains that the issues targeted by the survey are important because:

- Cow's milk is low in nutrients needed for development and should not be introduced during the first year.
- Fruit juice should never be given to infants under six months because it does not supply the nutrients needed to support the rapid growth of infancy. Juice can also spoil the baby's appetite for either breastmilk or iron-fortified formula, which do supply those nutrients.
- Breastfeeding offers the best nutrition for a baby and should not be terminated prematurely. Whenever possible, The Institute recommends exclusive breastfeeding for the first four to six months, and then breastfeeding and solids throughout the rest of the first year. A healthcare professional can usually suggest ways to continue breastfeeding while monitoring growth and development, even when there is a concern about a low milk supply.
- Low-iron formulas should not be used because the routine use of low-iron formulas can lead to iron deficiency anemia and put the baby at risk for impaired brain development. Low-iron formulas do not cause less fussiness and constipation.
- Confusion about what may cause an infant to spit up can result in premature discontinuation of breastfeeding and unnecessary formula switches. Milk allergy is not a common cause of frequent spitting up in infancy.

Parents can receive free information on pediatric nutrition by phoning The Institute's toll-free number 1-800-721-5BABY or 1-800-721-5222.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Will a hearing aid correct my loss right away?

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

No! You will notice an immediate difference in volume and some sounds will be clearer but it takes time to re-learn how to hear with a hearing aid. Your maximum potential may not be reached for a full year. Hearing is a learned process, the brain needs to store information received from the ear . When you first get a hearing aid, it is foreign to the brain. The brain wants to hear and will learn to the best of its ability, if you give it enough practice. Try to be patient, practice , and keep in touch with your Hearing Instrument Specialist for adjustments and fine tuning. Don't wait too long to get help. The longer you wait, the more difficult it is for the brain to re-learn how to hear again. This is a major reason why a hearing aid can end up in a desk drawer instead of an ear. There are other reasons, most of which can be overcome if your Specialist is dedicated to your success! If you carefully select your Specialist, he or she will carefully select your hearing instrument.

Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Thinking and thanking are two words that belong together... Think about this! If you think enough about what you have, instead of complaining about what you don't have; if you think enough about the good that has happened to you, instead of feeling sorry for yourself about all the 'bad luck' you have had, you will thank God for His goodness and mercy.

Couldn't it be said that it's not so much what happens to us, but how we react and respond? The trouble is that most of us don't do enough positive thinking... We moan and groan about the bad things and take the good things for granted... We complain that the cup is half empty, instead of thanking God that it is half full...

Years ago there was a popular ballad entitled: "Aren't You Glad You're You?" It went something like this: "Every time you're near a rose, aren't you glad you've got a nose... When the meadow lark appears, aren't you glad you've got two ears... And when the dawn is fresh with dew, aren't you glad you're you?"

We think this is a pretty good philosophy... What do you think?

Stephen Beane Manager At Victory Super Market

STEPHEN BEANE

Stephen Beane has been named store manager of the new Victory Super Market, 475 Hancock St., North Quincy.

Beane brings to the North Quincy store, which is undergoing a million-dollar remodeling, more than 16 years of supermarket industry experience. Since 1996, he has managed Victory's Kingston store, which hosts the company's first Market Square food court format. Prior to that, he held various store management positions with Purity Supreme Supermarkets.

A resident of Plymouth, he is a graduate of Cape Cod Community College and holds an associate's degree in retail management.

"We are pleased to have Steve at the helm of Victory's newest store in North Quincy," said Arthur P. (Jay) DiGeronimo, Jr., president of Victory Super Markets. "He not only brings the knowledge and hands-on experience of operating our Market Square format, but understands the importance of personalizing a store to meet the needs of the local community."

The 54,000 square-foot store will employ approximately 240 people. "Victory has added many new full and part-time positions at the North Quincy store," DiGeronimo said. "In fact, quite a few former Shaw's employees have been rehired, and those that we've hired have been brought back for the same wages or better. Plus, Victory has honored the employee's seniority for vacation and other benefits."

Philip Jerome has joined Victory's North Quincy management team as assistant store manager. Jerome brings more than 30 years of supermarket industry experience to Victory. He has held a variety of management positions with several other supermarket companies including store manager, assistant store manager, in-store merchandiser and loss prevention and security manager. Most recently, he was manager of loss prevention for Nature's Heartland Supermarkets.

Victory Super Markets is a third-generation, family-owned and operated business founded in 1923 in Leominister, Mass. In July 1999, the company purchased five stores from Shaw's Supermarkets, including the North Quincy location. By year's end, Victory Super Markets will operate a total of 20 stores in Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire.

Donald Barry Trustee Of Taxpayers Foundation

DONALD BARRY

Citizens Bank Senior Vice President and Counsel Donald J. Barry was re-elected to the Board of Trustees of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation (MTF), a non-profit tax advisory group that monitors the state's capital spending, budgets and tax policy.

Barry will begin his second year-term on the 13-member board of trustees, which meets quarterly.

"I am happy to have this opportunity to help make Massachusetts a more attractive place for commerce, without losing perspective on how tax issues effect people in all of our communities," Barry said. "The Massachusetts economy is booming right now, but we need to make sure that the state makes the right moves to continue business growth and to prepare for any downturns. I'm pleased to have three more years on a board that shapes the way our state government conducts its business."

Barry began his 30-year banking career at Charlestown Savings Bank, where he served in various legal and real estate appraisal capacities. In 1982, he joined New World Bank where he served as senior vice president and legal officer. Barry came to Citizens with the acquisition of New World Bank in 1994.

A graduate of Boston College, Barry earned his law degree from Suffolk University Law School. A Quincy resident, he is a member of the Laboure Center Board of Directors and the Beacon Society of Boston.

The City Council voted Monday night to increase both residential and commercial, industrial, and personal property (CIPP) tax rates from last year and place a much higher percentage of the tax burden on city businesses.

The new residential rate is $15.71, up 47 cents from last year's rate of $15.24.

The new CIPP rate is $35.25, up $2.97 from last year's rate of $32.28.

All rates are per $1000 valuation.

The rate increase comes at a time when the total valuation of property in Quincy is $4,955,967,080, an increase of almost $300 million from last year.

The price of an average home in Quincy increased from last year's $149,000 to $151,900, reported Marion Fantuccio, chairperson of the Board of Assessors. That average homeowner, she said, can expect a 5%, or $115, increase in his or her taxes, from last year's $2,271 to $2,386.

Councillor Dan Raymondi proposed an amendment to Mayor Sheets' recommended property tax classification, increasing it from 169%, which has been the classification since 1992, to the legal maximum of 175%. The amendment passed 4-3, with Councillors McCauley, Harold, and McDermott voting against. Councillors then voted 7-0 in favor of the tax plan itself.

Classification, whereby the proportion of CIPP value is multiplied by a percentage, is a means of shifting the tax burden from residential to commercial property.

Under Mayor Sheets' unamended plan, the residential rate would have been $16.07 and the CIPP rate would have been $34.04, resulting in a $170 tax increase for the average homeowner.

Fantuccio spoke several times during the meeting, answering questions from councillors and presenting a booklet explaining the mayor's recommended tax rates based on the 169% classification.

According to Fantuccio, the tax burden without any classification breaks down as a 77.3251% residential burden and a 22.6749% CIIP burden. The 175% classification shifts those numbers to a 60.3189% residential burden and a 39.6811% CIPP burden.

The total tax levy for Fiscal Year 2000 is $99,836,360.

Fantuccio said there are exactly 13,568 single family

Gorman: 'Nightmare Of Nightmares'

Quincy Firefighters In Worcester To Pay Tribute To 6 Killed

A large Quincy Fire Department contingent is in Worcester today (Thursday) to pay tribute to the six firefighters killed in the tragic warehouse blaze last Friday.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said Tuesday that more than 100 Quincy firefighters will join Worcester firefighters and those from other cities and states at an 11 a.m. memorial service at the Worcester Centrum Centre.

In addition, Quincy sent its Engine One with a four-man crew to help cover the Worcester fire stations to allow all Worcester firefighters to attend the service for their fallen comrades.

Gorman said Quincy is part of a Metro Fire Mutual Aid task force sending equipment to Worcester to cover the stations during the service. The other communities are Braintree, Weymouth, Brookline, Boston and Dedham.

Meanwhile, Gorman and other fire chiefs are taking turns heading the command post at the gutted five-story Worcester Cold Storage warehouse while the painful search for the bodies of five of the victims goes on under collapsed floors and piled debris. One body had been recovered as of Tuesday.

"One of the worst nightmares for a fire chief," said Gorman, "is to lose a firefighter. "Losing six is the nightmare of nightmares."

Two of the firefighters rushed into the burning warehouse on reports that homeless people might be

Helping Those In Need

49 Community Leaders To Man Downtown Salvation Army Kettle

Forty nine community leaders are teaming up for the third year to ring the bell in downtown Quincy to help the Salvation Army help those in need this holiday season.

Mayor James Sheets has proclaimed December "Salvation Army Month In Quincy" and will be among those along with Congressman William Delahunt volunteering to man a "Celebrity Kettle" beginning tomorrow (Friday).

The kettle will again be in front of Ryder's Curtain and Drapery Store, 1489 Hancock St., tomorrow and Thursday, Dec. 16 and Friday, Dec. 17.

Money raised will go directly to the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, 6 Baxter St. to aid local families.

There is a shortage of bellringers again this year due in large part to the low unemployment rate.

Mural's Fate Is Now In Zoning Board's Hands

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday, voted to send a letter to the Zoning Board of Appeals regarding the wording of the mural at the 11th Chapter Saloon, 536 Washington St., and voted to have the police monitor its parking.

After much discussion between Attys. Louis Cassis, representing owner Steven Barrett, and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi, the board was unable to make a decision on the mural issue.

Cassis apologized to the board on behalf of Barrett, stating that he didn't know he needed a special permit to erect the mural. According to board members, a new by-law was passed about two years ago about the need for a special permit.

Cassis, who said he thought Barrett was "treated differently" from other owners of liquor establishments praised the renovation of the building (former Point Pub) saying it "looks terrific" and that the work of art is beautiful. He called it a "net plus for the corner."

The mural advertises Guinness Beer and it was alleged it meant the drinking of the beer would give a person more strength. However, Cassis said it was supposed to mean the beer is strong and robust and the person in the mural a strong person

Teachers of St. Joseph's School thought the message was not a good one for students to see.

Discussion went back and forth as to whose jurisdiction the sign is under, the license board or the zoning board.

Building inspector Walter White said he thought the zoning board of appeals would be the persons responsible for the permit.

James Timmons, assistant city solicitor said he was unsure as to who was responsible for the mural because of the content of the sign..

Finally, Maralin Manning, executive secretary to the Quincy Business and Professional Association, who had been listening to the pros and cons of the legality of the sign, got up to the podium and said she agreed with White and said the Zoning Board could say the "entire mural is illegal."

Cassis said Barrett would abide by any decision the zoning board will make and if need be they would remove the message

The board voted 4-0 with White voting "present"..

The Zoning Board of Appeals meets Dec. 14 to discuss the mural.

On the subject of parking, the board voted to have the police monitor the parking near St. Joseph's Church. According to Rev. Daniel Graham said the patrons of 11th Chapter Saloon sometime park on the Shaw Street side.

Cassis suggested a chain be erected at 11 p.m. at night so patrons wouldn't be able to park. Or a towing sign placed on the property.

Cassis said that Barrett "has tried everything" to comply with the wishes of the neighbors and posted a sign on his door that states "no parking in the church parking lot."

The testimony by a neighbor who said patrons were loud at 1:45 a.m. lost its credibility according to Cassis because there was no record from the police department.

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, liquor inspector told the board that on recent visits to Chapter 11, he said the place is one of the "prettiest bars in the city" and that the bartender attended the TIPS class and "no one was intoxicated."

Addressing the issue of illegally parked cars, Perchard said there was a car parked on the sidewalk and was quickly removed.

Perchard was asked if manager Barrett was always on the premises. He said it was "not unusual for mangers not to be there 18 hours a day" as long as they leave someone responsible.

Police Chief Thomas Frane questioned the name of the bar--it is the "Usual Place" or Chapter 11.Saloon in which Cassis, after conferring with Barrett answered, 11th Chapter Saloon.

LEARNING THE ROPES OF JUMPING

Motorists should always carry a set of quality jumper cables to help them avoid being stranded by a dead battery. After enlisting another vehicle's assistance to help with a jumpstart, turn off all electrical accessories in both vehicles and both vehicles' ignitions. Connect one end of the red (positive) cable to the dead battery's positive terminal and the other end of the cable to the positive terminal of the live battery. Attach one of the clips on the black (negative) cable to the negative terminal on the live vehicle's battery and securely attach the remaining negative clip to an unpainted metal part on the dead vehicle's engine chassis. Start the live vehicle before the one with the dead battery.

Cold weather is here and it does affect your battery's performance. For your safety it's important to learn how to jump a battery properly. Council Resolution Fails But:

Harold Raises Questions On USS Salem Overhaul And Shipyard Ownership

By CRAIG SALTERS

Monday night's city council meeting saw Councillor Paul Harold's resolution to secure an appraisal for the Fore River Shipyard soundly defeated 6-2, but not before Harold raised much larger questions concerning Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) and its owner, Sotiris Emmanouil.

Harold's questions were: Who owns the Fore River Shipyard? Who runs the Fore River Shipyard? And why did the USS Salem leave Tuesday for a $2 million overhaul at a South Boston dry-dock when the Fore River Shipyard's dry-dock is supposedly in operation?

Harold presented the council articles from The Gulf News and The Middle Eastern Economic Digest, as well as a report from Lloyds of London. The reports state that Emmanouil is currently the general manager of the Hellenic Shipyards in Greece and that his company, MHI, is 50% owned by the Abu-Dhabi based Al Manhal International Group (Amig) from the United Arab Emirates.

Harold also pointed to a recent newspaper article dated Sept. 23 of this year in which Emmanouil claimed four Greek destroyers could be rebuilt "that week" if need be. Why then, Harold asked, did the USS Salem have to travel to a South Boston dry-dock for its $2 million overhaul?

Harold's actual resolution called for the board of assessors "to immediately secure an appraisal of the Fore River Shipyard so that a valuation can be assigned to the property for an effective date of January 1, 2000."

Without a valuation by the first of the year, Harold argued, next year's council would be without remedy in efforts to rescind the company's five-year no-tax agreement, which amount to $2 million annually. MHI, Harold said, does not deserve the tax breaks because it promised 588 jobs by Dec. 31, 1999 yet has only 23 employees.

Councillor Frank McCauley was Harold's lone supporter on the resolution. "Mayor Sheets is the eternal optimist, but thing's don't seem to be getting better (at the shipyard)," McCauley said. "Why isn't he (Emmanouil) putting in 80 or 90 hours here instead of gallivanting in Greece?"

Councillor Dan Raymondi was the most ardent supporter of the current shipyard proposal, saying it was still the best and last hope for the city. Raymondi argued that the shipyard and the surrounding streets were already benefiting from state and federally funded renovations totaling $56 million, and that the shipyard was vital to maintaining Quincy's history of high-paying, blue-collar jobs.

He also pointed out that the shipyard property has been idle and, therefore, tax-free for well over a decade.

"Quincy has the most to gain and the least to lose," Raymondi said, calling the deal a good marriage of private, city, state, and federal entities.

And Raymondi had a question of his own to ask the council:

"We (the city) ought not to be the ones to cut and run from this project," Raymondi said. "If Quincy pulls out, what would be the reaction of the state and federal government?"

Council Wants City High On Shipyard Payback

The City Council Monday voted 8-0 in favor of a resolution seeking to place Quincy higher on Massachusetts Heavy Industries' (MHI) list of credit priorities.

(MHI), owners of the troubled Fore River Shipyard, recently unveiled a $145 million re-financing plan which promises immediate payoff to many of its creditors but not Quincy.

The resolution, sponsored by Councillor Frank McCauley, requires Mayor Sheets to demand Quincy's loan to MHI be paid back.

"They seem to be able to pay off everybody and their brother except Quincy," McCauley said.

McCauley said that the city did not actually loan funds to MHI directly but secured roughly $10 million through Community Block Development Grants.

McCauley noted that MHI has missed payments to the city in the past and wondered if MHI's new refinancing plan, which lacks key details, was a gimmick on the part of the shipbuilder.

New City Ordinance

Frequent Tenant Police Calls Will Cost Landlords

The City Council Monday night voted 7-1 to pass an ordinance penalizing negligent property owners whose tenants overburden police with frequent telephone calls.

The ordinance, originally proposed in early October by Councillor Dan Raymondi at the suggestion of Quincy's new Community Policing Unit, fines negligent property owners the cost of a police detail which would be then assigned to monitor the property.

Raymondi said that the proposal had been modified somewhat with the input of the Public Safety committee and legal advisors and that the concerns of property owners had been heard. Under the plan, Chief of Police Thomas Frane would first notify property owners of a possible police detail and said landowners would then be allowed to appeal the decision. If the property owners were found diligent, there would be no fine and no police detail.

Delahunt Offers New Student Financial Aid Guides

Now that the Congress has completed action on federal educational appropriations for the coming year, Congressman William Delahunt is making available the latest information on assistance to pay for higher education.

"Looking ahead to college is exciting, but preparing to pay for it is a real challenge for most families," Delahunt said. "With the cost of further study still soaring, it can be especially critical to investigate every possible option."

Delahunt is offering two key packages relating to student aid, both free of charge: "Funding Your Education; a handbook on financial assistance published by the U.S. Department of Education; and "Free Application for Federal Student Aid," which can be submitted as early as Jan. 1.

To obtain copies, local residents may call Delahunt's office, toll-free at 1-800-794-9911.

The funding levels of federal aid programs were set for next academic year in an omnibus budget package approved before the House adjourned recently. Overall, the legislation includes $9.4 billion for student financial aid programs -- $87 million more than last year's funding level.

For the academic year 2000-2001, the measure appropriates $7.7 billion for the Pell Grant program. It also increases the maximum Pell Grant award by $175 to $3,300. The bill provides $621 million for Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, a $2 million increase over FY 1999.

For the Perkins Loan program, the package contains $130 million, maintaining the previous year's appropriation. In addition, it earmarks $934 million -- a $64 million increase -- for work study projects.

How Much Spring For Harold?

The way some observers see it, Paul Harold is two thirds of the way to the mayor's office.

The two thirds: topping the city council at-large race again this year and putting together the votes for the city council presidency.

HAROLD

Which leaves one third--but the hardest third: actually winning the mayor's office.

Leading the council at-large race this year for the third straight time puts Harold in a strong position for raising the estimated needed $100,000 (or more) for a mayoral run in 2001.

It means he's seen as a proven vote-getter with a good shot at winning that big office on the third floor at City Hall. And that's a big convincer when it comes to building a campaign warchest.

As council president the next two years, he will have the opportunity for extra exposure in the political spotlight.

Some think the council presidency is the real key. The springboard to the mayor's office they call it.

But, just how much spring is there in that springboard? Apparently not as much as you might think.

Councillor and former Mayor Francis McCauley made that discovery while researching for the book "A Political History of Quincy" he is writing as part of the city's new millennium celebration.

McCAULEY

"There have been 28 mayors and 48 city council presidents since Quincy became a city," he says. "Of the 48 council presidents only 12 became mayor."

Which means more of our mayors -- 16 of them -- never were council presidents.

And, says McCauley, of the 12 who did become mayor, only four of them went directly from the presidency to the mayor's office. The others made it at varying times after being council president.

The four who stepped directly into the mayor's office were:

Henry Fairbanks (1891), Charles Bryant (1901), Joseph Whiton (1917) and Arthur Tobin (1978). Whiton was the first two-year term mayor. Prior to him, mayoral terms were one year.

The other eight council presidents who became mayor included seven under Plan A and one under Plan E.

The seven Plan A: James Thompson (1904), Charles Ross (1932), Thomas Burgin (1935), Amelio Della Chiesa (1957), James McIntyre (1965), Joseph LaRaia (1975) and James Sheets (1989).

David McIntosh was mayor in 1952-53 under Plan E when a city manager was the chief executive and the mayor actually a city councillor like a council president today.

Ross, who also ran in 1942, had the distinction of being elected to the only three-year term in the city's history.

The 16 mayors who were never council presidents:

Charles Porter, a Civil War veteran and Quincy's first mayor; William Hodges, Charles Francis Adams, direct descendant of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams who later became Secretary of the Navy under President Herbert Hoover; Russell Sears, Quincy's youngest mayor, elected at age 27; Harrison Keith, John Hall, William Shea, Eugene Stone.

John Miller, Quincy's only mayor to die in office; Chester Campbell, Gustave Bates, William Bradford, Perley Barbour, Thomas McGrath, Walter Hannon and Frank McCauley.

Will Harold be the fifth council president to directly make it to the mayor's office? Stay tuned for the next century.

McCauley is making rapid progress on his book and is up to this year's city election results.

The book will contain profiles on the mayors, and other elected officials.

It will cover from 1889 when Quincy began operating as a city to Mayor Sheets' historic sixth term inaugural address Jan. 3, 2000.

"It should be out by late spring or early in the summer," McCauley says.

A Quincy political historian, he's doing the book free as "a labor of love."

BRUCE AYERS, who will be leaving the City Council at the end of the year, will be honored at a holiday reception Wednesday, Dec. 15, 6 to 9 p.m. at Amelia's Restaurant at Marina Bay.

AYERS

Mayor James Sheets and members of the City Council are hosting the event as a "thank you" to Ayers for his service to the community, the past eight years as Ward 6 councillor.

Parking Cars On Sidewalks A Bad Habit

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently, I came across a news story in The Quincy Sun concerning a City Council debate on the need to increase DPW repair crews for emergency sidewalk work.

Kudos to Councillor Dan Raymondi for advocating this. However, I wonder what work these DPW repair crews could actually do when so many Quincy-ites appear to believe sidewalks are for their cars. Recently, while traveling along Rawson Rd. I noticed the preponderance of cars up on the sidewalk especially between Vassel St. and Billings Rd.

The road crew from DPW would need a convoy of tow trucks before beginning anything. Now, I'm not advocating a massive ticketing of this area nor am I really singling it out because this bad habit of taking cars off the street is so prevalent and growing in many other areas. I see it on Atlantic St. I see it on Faxon Rd. I see it in many other streets too. It is a bad habit and a practice that adversely affects walkers, especially the disabled, the elderly and our children. Why should people be forced into the streets because someone wants their car up on a sidewalk?

The roads are narrow and our neighborhoods crowded. I can understand the rationale behind this practice but that doesn't justify it, does it? People ought to care about the inconvenience they are causing to others. This me, me, me attitude drags down the quality of life in our neighborhoods.

I don't want the police towing or fining anyone. I want common sense and courtesy to set in, nothing more but nothing less.

I've been a police officer with the Metro Boston DMH Police since 1985. We have been practicing the concept of community policing long before it became so popular. Our goal has always been to stop small problems from growing into bigger problems. It is called the "Broken Window" theory. If you do nothing, things only get worse. You don't wait for a cancer to metastasize. You deal with it right away.

While I'm at it, a big concern in the Atlantic neighborhood appears to be folks who have moved their cars off the sidewalks and onto their front lawns. Two wrongs don't make a right, do they folks? Keeping cars next to the curb used to be the natural thing to do. What changed in recent years?

Remember, sidewalks belong to all the people and not just the folks behind the curtains you just passed as you avoided a parked car blocking your way ahead.

Sal J. Giarratani,
secretary
Atlantic Neighborhood
Assn.

Dec. 9 - 15
1960
39 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Ernest Montilio, owner of Montilio's Bakery on Chestnut St., was selected by President Kennedy's inaugural committee to bake the cake for the inaugural ball.

Montilio said that he would bake the cake in Quincy and decorate it in Washington, with a team of three bakers and decorators. He said he would leave on the Monday before the ball for Washington to have sufficient time for the decorating of a cake large enough for the 10,000 people who would be in attendance at the ball. It would cost an estimated $10,000.

The first group to view the six panels depicting angels were students from the Atherton Hough School. Before the end of the month, Remick's had arranged for all 1,500 first graders here to be bused downtown to see the display.

SNOW STORM PARALYZES THE CITY

A near blizzard, with winds reaching 50 mph, hit the city paralyzing transportation by bus and automobile. Thirty-five Eastern Mass. buses were "stuck" with 400-500 cars towed from all points in the city.

New England Telephone lines were overloaded and customers were urged to only use their phones for emergencies. Meanwhile, DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert said that the $10,700 in snow fighting equipment had not yet been delivered and was unavailable to help dig the city out from the impact of the worst storm in recent history.

Quincy Point Association Focuses On Bridge Project

The Quincy Point Business & Professional Association held its first organizational meeting ever last Wednesday night at St. Joseph's School, 556 Washington St.

The meeting's focus was a presentation from MassHighways and Middlesex Construction on the Fore River Bridge Repair Project, for which preliminary site work has already begun.

Paul Maloy, resident engineer for MassHighways, Dan Casaletto, district supervisor for MassHighways, and Jeff Roig of Middlesex Construction provided an update on the $78 million bridge repair project.

The project , for which the state appropriated funding this summer, calls for the drawbridge deck of the bridge to be repaired and for the installation of a completely new electrical system.

The project timetable, they said, would be between three and five years, with three years being very optimistic and five years considered an average. The plan is to construct a temporary four lane bridge roughly equal in size to the original and then completely revamp the existing bridge.

The temporary bridge is projected to open in 2001 and bridge repair is projected to be finished in 2004. If it is determined that the condition of the existing bridge is beyond repair, then new funding would need to be secured in order to replace the bridge and the projected timetable would no longer apply.

Repair of the existing bridge is not expected to affect traffic on the temporary bridge.

After the presentation Michael Rie, economic development coordinator for Quincy 2000, answered questions on the project as well as on street and rotary improvements made possible by Quincy Point's CARD designation.

"It was a good turnout," said Tom O'Brien, president of QPBPA and owner of Tom O'Brien Hyundai. "This organization is in its infancy stage but we have over 60 businesses signed up. Right now our executive committee's goal is to build a strong and active membership base, but I'd like to thank the businesses of Quincy Point for their support. Great things are happening here."

The QPBPA's executive committee consists of: Thomas O'Brien, Tom O'Brien Hyundai, president; William Walker, Harbor Express, vice president; Peter Collins, South Shore Savings Bank, treasurer; and Helen Garvey, Rockland Trust, clerk.

QPBPA's next organizational meeting is scheduled for March 2 at 8:15 in the St. Joseph's School gymnasium.

Bereavement Seminar Offers Help, Hope For The Holidays

By CRAIG SALTERS

Grieving for lost loved ones is never easy, but holidays put a sharper point on the pain.

"Coping With The Holidays: Bereavement Support Ideas," a free seminar offered at Quincy Medical Center Wednesday, Dec. 15 at 6:30 p.m. in the conference room on A2, seeks to ease the holiday suffering of those dealing with death, or at least put it in its proper perspective.

The seminar will be run by Reverend Esther Bowen-Starkey, director of pastoral care and patient advocate at QMC.

First and foremost, Rev. Bowen-Starkey wants it understood that the "crazy" feelings those in mourning sometimes feel aren't crazy at all.

"People who've lost a loved one can expect to feel tired, confused, distracted, and those feelings are even more pronounced during the holidays," Bowen-Starkey said. "It's painful, and you get tired in mind, body, and spirit, but so many people are relieved just to find out that's normal."

Rev. Bowen-Starkey will use nine talking points during the seminar to discuss what is a most sensitive issue, but the points weave a common theme: Make active, thoughtful choices, at your own pace and when you can, to reconnect yourself to a world that may seem distant or meaningless.

"There is tremendous individuality in the experience of grief," said Bowen-Starkey. "But, at some point, although it may seem you live in the land of the dead, you need to be aware or connected to the land of the living."

Rev. ESTHER STARKEY

Rev. Bowen-Starkey offers these suggestions to help cope with grief during the holidays:

• Plan Ahead: "So many people get caught thinking they're going to be OK, but you can't just wing it. Take some time to think what traditions of the past should be kept and which ones should change. Think about where you want to spend the holidays, who will make you feel the most comfortable, whether you'll need a room to be alone, who you want to help you. You can't get what you need unless you know what you need."

• Acknowledgment: "Give space to your feelings, expect that it will be painful and difficult. You can't have a stoic attitude all the time or you risk distancing yourself from the whole holiday experience."

• Make Decisions Wherever Possible: "I tell people that they had no control over their loved one's death and, in order to find some meaning, they should take charge of anything they can. People want to help but don't let others take control. Say 'No dinner at my house this year,' whatever. It's a question of empowerment."

• Accept Support From Others: "There's a distinct difference between accepting support and letting others take control. Choose one or two close people to ask for help, help that you would not normally need. Consider having dinner at a friend's house as an instrument of healing. So many people in grief are afraid of imposing but it's your turn to accept help from others. They wouldn't ask you 10 times if they didn't want you."

• Be A Good Friend To Yourself: "You're going to feel tired in mind, body, and soul, and life may seem incongruent, with all the happy holiday songs while you may feel unsure or spiritually bereft. If you're religious, now is a time to connect with your religious centers and seek comfort. If not, tune in to what is soothing and comforting, find some quiet time. Slow down."

• Remember Your Departed Loved One: "Create, intentionally, an acknowledgment of your loved one. Use family rituals, like the blessing over a meal, to remember. Buy a gift, anonymously or not, that your loved one would have enjoyed and give it to someone else who might appreciate it. Tangible things can be so important."

• Reflect On The Positive: "It may be difficult for people who are grieving to count their blessings, but blessings exist. It may be something as simple as breathing, our connection to life. Some people have said sunlight, friends, plants, animals, music, or art. Others have said food, shelter, whatever measure of health they possess. It's important to focus on the land of the living."

• Do Something For Someone Else: "Doing something for someone else really, truly gives satisfaction and it's so easy to do during the holidays. It's part of reaching out, reconnecting."

• Nurture Hope: "This does not minimize a person's grief, but it does say that what you're worrying about and feeling negative about today is not the final word. There is a tomorrow, and it will come. There is hope."

Rev. Bowen-Starkey, who came to QMC in October of 1998 and who also runs an eight-week, eight person bereavement support group at a cost of $40, is a 1978 graduate of Eastern Nazarene College. She later received a master's degree in pastoral counseling from ENC and a master of divinity degree from Andover-Newton Theological School. A resident of Quincy for over two decades, she is the former associate pastor of family care at Quincy Bethel Church of the Nazarene.

All are welcome to the Dec. 15 seminar.

Col. Ronald Rand Promoted To Air Force Brigadier General

President Clinton has nominated Col. Ronald T. Rand for the grade of Brigadier General USAF, announces Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen.

Brig. Gen. (Select) Rand was raised in the Quincy Point neighborhood where his parents, Dorothy and Allen of Edison Pk., still live. Rand is the sixth of 12 children.

Currently Rand is director of public affairs, Secretary of the Air Force Office of Public Affairs, the Pentagon, Washington, D.C.

In addition to advising and supporting the secretary and chief of staff of the Air Force, he is responsible for creating and executing strategies to build informed public support for the Air force.

Rand provides guidance and policy for internal information, community and media relations, and security review programs during peacetime and war, and resources and readiness oversight for 2,400 bandsmen, broadcasters and public affairs professionals.

"Naturally we're all very proud," Rand's mother Dorothy said of her son's promotion. "We're proud of all our children."

Col. RONALD T. RAND

Mrs. Rand said that as many family members as possible were heading down to Washington D.C. for a celebration sometime after the new year.

Growing up in Quincy Rand attended Daniel Webster Elementary, Point Junior, and Quincy High Schools. He was a faithful member of the Bethany Congregational Church until his departure for college. He also played basketball in the Quincy Youth League and was a boy scout.

Rand graduated from the U.S. Air Force Academy in 1971. He began his career as a motion picture producer-director, then went on to command audiovisual detachments at Nakhon Phanom and Korat Royal Thai air force bases. After a tour as chief of plans at the Air Force Orientation Group, he completed graduate studies at Boston University. He then served at the Pentagon as spokesman for Air Force space, intelligence, and advanced technology programs, and as the public affairs adviser to the undersecretary of the Air Force.

Since 1987, he has held numerous public affairs director jobs at the wing, numbered air force, and major command level.

Rand is a recipient of the Distinguished Flying Cross and a co-recipient of the US Air Force Academy Jabara Award for Airmanship for action in the Mayaquez incident.

He has also received the Legion of Merit, the Meritorious Service Medal with four oak leaf clusters, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, the Air Force Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, and in 1988 was named Outstanding Public Information Officer by the Aviation and Space Writers Association.

Brig. Gen. (Select) Rand is one of 23 U.S. Air Officers nominated for promotion to brigadier general.

He lives in the Washington D.C. area with wife Bernadetta and daughter Emily.

Helping Those In Need At Christmas

By LINDA K. STICE

For many families no holiday is more shaped by tradition than Christmas.

From one year to the next, we enjoy repeating rituals unique to our families. When the presents are opened, what special meals are served, which church service is attended, where the tree is placed . . . all are based on memories from our own childhood, new customs adopted when families change, and ideas born from our determination to do some things differently.

LINDA STICE

A quick survey of my coworkers found that each of us has strong traditions, but they vary widely. Christmas Eve dinner is antipasto and tortellini soup for one of us, chili for another, and an Italian buffet for a third. In the present-opening category, Christmas morning was a strong first, with the "one present on Christmas Eve" practice coming in second. The children in one family always get new pajamas to wear on Christmas Eve, while two of us always bake birthday cakes to celebrate this day.

While we all make lists of who we need to buy or make presents for, some Quincy families have a Christmas tradition that is worth considering. Their list includes families and individuals that they may never meet. At this time of year, when family, love, peace, and giving are most important, they volunteer their time, "adopt" a family in need, or donate food or money to organizations that need help.

There is no shortage of need in the world.

Fortunately, in Quincy, there are many fine organizations that work every day to address the needs in our community. At this time of year, they can use your help to make sure that the spirit of Christmas leaves no one out. If you can donate time or food or money or toys, please contact the following:

Atlantic Neighborhood Center (Patricia Thorley, 376-1381):

A donation of $25 will allow you to "adopt" a family in need of Christmas. That amount will provide all the ingredients for a Christmas dinner, plus two or three bags of additional groceries to a family from North Quincy, Wollaston, Montclair, or Squantum. The Atlantic Neighborhood Center offers some toys and clothing as well. They accept donations or money, uncooked turkeys, canned goods, desserts, toys (preferably new and unwrapped), and clothing, especially winter coats for adults and children. Used clothing is accepted if it is in good condition. Volunteers are needed Monday, Dec. 20 to assemble dinners and Tuesday, Dec. 21 to deliver the donations to families.

Father Bill's Place (Laurie Boisvert, 770-3314):

On Christmas Day, Father Bill's will host their 10th annual Christmas dinner at Christ Episcopal Church, 12 Quincy Ave. from noon through 3 p.m. The dinner is open to all at no charge. Father Bill's accepts donations of money, uncooked turkeys, squash, potatoes, canned goods, cream cheese, pies, cider, and apple juice. Volunteers are needed Dec. 24 to peel squash and potatoes and on Christmas Day to serve dinners and help clean up.

Germantown Neighborhood Center (Kathy Quigley, 376-1384):

This program provides holiday food baskets for families and individuals in need of the Germantown neighborhood. They accept donations of money, gift certificates from food stores, uncooked turkeys, and canned goods.

Koch Club (Tom Koch, 376-1251):

Since 1952 the Koch Club has provided Christmas food baskets and gifts to families in need all over Quincy, as well as toys for children. They accept donations of money, uncooked turkeys, produce, canned goods, non-perishable foods, new, unwrapped toys, and new clothing.

Pantry Shelf/Interfaith Social Services (Bettyanne Muir Lang, 773-6203):

This agency provides all the fixings for Christmas dinner, toys, and clothing to families in need. They accept donations of money, supermarket vouchers from $5 to $25, uncooked turkeys, produce, canned goods, desserts, new clothing, and new, unwrapped toys. Volunteers are needed to distribute gifts, both at their offices and by making deliveries. Please call to arrange a time to volunteer.

Quincy Crisis Center (Kathi Garrison, 471-7075):

This agency provides Christmas assistance through two programs: the Faith Covenant Meal, a feeding program for the homeless, and Food for Families, a food pantry on wheels. The Faith Covenant Meal will host a special Christmas dinner at 1 p.m. Dec. 23 at United First Parish, the Church of the Presidents, 1306 Hancock St. Volunteers are needed to cook pies, desserts or vegetables and to help serve the meal and clean up.

Food for Families offers Christmas food baskets and gifts for children. Individuals, families, and businesses may sponsor families in need by providing gifts including books, clothing and toys for children and teenagers. They accept donations of canned goods, uncooked turkeys and hams, new clothing or toys and financial support.

Personal care items (socks, underwear, razors, shaving cream, etc.) are also needed for distribution to the homeless. Volunteers are needed to put together the food and gift packages and to assist with deliveries.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

FOOT ODOR

Bromohydrosis, or smelly feet, is a common, annoying foot condition, especially for physically active people. A bacterium is usually the culprit, as the warmth and moisture inside shoes - especially athletic shoes - promote its growth. Eliminating the bacteria is the only way to treat foot odor. Activated-charcoal shoe inserts, foot powders, and other odor fighting products will not get to the source of the problem. Wash feet with antibacterial soap, including between the toes. Dry skin well, using a hair dryer if necessary. Wear absorbent socks and change them frequently. Wear shoes that "breathe," allowing them to air out for at least 24 hours after use. Antiperspirants and tea soaks may help. Finally, benzoyl peroxide 5% gel applications may decrease bacteria.

A thorough understanding of your feet and what they need can go a long way to helping you avoid recurring conditions and prevent further problems in the future. No matter what your foot concerns, from smelly feet to nerve pain, we'll give you complete instructions for follow-up home care so you can get on with the job of problem-free, pain-free daily living. A custom-tailored treatment plan made to fit your individual needs is waiting for you at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy. Please call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. Excessive sweating or smelling of the feet can be systemic, indicating conditions like anemia or an overactive thyroid. Professional attention is necessary.

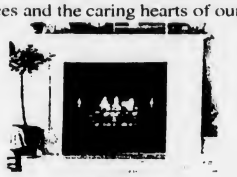
Permit Extension For Southern Artery Property

The city council Monday granted a six-month permit extension for the Southern Artery property owned by Quirk auto dealerships.

The permit had been originally issued to Twist Realty, who later sold the property and assigned the permit rights to Quirk. The old permit expired Tuesday.

Attorney Robert Fleming, speaking on behalf of Quirk, argued that the permit extension gave much needed leverage in the company's Chapter 91 negotiations with the D.E.P. over its new proposal to build at the site, which Fleming called "the Quirk proposal."



The Quirk proposal, he said, used a smaller footprint, created more open space, and had better ocean views than the original Twist permit, but had not yet been approved because of the slow, "cumbersome" nature of D.E.P. decision-making. Fleming said he foresaw no problems with approval of the new, better Quirk proposal, but that the Twist permit was a good tool with which to negotiate.

Several residents, including Arline Goodman and Carolyn Marks, president of the Friends of the Souther Tide Mill, spoke against extension of the permit.

Councillors Raymondi and Kolson voted against the extension.

Flatley Receives Permit For West Quincy Parking Lot

The city council Monday granted a special PUD permit to the Flatley Corporation for a 3.5 acre, 280 car parking lot in West Quincy.

The lot would be part of a larger Flatley development at the 13.6 acre Braintree Hill Office Park.

Flooding and traffic concerns had stalled the granting of the permit but the council's 8-0 vote in favor illustrated that those issues had been resolved.

At Councillor Michael D'Amico's request amendments were added to the PUD permit guaranteeing: that access to the development would be from Rockdale Rd. in Braintree and not from Willard St.; that all construction would be subject to a mutual agreement between the developer and the South Shore Building & Trades Council; and that Flatley would pay $35,000 within 30 days of applying for the building permit to fund traffic improvements in the West Quincy area.

Large Turnout At Squantum Christmas Tree Lighting

The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum's first annual "Lighting of the Tree" ceremony drew roughly 400 people at the Gilbert Memorial Park, corner of Huckins Ave. and East Squantum St.

Mayor James Sheets, his wife Joann, Councillor/Rep. Bruce Ayers, and Thomas Koch, executive director of Park, Cemetery, and Forestry, all attended the ceremony.

The Parks Department strung and lit the tree, which is a 30-foot blue spruce donated by a Merrymount homeowner. It holds approximately 1000 lights.

Marshall LeGrice of Landsdowne St., a resident of Quincy for over 50 years and a longtime advocate for a Christmas tree in the neighborhood, lit the tree and served as the evening's official "Papa Christmas."

"I've finally won," LeGrice said, adding that the ceremony itself was "beautiful" and thanking the mayor for all his efforts.

Seaside Gardener Maureen Spinale was the chairperson and spokeswoman for the event.

Community Leaders To Man Salvation Army Kettle

(Cont'd from page 1)

But despite that low unemployment rate there are still many people in need of help here in Quincy.

"I am delighted and most appreciative to see our community leaders again taking time from their busy schedules to help the Salvation Army, this holiday season," said Major Ed Forster, who with his wife, Major Flo Forster, are the commanding officers of the Quincy Temple Corps.

"The Army would be lost without volunteers. Quincy is fortunate to have such generous people who are willing to give of their time and substance.

"We look forward to another series of successful days in downtown Quincy as our community leaders set the example for others to follow in helping the Salvation Army help people in need.

"Thanks, Quincy, for what you have done for over 100 years for the Army and for what you continue to do."

Forster said he hopes other individuals and groups could volunteer time at the Army's other kettle sites around Quincy and the outlying area. Those who can, are asked to call the Quincy Temple Corps at 617-472-2345.

The 49 community leaders will man the downtown kettle from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. tomorrow, and Thursday Dec. 16 and Friday, Dec. 17 in one hour shifts.

They are asking their friends to stop by and "help fill the kettle" to help the many who are still in need despite the healthy economy.

Business Travel Safety Tips

At The Hotel:

• Never leave luggage unattended.

• Keep all hotel doors and windows locked, and use all door locks.

• Insist that hotel personnel give your assigned room number so others can't hear it.

• Learn the locations of fire exits and public phones in case of emergency.

• Make sure your room has an indoor viewer and a dead bolt lock.

• Keep valuables - jewelry, cash, etc. - in the hotel safe. Better still, leave them at home.

• Ask hotel staff about the safety of the neighborhood and what areas to avoid.

• Before taking a cab, ask the staff about directions and estimated costs.

• Always verify who's at your door. Don't open the door to someone you don't know. If an unexpected visitor claims to be a hotel employee, call the front desk to make sure.

• Don't display room keys in public or leave them on restaurant tables, at the swimming pool, or in other places where they can easily be stolen.

Sure, crime can be random. But at the same time, there's a lot you can do to limit your chances of becoming a victim. Often, simply being aware of the threat of crime - and alert to what you can do to prevent it - will go a long way to making your business trip safe and successful.

New Tax Rates Place Bigger Burden On Business

homes in the city and roughly 23,000 residential properties.

Fantuccio emphasized that the tax bills must go out by Dec. 31 or the city could not legally enforce the Feb. 1 payment deadline, which might cause a cash flow problem.

She added that the Feb. 1 payment, the third quarter payment of a fiscal year, is based on actual figures, not estimates like the first two payments. It is this payment, she said, which triggers the appeal process for abatement. Homeowners have until the Feb. 1 due date to apply for the abatement.

In defense of his amendment, Raymondi said that the new classification would shift $1.2 million of the burden from homeowners and that that was the key issue. "We need to do whatever we can to promote residential home ownership in Quincy," Raymondi said.

Councillor Timothy Cahill was a surprise ally in the Raymondi camp, emphasizing that this new classification was a "one-time deal" meant to offset the enormous money demands placed on the city because of the bailout of the former Quincy Hospital. "In my 12 years on the council I have never approved such an increase," Cahill said. But if there was ever a time, now is the time to do it."

Councillor McCauley was the most vocal in his opposition to the new classification, arguing that it put too much on the backs of business and hinders growth. "Business kicks at 169% (the old classification), but they pay," McCauley said. "I'd hate for this to be a case of killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

Councillor Paul Harold, who along with McCauley and Councillor Pat McDermott voted against the amendment, said that the new classification "sends the wrong message to developers."

The tax plan now goes to Mayor Sheets for his signature and then to the state Department of Revenue for certification.

Previously, the highest the classification has ever been was 174%, in 1991.

SENIOR LIVING

DEBUNKING A MYTH

There is a persistent popular misconception that aging inevitably leads to illness and disability. The fact is, however, that the percentage of disabled people over age 65 has dropped by 15% since 1982. Today, three-fourths of those between the ages of 75 and 84 report no disability whatsoever. Of course, the risk of disease does increase with age, due partly to increases in body weight, blood pressure, blood cholesterol levels and blood-sugar levels, as well as decreases in bone density and immune function. Yet, studies with twins indicate that only about one-third of the loss of physical function with age stems from heredity, while the rest is associated with poor health habits. Regular exercise, in particular, can improve health substantially.

Maintaining your health for a longer time is more likely than it ever used to be, so it pays to make the effort to keep yourself in shape so you can enjoy health and mobility longer. At Marina Place, a senior living residence at Four Seaport Drive, we offer both independent and assisted living. We enjoy a scenic seaside location, with views of Boston and beyond. We offer convenience, a stimulating environment and superb care. Phone: 617-770-3264.

P.S. According to one study, 70-year-old men who had engaged in strength training since middle age were found to be just as strong, on average as 28 year olds who had not.

REAL ESTATE

Kelle Sutliff Joins Flynn & Co. Residential Sales

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., a Quincy-based residential, commercial and auction real estate firm, announces Kelle Sutliff has joined its residential sales team.

KELLE SUTLIFF

Sutliff has extensive background in real estate marketing and sales. A graduate of Western Michigan University, she attained a bachelor of science degree in communications and public relations.

After college, she founded Kelle Marketing in Dearborn, MI, a firm that specialized in pubic relations and special event planning for real estate industry clients. Upon relocating to the northeast, she served as a sales and marketing specialist for the small business marketing group of Blue Cross/Blue Shield, and later became the Director of Marketing for Bunker Hill Group, a Boston-based seminar planning firm.

A resident of Braintree, she is a member of the South Shore Board of Realtors.

"Kelle's marketing experience enables her to actively promote our listings using targeted marketing techniques, presenting the right properties to the right potential buyers," said Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski. "Her sales ability strengthens our residential division and will enable us to continue to grow as a major player in the South Shore residential real estate market."

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. is a full service real estate firm specializing in commercial sales and leasing, residential real estate and real estate auctions. For more information, call 617-479-9000.

Applying For A Real Estate Loan

Q: How quickly do I need to apply for a loan?

A: Most sale agreements require buyers to apply for a mortgage usually by seven days after the contract is signed.

However, this can be negotiated as long as both parties are in agreement.

This is important because if an application isn't made, the buyers may be in violation of the sale agreement, leading to a possible forfeit of the deposit.

Because of this, buyers should be extra careful when going through the sale agreement before signing to make sure all obligations are understood.

When meeting with a lender, be sure to receive a letter from them as evidence that you met. Then give this letter to the seller's broker as stated in the sale agreement.

Builders Licensing Course Begins Jan. 3 In Quincy

The Builders Association of Greater Boston (BAGB) announces the next Builders Licensing Courses will begin Monday, Jan. 3 in Quincy at Crown Colony Office Park.

Classes are held 7 to 10 p.m. for seven weeks with a mock exam given during the last class. Certificates issued upon completion of course.

The next exam in March 11, 2000. Deadline to register for the exam is Feb. 11.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

As Temperatures Drop, Danger Of Hypothermia Rises

During the winter months, some people forget that the cold can be just as hazardous as the ice and snow. A drop in temperature outside can lead to a drop in temperature inside the body, possibly resulting in hypothermia.

"Hypothermia is characterized by unusually low body temperatures - specifically temperatures below 96ºF - and is caused by staying in a cool place for a long time," said Sandy Carlson, RN, clinical education specialist for VNA Care Network, formerly Visiting Nurses Associates.

This nonprofit agency brings health care into the homes of residents throughout Greater Boston, including Quincy.

"Hypothermia is especially a concern for seniors who often have problems with regulating body temperatures due to age, illness, or medications," Carlson said.

Some illnesses that may affect a person's response to the cold include:

- Slow thyroid and other disorders of the body's hormone system.
- Stroke or disorders that cause paralysis and reduce awareness.
- Severe arthritis.
- Parkinson's disease.
- Any condition that curbs the normal flow of blood.
- Memory disorders.

According to VNA Care Network health care professionals, a person with hypothermia may experience a body temperature below 96ºF, a change in skin color, confusion or sleepiness, sluggish or slurred speech, a weak pulse, low blood pressure, excess shivering, stiffness in the arms and legs, and poor control over body movements or slow reactions. If these symptoms occur, keep the person as warm and dry as possible and immediately seek medical attention from a doctor.

VNA Care Network wants seniors to know that prevention is the best treatment and offers these tips to protect yourself from hypothermia:

- Keep your thermostat at approximately 65ºF unless an illness requires you to increase your household temperature.
- Indoors or out, dress warmly; stay active; and do not skip meals or go hungry.
- Cover your head when outdoors– 80% of body heat is lost through a bare head.
- While in bed, stay warm with the appropriate clothing and blankets. Hypothermia can start during sleep.
- Ask your doctor if any medication you are taking can affect body temperature.

During extremely cold weather, ask a neighbor or friend if he or she could check on you. Contact your Council on Aging about a telephone check-in or personal visit service for the elderly or home-bound in your community.

For seniors who are reluctant to turn up the heat because of fuel costs, try heating only one or two rooms of your home. For people with a limited income, inquire about fuel assistance programs by calling the Massachusetts Fuel Assistance Program, Department of Housing Bureau of Energy, at (800) 632-8175.

While keeping warm this winter also remember to be safe. VNA Care Network recommends that if you are using space heaters, make sure they are stable; at least three feet from flammable items such as curtains, papers, furniture, etc.; and have a screen or other barrier around them. Do not use unvented kerosene heaters, which are illegal in Massachusetts, or gas ovens and charcoal heaters, which can both give off potentially deadly fumes.

VNA Care Network brings nursing; physical, occupational and speech therapy; home health aide services; and social work into people's homes. VNA Care Network's specialty programs include home-based cardiac disease management, wound care, joint replacement therapy, diabetes care, intravenous therapy, HIV/AIDS care, wellness programs, adult day heath centers, child care centers and private duty nursing. In addition, VNA Care Network offers pain and symptom management and hospice in patients' homes and in two alternative residences, Chilton House in Cambridge and the Stanley R. Tippett Home in Needham.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Will a hearing aid correct my loss right away?

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

No! You will notice an immediate difference in volume and some sounds will be clearer but it takes time to re-learn how to hear with a hearing aid. Your maximum potential may not be reached for a full year. Hearing is a learned process, the brain needs to store information received from the ear . When you first get a hearing aid, it is foreign to the brain. The brain wants to hear and will learn to the best of its ability, if you give it enough practice. Try to be patient, practice , and keep in touch with your Hearing Instrument Specialist for adjustments and fine tuning. Don't wait too long to get help. The longer you wait, the more difficult it is for the brain to re-learn how to hear again. This is a major reason why a hearing aid can end up in a desk drawer instead of an ear. There are other reasons, most of which can be overcome if your Specialist is dedicated to your success! If you carefully select your Specialist, he or she will carefully select your hearing instrument.

Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

Remembering Tom Cairns: Quincy's Big Dipper

By BRIAN BUCKLEY

Recently the sports world mourned the loss of one its most well-known sports celebrities.

In the world of basketball, he was the most dominant physical force ever to play the game. This force, of course, was Wilt Chamberlain.

Known as "Wilt the Stilt" to many, he was the only player ever to score 100 points in a game and he holds other scoring and rebound records. But to his friends and opponents he was known as Dip, Dipper or the Big Dipper, a nickname he preferred.

During the '70s in Quincy, while Wilt Chamberlain was pounding the floors of the NBA arenas, Quincy's "Wilt Chamberlain" was pounding the pavement of the Fenno Street Playground, known as the "Mount." This 6'10" local giant was also known to his friends and opponents, (because of the Chamberlain similarities), as the "Dipper."

Quincy's "Dipper," Thomas Cairns will not go down in history with the NBA "Dipper" Wilt Chamberlain. But oddly enough, the same week that Wilt Chamberlain passed away, Tom Cairns passed away, Oct. 18, at the young age of 46.

Besides the size factor, there were many similarities between Tom Cairns and Wilt the Stilt. They were both nicknamed the "Dipper," they were both looked at, when they played, as the villain; Chamberlain in the NBA, Tom Cairns in CYO, recreation, high school, college, YMCA and adult leagues. Yet both Tom and Wilt had big gregarious laughs and both were really gentle giants.

Those who played basketball or watched basketball in Quincy during the '70s might remember a huge teenager walking from his house, across from St. Ann's School, to the "Mount." Always with a basketball under his arm, Tom Cairns would play ball with Angus, Pinky, Piper, Hurl, Boxcar, Fig, Muck, Doe, Melvin and many of the Nicknamed Hoopsters who frequented the Quincy basketball courts in those days. Everyone knew Quincy's "Dipper." He towered over everyone and obviously he was an easy person to recognize and remember.

TOM CAIRNS

Many remember Tom Cairns winning the City Recreation Championship for the Central Cougars when he was in the ninth grade, then returning to win the City Recreation Championship his senior year in high school because he was academically ineligible to play for coach Knobby Nolan's Red Raiders that year.

Like Chamberlain, Tom Cairns lived in the fast lane of the '70s. It was sad, but Tom was one of those few people who was considered a jock yet was involved in the rebellious turmoil that was prevalent with the youth of those times. Tom burned the candle at both ends and while he grew to be 6'10" early in life, he grew up much later than that.

Yet, those who knew the Quincy Dipper knew he was a basketball junkie at heart. He continued to play ball throughout his adult life and whenever you met him there were always stories of the "Dipper" that would be retold.

For example, it was reported in the local papers that Tom Cairns and Kevin Murphy had combined for 41 points to lead St. Ann's CYO to a victory. What was not told, was that Tom Cairns had 39 of those points and Murphy only two. But the Dipper loved a prank and he thought that was the best.

Others may remember, when Tom was in high school, the great one-on-one match-up between Doe and the Dipper. While the Dipper trash talked up to the big event he did little talking after he was defeated by the much smaller opponent. Some recall the slam dunk contest, also held at the Mount, between Dipper and the 6'3" Melvin. Again the Dipper trash talked before the event but the reason he lost was because he had small hands. The Dipper always had an excuse.

I had the pleasure of playing with and against Quincy's Dipper as well as coaching him in various leagues. And while the Quincy playgrounds have produced better athletes and better basketball players during that 1970's era, it would be hard pressed to find someone who was a bigger local legend. He was a trash talker and a villain to his opponents but after the games he was always liked. Tom Cairns was a good guy who took a little longer than others to grow into adulthood, yet who will always be remembered.

Wilt Chamberlain, the NBA's Dipper, and Tom Cairns, Quincy's Dipper, are probably playing a little one-on-one right now. And wouldn't that be a great match-up to watch. Yet, to all those people who played ball in Quincy during the '70s, there was only one Wilt the Stilt and the only Dipper was Quincy's Tom Cairns.

We will miss him, but we will never forget the Dipper!

The Quincy Mite A travel team rebounded from two straight losses with a 12-3 rout of South Boston in Greater Boston Youth Hockey League action Saturday.

Johnny Magliozzi and Chris Brown each scored in the first period to give Quincy a 2-1 lead.

In the second, Quincy exploded for six goals to take a commanding 8-1 lead. Doug Haskins and Kyle Craig each netted a pair, and Brandon Gilmore and Magliozzi added one.

Billy Kiley scored two and Gilmore and Patrick Young, his first of the season, chipped in with one in the third period.

In previous action, Quincy came up short in a comeback bid against the Dorchester Chiefs Mite A team, losing 5-3.

Trailing 4-1 in the third period, the Bulldogs pulled their goalie and tallied two goals, by Haskins and Andrew Bythrow, in 21 seconds.

With 19 seconds left in the game the Chiefs scored an empty net goal to seal the win.

The Chiefs' Bob Atkinson scored at 8:50 of the first period to put his team on top early. Gilmore tied the game at 1-1 with 36 seconds left in the second.

Quincy wan unable to mount an offensive attack as the Chiefs took a 2-1 lead after two periods before adding two quick goals at the start of the third.

Quincy fell to Somerville, 3-1, at the Parkway MDC rink.

Both teams were scoreless after the first period but Somerville carried the play as it had several scoring chances on Quincy goalie Stephen Barresi.

Somerville scored its first goal in the second when the puck took a crazy bounce past Barresi. It added two more goals for a 3-0 lead after two.

Quincy avoided the shutout with a goal in the third period.

Ray Cattaneo: Celebrating 50 Years In Baseball

By CHRIS POISSON

Sometimes, Quincy native Ray Cattaneo wonders if baseball could've been in his future.

Fifty years ago, there were two promising young third basemen climbing the ranks in the Boston Braves' organization. One player reached the big leagues fairly quickly, as his sweet left-handed swing slugged him 512 career home runs and into Cooperstown.

He turned out to be Eddie Mathews and the other was Cattaneo, who was in the unfortunate position of playing behind the game's best third baseman of the '50s.

Today, it's like saying a third baseman in the Atlanta Braves' farm system is going to replace MVP Chipper Jones at the hot corner. It's not going to happen.

"That was as far as I went," says Cattaneo. "You had Eddie Mathews sitting there, so you had no place to go. I knew I wasn't going anywhere with him up there. That's when I said that this isn't my future."

Although he never found a home in the Majors, Cattaneo did get a taste of it while he was in the service in the early '50s. He played against the Pirates' Dick Groat, the Braves' Johnny Antanelli and took some cuts against the Giants' Willie Mays. Some strong competition.

He still thinks about it to this day. He goes through the inevitable "what ifs." What if Mathews wasn't around? What if Mathews wasn't a Hall of Famer? What if baseball was like it is today?

"You do. You do," Cattaneo says. "But God has planned for your life. He's not going to change it. That's the way I look at things. I couldn't have made it any different. That was the way my life was going to be. You live on fate."

As fate turned out, baseball was indeed in Cattaneo's future. On Oct. 16, the Morrisette American Legion Post gave Cattaneo a Gold Card, a lifetime membership for his 30 years of running the baseball program. And deservingly so. Take a look at what the Skipper has done the past three decades:

- 30 straight playoff appearances.
- 30 straight winning seasons.
- Two state titles (1975, 1992).
- A World Series appearance (1975).
- One win away from another World Series (1998).

There aren't many Quincy kids who haven't heard of Cattaneo while growing up playing baseball. He has become a staple in American Legion baseball. When you say Morrisette, you picture Cattaneo. That's the way it is around here.

RAY CATTANEO was recently given a Gold Card by the Morrisette American Legion Post, a lifetime membership for his 30 years of running the baseball program. Cattaneo has never had a losing season as manager.

"That's probably because we had a lot of good years, a lot of winning years," Cattaneo says. "It's been a long time, but it has gone by fast. I never thought I'd go this long. I'm afraid to give it up."

The "Other" '75 Series

The Red Sox had Boston buzzing with excitement that year as they reached the Fall Classic. Carlton Fisk's home run made Beantown even more electrifying.

But there was another local team grabbing headlines before Red October. Cattaneo's Kids made it all the way to Rapid City, South Dakota, home of the Legion World Series.

Morrisette's 21-2 mark put it in a first-place tie with Weymouth, the only team to blemish Morrisette's record. In a one-game playoff, Morrisette prevailed and went on to win the state title.

"We never had a real all-star on the team," says Cattaneo, who believes that's the best team he has coached. "They just played together. They were tremendous."

The Regionals was held at Adams Field and with the home-crowd advantage, Morrisette beat Maine, 4-2, to move on to the World Series.

"The place was packed," Cattaneo says. "Tremendous crowd. Both stands were full and people were standing all over the place. It was just great. It was great for the city and it was great for the kids."

Morrisette's visit to South Dakota was cut short as it was knocked out in Round 1, losing its first two games by one run.

"Things happened so fast you didn't have time to enjoy it," Cattaneo says. "I'd love to get back one more time to the World Series so I could enjoy it more. The way things went, it was just too bad."

Will Cattaneo get another crack at it? Last year, he brought an overachieving Morrisette team within one win of a trip to Las Vegas for the World Series.

"They thought it was great to get to that final game," Cattaneo says. "Being in that final game, they even thought they could beat [College Park, Penn.]. They hated to see it end. That's when you know you have a bunch of kids that want to play. We had a blast.

"Whether we do that again, I don't know. It's hard. The talent just disappears. The kids just aren't there. They're not committed like they were back then. Kids today just have so much more, preparing for college and everything."

All In The Family

Cattaneo played short stop on the inaugural 1945 Morrisette team and has developed a strong sense of family tradition over the years. It was Nick Malvesti, who managed the '45 club, that offered him the Morrisette job.

When Cattaneo took over the reigns he chose Conny Carlozzi and Bill Corcoran who played with him on the first team. The three shared the dugout for 10 years. Carlozzi recently passed away and Corcoran rejoined the team three years ago after a brief hiatus.

"It's great to have Bill back," Cattaneo says. "We grew up together. We know each other well. We just click. He keeps me calm at certain times. He's a great

Bicycle Stunt Champion Performs For Broad Meadows Students

CHRIS POULOS, 1999 World Bicycle Stunt Champion, recently performed an "Anti-Tobacco" show at the Broad Meadows Middle School during the Great American Smokeout. The show was funded by the "Healthy Choices Grant" given by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and Blue Cross and Blue Shield. The Broad Meadows Middle School is one of 10 recipients of the grant in Massachusetts. Poulos also emphasized the importance of wearing bicycle helmets to the youngsters.

help.

"I always choose people that played here. I don't care how far back. It's always kids in the program."

This season it was Bob Benn and Jim Maze of the '75 team who joined the staff. Maze coached first base and Benn actually assumed the managerial spot as Cattaneo tried to step aside.

But the team got off to a sluggish 2-7 start and was in jeopardy of its first losing season. Not what Cattaneo had in mind. Slowly, he worked his way back as the manager and the team caught fire, winning 10 of its last 11 games to make the playoffs.

"I hate to lose," Cattaneo says. "I'm a bad loser. I'm the worst there is. The kids know that and they get that same attitude."

Cattaneo would like to manage as long as he can but admits he's getting a little old for the job.

"I can't do it," he says. "How many more years can I do it? My arm is gone, my shoulder hurts. I need some young blood in here."

Cattaneo, though, can't sever ties with the team just like that. It's a part of him. It's been his life for 30 years. He enjoys coaching kids and that's what keeps him coming back, despite the aches.

"I think that's what it is," Cattaneo says. I think it's the different personalities in the kids every year. You see changes in some kids. Some kids get better. Some level off at 16 and 17-years-old. I enjoy that."

Next season, Cattaneo plans to have Bob coach third and Jim coach first, while he runs the show from the dugout.

"Just for a year or two," he says. "To break them in. Not just to come right in and takeover right away and everything changes.

"I may be selfish but I want them to do it my way. Not their way. The way I think the kids should be handled and the team should be run."

That includes preseason team dinners. Sandwiches before the nightcap of a doubleheader. And more importantly, just letting the kids play ball.

"That makes them get together," Cattaneo says. "Socializing helps some of these kids who have never played together. It helps make a team."

Braves' Bitterness?

The Yankees recently swept the Braves for their 25th world championship this century. Cattaneo is a fan of Joe Torre's coaching style, but he rooted for the Braves. He holds no grudge.

Fate had Cattaneo as the Morrisette manager and he wouldn't want to change that.

"It's been 30 tremendous years," Cattaneo says. "Would I do it all over again? Absolutely. That was a big part of my life. If I didn't to that, I don't know what I'd be doing."

Now that begs to ask, what if Cattaneo wasn't at Morrisette the last 30 years?

Fury Bow To Southie, Rebound Over Dedham

The Quincy Fury split four games in recent Pee Wee B action.

Quincy fell to South Boston, 1-0, in an evenly matched and well played game.

The Fury rebounded with a 1-0 win over Dedham. In a game dominated by defense, it was Mike Arrafat's late blue-line blast that decided the game.

Quincy blew a 2-0 lead as it lost to Hyde Park, 3-2. Matt Tobin and James Sheehan netted Quincy's goals and it held the lead until the second period.

Glenn Gibbons led the Fury to a 5-0 victory over Belmont with a hat trick. Steve Bythrow and Sheehan added the other goals. Paul Noonan, Mike MacPherson and Sheehan picked up assists.

Permit Sought For Dredging Channel To Quincy Yacht Club

Quincy and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management are seeking permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to dredge 5.8 acres in Hingham Bay off Houghs Neck.

The channel leading to the Quincy Yacht Club would be dredged to a depth of eight feet, requiring the removal of an estimated 37,000 cubic yards of silty sediment. This material would be loaded onto scows and transported to the Massachusetts Bay Disposal Site.

The application for the federal permit was filed with the Engineers in compliance with Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899 which provides for federal regulation of any work in, under or over navigable waters of the United States, Section 404 of the Clean Water Act which regulates the discharge of dredged or fill material in United States waters, including wetlands, and Section 103 of the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act which regulates the transporting of dredged material for open water disposal.

To assist in evaluating the dredging and disposal, the Engineers are soliciting public comments. Written statements should be forwarded to their office no later than Dec. 15. Additional information may be obtained by contacting Ted Lento at the New England District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 696 Virginia Road, Concord, MA 01742.

A Thought For The Week

Many people strive to leave an estate made up of land, stocks and bonds and money in the bank. This can not be faulted for it is not fundamentally wrong, of course . . . But there is a different kind of estate that never needs, or even can be probated . . .

The very best estate is an honorable name, a good reputation, a record of righteous, useful living . . . A legacy of an honorable name, a legacy of profound respect for facts, a deep reverence for character, a thirst for wisdom, a dedication for work - is far more important and more meaningful than money itself. These things can never be detrimental, while money and assets at times can be.

A legacy of decency is not an impossible legacy . . . It is an estate any parent can leave to his or her children . . . In the funeral home field we have witnessed it time and time again . . . And if you look back, we are sure you can say the same thing with equal or perhaps even more emphasis.

We welcome and appreciate any comments or thoughts you may have concerning the thoughts you read here . . .

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

Here's a quick way to forecast your horoscope with 10 being the best possible week and 0 the most difficult.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Being a busy bee is probably not in your best interest. You are likely to get stung if you throw yourself into this role. Stay with your swarm in order to maintain support. This week is a 6.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A game of tug-of-war seems to have erupted, and you could be the one who is trying to keep the flag in the middle. If you keep both extremes strong, it all evens out. This week is a 6.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The people and places inside of you merge and mold until they become quite hard to even recognize. Try to remember what they started out as, and interpretation becomes more distinct. This week is a 4.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The advantages you have been given show themselves in obvious ways. You realize how lucky you really are. Your efforts allow you to excel to a whole new level. This week is a 10.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your flamboyant side could be aiming to flaunt itself in almost any venue. You need to figure out the best way to tame the temptation. Make sure that your audiences are appropriate. This week is a 6.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Others agree with you even if the issues you propose are a bit outlandish. With your thoughts being taken into consideration, you have a little time to expand them even further. This week is an 8.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The action around you may not only be uncanny but could also be a bit out of control. Hold on tightly to the pieces that are yours so that they don't get blown away by the hoopla. This week is a 5.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The vibrant colors of your face reveal a sense of achievement that no one can ever touch. You place yourself in the realm of master with your careful interpretation of the scenery that surrounds you. This week is a 9.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Showing off could be your first impulse as you begin your week. In order to receive a better reception, make sure that your antics are not at the expense of someone else. This week is a 7.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) People have no problem making their opinions known, and this makes for some magical debate. The pros and cons create a whole dialogue that enriches all who are witness to the wonders. This week is a 9.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Deflate your ego and don't give negative thoughts any further assistance. They seem to be taking off on their own. Engage in a form of mutiny before they make themselves your dictator. This week is a 7.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Cupid's arrows are flying through the air, and you are part of their ultimate destination. The points don't hurt, and the results make it all worthwhile. This week is a 10.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Accepting people for who they are is a knack that you hold above all others. This allows others to let down their guard and be real in their encounters with you. The insight that you gain through these interactions makes you a rich teller of stories. The benefit of the doubt usually ends up going in your favor.

Beechwood Center Launches Project 'Grand Friends'

Launching with private resources, fundraising and an intergenerational volunteer corps, "Project Grand Friends" is underway at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., North Quincy.

"Project Grand Friends," a program designed with and for seniors and children, begins this month, announces Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beals.

"Mayor James Sheets, city departments, city councillors, other elected officials, Beechwood and other organizations have long demonstrated strong commitments to work with and for our senior citizenry," Beals said. "This is a city that recognizes and cares for the contributions and needs of seniors."

Sheets and other city and county leaders, such as Dist. Atty. William Keating and Sheriff Michael Bellotti, support intergenerational services.

"Project Grand Friends" is a city-wide, intergenerational program that will "team" children with seniors in many activities. Intergenerational programming is not a new idea at the center. Since its inception 18 years ago, Beechwood's mission maintains "to promote lifelong learning and care in an intergenerational environment, in partnership with the city and other community organizations."

The new 'Project Grand Friends' acknowledges that children, young adults and seniors all have valuable knowledge, skills and interests that children aren't always shared.

Development of "Grand Friends" launched when elementary school children attending Beechwood's After School Program identified " a need for new computers for after school." When it was learned that the Peanut Butter & Jelly Journal (a new children's magazine premiering in the Boston area this fall) was looking for unique children's projects, the Center responded.

"First, the children mapped out a plan," said Diana Stacey, director of Children's Services. Seniors were interested in learning computer skills the children outlined the Center's need for computers, and their thoughts about sharing what they and other children knew with seniors.

Many seniors are expressing interest in learning basics about computers from young people, said Kathleen Prince, director of Beechwood's Elder Services.

Students from North Quincy High School's service club, Interact, are now volunteering to work with seniors to learn basic computer skills. Initially, the intergenerational computer sessions are being held each Tuesday afternoon.

"Often our own grandchildren do not live nearby," Beals said. "Many children have grandparents -- out of town. Day-to-day contact and activities are missed. Much grandparenting is done 'long distance,'" she said.

Project Grand Friends expands the long-standing intergenerational programming at the Center. Children participate regularly in our senior programming and elders have long contributed as volunteers with all ages at the Center.

"Grand Friends" launches this month, with the "Computer Project." Plans are unfolding for additional "cross generational" projects this winter. Beals said Beechwood looks forward to expanding "Grand Friends" in partnership with the city, community organizations and county officials.

For more information about Project Grand Friends or any of Beechwood's elder and volunteer services, call Kathleen Prince at 471-5712.

Bank Of Canton Countdown

What Is This Y2K Bug?

By now, just about everyone is aware of the so-called "Y2K bug." But what is this "bug," and why is everyone so afraid of it?

First of all, it's not a bug. There is no Y2K virus, or time-activated device set to go off at the stroke of midnight Jan. 1.

The Y2K situation arises from the way computers handle and store date information for their processing. In other words, a toaster with a computer chip as part of its controls probably won't be affected, because it doesn't matter to the toaster what date it is.

There are three main causes for potential Y2K problems:

• The use of two digits to represent a four-digit calendar year. Many computers store dates in two-digit format (that is, 99=1999). When 2000 arrives, the computer may interpret "00" as "1900." Obviously, calculations based on length of time (interest rates, overdue bills, etc.) will be totally inaccurate unless this situation is corrected.

• The year 2000 is a special case leap year. Just to make things a bit more confusing... most years ending in 00 are not leap years, unless they are divisible by 400 (like 2000). Some programs may not know 2000 is a leap year (dates after February 28 will be off by one day).

• Programmers use dates for special meanings. Mostly in custom software programs, some programmers use dates to convey special messages to the software. For example, the date 9/9/99 may mean "save this data forever."

Most American companies (and many worldwide) have been well aware of the potential problems for years, and have been working diligently to eliminate them.

While many people are concerned about services that are highly computer-dependent (like banks and investment companies), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) has implemented a national testing and auditing process for all of its banks. Of course, the FDIC and DIF insure all deposits in Massachusetts member banks (including The Bank of Canton), so there is no chance of loss of funds on deposit in these banks. (Not all banks are FDIC/DIF insured, so ask your bank).

FDA Approves New Laser Eye Surgery

Dr. Steven A. Nielsen of the Lambert-Nielsen Eye Center and the Laser Eye Center of Boston at Quincy announces the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has approved the use of the VISX Star S2 Excimer Laser System™ for the treatment of laser in-situ Keratomileusis (LASIK).

"We have been performing refractive surgery since 1995 and have successfully treated thousands of nearsighted, farsighted and astigmatic patients," Dr. Nielsen said. He offers the bilateral LASIK procedure which treats both eyes at once and also teaches other ophthalmologists in this surgical technique.

According to VISX, the approval was based on data from the CRS Clinical Research, which the FDA Ophthalmic Devices Advisory Panel recommended for pre-market approval in July. The VISX Star S2 is the only laser approved by the FDA for the LASIK procedure as safe and effective for the treatment of up to 14 diopters of myopia, or nearsightedness, with up to five diopters of astigmatism. VISX is considered the worldwide leader in the development of refractive laser technology.

The Laser Eye Center of Boston at Quincy, located at 100 Congress St. in the Crown Colony Office Park, opened last Spring and features the only VISX Star S2 laser in the area.

For more information, contact the Laser Eye Center of Boston at Quincy at 617-769-9585.

Raymondi Resolve Seeks End To Athletic Fees

If the Quincy Public Schools can find enough "breakage" for a second athletic director, Councillor Dan Raymondi argues, it ought to have enough money to do away with school athletic fees.

Raymondi sponsored a resolution at Monday night's council meeting asking the city council to strongly encourage the elimination of athletic user fees in the Quincy Public Schools.

The resolution passed 5-1, with Councillor Timothy Cahill casting the lone dissenting vote.

Raymondi's resolution points out that students must pay a $40 athletic fee into a revolving fund, amounting to roughly $55,000 a year. The fund currently has a balance of $160,000. Many families, Raymondi said, have a difficult time paying those fees at a time when the School Department can find enough "breakage" (extra money as a result of hiring lower paid teachers to replace retiring staff) to create a second athletic director.

"Clearly there are sufficient funds in the school budget," Raymondi said. "Athletic fees ought to be waived and waived immediately."

Cahill opposed the measure, saying that it meddled into what was clearly the School Committee's prerogative. He added that he was the only council member who actually had to pay the fees and that, for most families, it was "the least of their worries."

At the same meeting Raymondi proposed a reconsideration of the council's Nov. 22 appropriation of nearly $3 million to the Quincy School's, arguing that new facts warranted new consideration.

After much wrangling as to whether the reconsideration was even possible, the matter was tabled until the Dec. 20 meeting after an objection from Cahill.

Frequent Tenant Police Calls Will Cost Landlords

Raymondi said, thanking his fellow councillors and the more than a dozen Quincy Police officers in attendance, including Chief Frane. Raymondi praised the Community Policing Units for the idea and noted that, nationally, 87% of law enforcement agencies have some form of community policing.

Councillors Michael D'Amico and Patrick McDermott supported the proposal but expressed some reservations concerning the rights and responsibilities of property owners, adding that they may wish to amend the ordinance next year. Both supported this version, they said, because it was the end of the legislative cycle and they wanted a good plan now rather than a great plan later. D'Amico said that the ordinance gave the city more clout in dealing with negligent property owners and McDermott called it "an important tool" for police officers to do their job.

Councillor McCauley, who withdrew an amendment on the proposal to save for next year's session, voted in the negative. "It was not a good idea when it came in and it's not a good idea now," McCauley said, adding that frequent calls to certain houses were part of a police officer's job and that he didn't like the idea of a private detail sitting in front of someone's house.

Restaurant Gets Beer, Wine License

The License Board Tuesday at a continued hearing granted a beer and wine license to the Fuji Restaurant, 698 Hancock St.

Ward 5 Councillor Steve Durkin spoke in opposition of the license stating that the restaurant was situated near single family homes.

Although license board chairman Joseph Shea's vote wasn't needed for the request to pass, he nonetheless voted against the issuing of the license concurring with Durkin.

Atty. Louis Cassis, representing Jimmy Liang and Peter Wai-Tak Tse, owners, said that the restaurant only has 19 seats and that "food is the main attraction." Also Cassis noted, there is no bar.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, who made the motion to grant the license said the restaurant is small and there would be "no major impact" brought about because of the license.

The issue will go before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC)

Jonathan Twining Receives Award

Professor Jonathan Twining of Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) received one of two "High Five" Awards at a recent meeting of the Ward 5 Association at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

The award was given to Professor Twining for making a significant contribution to the community through his organizational efforts to promote environmental stewardship at Sailors Home Pond, Butler Pond, Furnace Brook and the coastal area.

Twining, an environmental science professor at ENC, was instrumental in developing clean-up sessions, replanting of appropriate pond plants, and long-term environmental strategies for maintenance of the sites.

In accepting the award, Twining thanked all of those in the Ward 5 area, including his students at ENC, for participating in these important efforts in the community.

Twining has also been actively involved in the development of ENC's environmental efforts in Sighisoara, Romania, where the college maintains an extensive study-abroad program.

SOME 132 QUINCY off-duty firefighters traveled to Worcester in two buses last Thursday for the Memorial Service at the Worcester Centrum for the six firefighters killed in the warehouse fire. More than 15,000 firefighters from across the country, including as far as Alaska, and other countries joined together in tribute. In addition, Quincy's Engine 5 with a seven-man crew, was also sent to cover a Worcester fire station to allow Worcester firefighters to attend the memorial service.

Chilling Effect Seen On City, Business Community

Businesses In Uproar Over Tax Rate Vote

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Quincy business community was still in an uproar at mid-week over Monday night's special City Council meeting at which business again was told to carry a much heavier tax load while not getting the chance to argue the point.

The council voted 4-3 not to reconsider the 175% tax classification voted last week, ignoring the .169% proposed by Mayor James Sheets.

The meeting lasted approximately five minutes and adjourned without business representatives present being given the opportunity to present their cases against the 175% classification.

The three councillors who voted for reconsideration criticized Monday night's council action.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott called it "an embarrassment to the council and to the city."

"A slap in the face to the business community," said Councillor at-large and former Mayor Frank McCauley.

Councillor Paul Harold said the business representatives should have been "extended the common courtesy" of speaking at the meeting.

The meeting took only five minutes but was seen as having a chilling effect on the business community and the city's image for years to come.

Councillors voting in the negative were: Bruce Ayers, Michael D'Amico, Daniel Raymondi, and Council President Peter Kolson.

Councillor Tim Cahill was not present and Councillor Steve Durkin was not present due to illness.

Raymondi then moved to adjourn the meeting, which was seconded by D'Amico.

Eye Surgery For Sheets

Mayor James Sheets is scheduled to undergo surgery for a detached retina at Mass Eye & Ear sometime after 5 p.m. Wednesday and will require complete rest for at least a week.

According to the mayor, the detached retina may be a complication resulting from a recent fall which required hospitalization.

The mayor said that he expected to be in the hospital until Thursday and then have "complete rest until at least after Christmas."

The mayor will then spend two or three weeks managing the city's affair from his house, depending on the speed of his recovery.

"I expect to heal fast," Sheets said. "The doctor said I was in excellent shape and I expect no complica-

Helping To Fill Volunteer Shortage

33 More Community Leaders To Man Salvation Army Kettle

Thirty three more community leaders will man a kettle in downtown Quincy today (Thursday) and Friday to help the Salvation Army to help those in need this holiday season.

The Salvation Army itself is in serious need of volunteers as Christmas rapidly approaches.

"We are grateful to those community leaders and other volunteers," said Major Ed Forster who with his wife, Major Flo Forster, are the commanding officers of the Quincy Temple Corps.

"But we are in dire need of more volunteers as the kettle drive goes into the last week, the crucial week before Christmas. Right now we only have enough volunteers to staff just half of our kettles. The other half will have to remain idle and out of service unless we have more volunteers kindly come to our aid."

Anyone who can help is asked to call the Quincy Temple Corps. headquarters at 617-472-2345.

Money raised here in Quincy goes directly to the Quincy Temple Corps to help local needy families.

Congressman William Delahunt will be among those manning the kettle but Mayor James Sheets originally scheduled will be un-

Assumes Duties As New Principal Dec. 31

Louis Ioanilli Likes NQHS Family Atmosphere

By CRAIG SALTERS

Assistant Principal Louis Ioanilli will succeed retiring Principal Eileen Feeney at North Quincy High School effective Dec. 31.

Ioanilli, who has 30 years experience in the Quincy Public Schools, was chosen from 16 candidates to succeed Feeney, the first woman high school principal in the city's history.

Superintendent Eugene Creedon made the final decision after a screening committee identified the three most qualified applicants.

"I felt confident," Ioanilli said of his chances, noting the positive feedback he'd received from teachers, students, and parents. "I've been an administrator in the Quincy Schools for 16 years now. But I'd like to thank Superintendent Creedon for his confidence in me."

Ioanilli, who grew up in Sharon, was a physical education teacher at NQHS from 1970 to 1983, coaching soccer, baseball, and softball. He then went to Quincy High School, where he was dean of students from 1983 to 1985 and assistant principal from 1985 until the summer of 1999 when he returned to North Quincy High as its assistant principal.

"I fell in love with the place all over again," said Ioanilli, adding that he attends as many extracurricular activities as possible to connect with the school's pride and tradition. "There's a family atmosphere here and I'm glad to be part of the family."

Ioanilli credited much of that family spirit to outgoing principal Eileen Feeney, herself a NQHS graduate. "I've learned from all the principals I've served under -- Peter Chrisom, Lloyd Hill, Bob Keuther -- but especially from Eileen," Ioanilli said. "She takes into consideration the feelings of the students and asks herself, 'would this be good for the students?' when making decisions. I will use her as my guide."

Ioanilli said he would continue working with North Quincy's "strong faculty" to foster school achievement both in and out of the classroom. He also said he wants to continue the steady improvement in MCAS scores and ready the school for its accreditation evaluation in 2002. Another goal, he said, would be to enhance the technology that already exists at NQHS, connecting it to all areas of education.

Superintendent Creedon praised Ioanilli's leadership abilities and said his "intensive grounding" in the Quincy Public Schools would make the mid-year leadership transition a smooth one. "He's already the assistant principal there," Creedon said. "He already knows the system."

"I respect his ability to get the job done," Creedon continued. "I respect his intelligence, dedication, and honest commitment to young people."

Creedon said that the starting salary for a principal of a high school North Quincy's size (approximately 1,200 students) is between $79,000 and $83,000.

Ioanilli, 52, is a graduate of Sharon High School and the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. He received his master's degree in Education from Boston State College.

Ioanilli lives in Hingham with his wife Elaine and has three children. His son Lou attends the Merchant Marine Academy in King's Point, NY, and his other son Michael attends Syracuse University. His daughter Tammy attends Hingham High School.

Foot Notes

STRESS FRACTURES

Stress fractures are slight cracks in a bone's surface. Occurring most often in the feet and legs, stress fractures develop from chronic, excessive impact. Runners are especially susceptible to this type of injury. Intense pain and sharp, localized tenderness are the main symptoms of a stress facture. The fracture will hurt when pressed directly from above and below, unlike tendons or ligaments, which usually only hurt when pressed from one side. X-rays usually do not detect stress fractures until a callus - a layer of new bone - forms over the crack , a process that takes two to three weeks. Rest is the most effective treatment for a stress fracture. Any inflammation may be relieved with ice and anti-inflammatory medications.

Your feet take a tremendous pounding. Walking on cement, for instance, can give each foot a 180-pound jolt with every step you take. This wear and tear can take its toll, sometimes causing stress fractures or even a broken bone. Combine this with poorly fitting shoes and you can end up with a lot of pain and an inability to move with ease. Don't let this happen to you. Professional foot care is available for you and your family here at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy. Ph 617-472-3466.

P.S. Individuals with stress fractures often switch temporarily to a different exercise program to prevent extension of the crack.

Businesses In Uproar Over Tax Rate Vote

(Cont'd from page 1)

The meeting was over.

"This was a slap in the face to the business community," McCauley said after his opening motion was defeated and the meeting disbanded. "In all my time I've never seen them shut off a group from speaking or treat them so shabbily."

Harold, who said he came prepared to argue against the increased classification, wanted to know why major taxpayers in the city were not "extended the common courtesy" of speaking at the meeting. Harold also pointed out that only 11 of 351 Massachusetts cities and towns have adopted maximum classification, and that Weymouth, Braintree, and Holbrook have rates of 137%, 150%, and 142%, respectively. "And the communities that are at 175% have had difficulty going back," Harold warned, since a decrease would mean shifting more of the tax burden onto residential property.

Councillor McDermott called the night's events "an embarrassment to the council and an embarrassment to the city.

"We invited them (the business leaders) to speak and then, basically, said 'Shut your mouth,'" McDermott said. "This sends a red-flag saying, 'Hey, watch out for Quincy, there's instability there."

McDermott also said he was upset at how those voting in the negative "scurried" out of council chambers immediately after the vote.

Mayor Sheets worried that the increased tax rate and council's decision not to allow further discussion would hurt Quincy's future. "I think placing the business community at the maximum in terms of property classification sends the wrong message to anyone who wants to open or expand a business in Quincy," Sheets said. "And I think they should have had the opportunity to speak. In the long run it will have a negative impact."

DEAN RIZZO (left), community development manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, consults with Donald Uvanitte, chairman of Quincy 2000, at Monday night's special council meeting on tax rates. The council voted 4-3 not to reconsider the new 175% classification.

Sheets had the option to veto but did not, signing the classification Tuesday. Sheets said that there were enough votes in the council to override his veto and, even if there were no override, he did not want to risk the city being without a tax rate at such a late date. "The veto is not an answer," Sheets said.

If the tax bills do not go out by January 1, the February 1 payment deadline is unenforceable.

Many Quincy business leaders were in attendance to discuss the council's decision to raise the property tax classification from 169%, which had been the rate since 1992 and was the recommendation of Mayor Sheets, to the legal maximum of 175%. Many were upset that, without warning, the council had raised the average commercial tax rate by $2.97.

McCauley's opening motion seemed like the beginning of a lengthy discussion on the topic, but the 4-3 vote against reconsideration put matters to a halt and left many of those present in shock.

"I'm very disappointed we didn't even have the opportunity to speak," said Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000. "The business community does far more than just pay taxes, and this creates a wedge. The QCPBA was here. The South Shore Chamber of Commerce was here. Tom Cataldo (senior vice president, State Street Bank) was in attendance, and he was not allowed to even speak? I'm a little confused about the way we were treated tonight."

Mr. Cataldo left the meeting without comment. According to Marion Fantucchio, chairperson of the Board of Assessors, State Street Bank's tax bill would increase by almost $500,000 from last year's total under the new rates.

Mannarino said property owners would pass the 9% increase on to their tenants, many of whom are "marginally making it" as it is. "The tenants will have a hard time absorbing that," Mannarino said. "It may impact some to where they decide they can't do business in the city."

Donald Uvanitte, vice president of Allied American Insurance and chairman of Quincy 2000, said that the higher tax rates would make Quincy less attractive for business. "We already pay twice the rate of residents and residents need to understand that," Uvanitte

Joint Effort Of Fr. Bill's Place, Quincy Neighborhood Housing

New Fund Established To Create Permanent Affordable Housing

A new affordable housing fund has been established by Father Bill's Place and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Service to continue their efforts in assisting people in obtaining affordable permanent housing.

Father Bill's Place and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services has partnered with The Quincy Sun in publicizing this effort.

"Despite our relentless efforts and the booming economy, many people who have grown up in the Quincy community are unable to locate affordable permanent housing and are facing homelessness," said John Yazwinski, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

"Father Bill's Place and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services would like to continue to assist people in obtaining affordable permanent housing. The Quincy Sun is assisting us in having our voices heard throughout the community, but we cannot do this alone," Yazwinski said.

"In response to this housing crisis, we are asking the community to help us give people a place to call home. A special fund to support new affordable housing initiatives has been created," Yazwinski said.

An example of permanent housing established recently is the Quincy veterans home.

In March of 1998, eight homeless veterans were given a place to call home. Since its inception, the Sheila McIntyre House lo-

IRS Promotes Paperless Tax Filing

The Internal Revenue Service is sending about 11 million postcards to taxpayers nationwide this month, inviting them to join the world of paperless tax return filing.

The postcards contain e-file customer numbers (ECNs) that the recipients can use as "signatures" on returns they file electronically, eliminating the need to mail paper signature documents.

"We're sending the postcards to individuals who used a computer to prepare their own returns last year, even if they filed a paper form," said Steve Daige, IRS District Director. "We hope they'll save their postcards and use their ECN's to file electronically this year."

In 1999, when the pilot began, the IRS received 660,000 returns using ECNs -- more than one-fourth of the almost 2.5 million returns e-filed by taxpayers from their home computers. The IRS expects such taxpayers to e-file 4 million returns in 2000.

The ECN is one of two pilots the IRS is conducting to counter a potential barrier to e-filing: the need to mail a paper form after transmitting the electronic data. A similar pilot allows taxpayers that e-file through participating tax preparers to create their own personal identification numbers (PINs) as electronic signatures.

The IRS expects to select more than 18,000 preparers for the coming year's pilot, more than double the 8,100 it chose last year. Ten private sector organizations are partnering with the IRS to submit nominees for the pilot. The IRS selects preparers based on the credentials they have established as electronic return originators.

Participating tax preparers will offer their e-filing clients the option of creating a five-digit PIN for the electronic return instead of signing a Form 8453. In 1999, the IRS received nearly half a million such returns with electronic signatures.

Taxpayers who use either electronic signature pilot do not need to mail signature documents (Forms 8453 or 8453-OL) to the IRS. The "Electronic Services" section of the IRS Web site -- www.irs.gov -- has more information on the signature pilots, including tax preparation software developers whose products will support the ECN option for those filing from home.

That Hot-Rod On Mars

I don't like to fly so you'll never find me standing in line for a ticket to the moon or Mars or Jupiter. Even at discount prices.

Maybe that's one reason I have mixed feelings every time NASA sends another multi-million dollar spacecraft into outerspace on an exploration mission.

Don't get me wrong.

I really would like to know if there ever was life on Mars or that there might be some form or trace of it there today.

And, one way to find out, of course, is to send a super-duper spacecraft up there.

But I think there's still some exploring that needs to be done right here on the good Earth.

There's still a big mission to be carried out right here: helping those who need help.

The last I heard, the Mars Polar Lander was sitting on Mars some 157 million miles away without a peep out of it.

Unless it gets around to doing what it was sent there to do, chalk it up as a $156 million dud.

One hundred fifty six million bucks.

That's a lot of money!

Maybe they will have better luck with the next one that goes up. Or the one after that.

But you hate to think of $156 million down the drain.

Makes you wonder.

If they can find $156 million to try to discover what's what on Mars, couldn't they come up with money like that to do something about what's what here on Earth?

Think what $156 million could do for people in need and for other worthy causes.

Like what a little of it could do right here in Quincy for such causes as Father Bill's Place for the homeless, the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, the Crisis Center, the Pantry Shelf, the Heart Fund, United Way, etc., all of which depend on donations from people to help people.

And what some of it could do for research for a cure for cancer. And to help deserving young people get to college.

I'm not against exploring outer space. But I think we should pay a little more attention to things right here on earth.

Nothing wrong with exploring.

If Columbus hadn't taken a chance and set sail in 1492--with the exception of Native Americans--we might all be somewhere else today.

With all its resources, abundance and know-how, this country could have been Utopia.

It's fairly close to it.

But it isn't with so many people here still hungry, homeless and terminally ill.

And it isn't when young people--the leaders of the new century--want to go to college but might not get there because of skyrocketing tuitions.

We have all kinds of money for spacecrafts, bombs, rockets and wasteful Congressional pet pork-barrel projects and relatively little for those in need.

Doesn't is make you wonder if our priorities sometimes get a little mixed up?

That $156 million hot-rod sitting up there on Mars doing nothing makes me wonder.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS will be the Beechwood Community Life Center's first guest speaker of the new century.

SHEETS

Sheets will speak at the Current Events Breakfast Jan. 5, 2000 at 8 a.m. at the center, 440 East Squantum St.

Sharron Beals, executive director, suggests you make a reservation by calling 471-5712 because His Honor usually draws a full house.

Do you find it a little hard to believe the new century is just 16 days away?

Of course, some argue it's really another year away. That it doesn't officially begin until 2001.

But for most people it will start Jan. 1, 2000.

HERE'S A LITTLE story that should make you feel good this holiday season.

It happened last Friday at the Salvation Army Kettle being manned by community leaders in front of Ryder's Curtain & Drapery store in downtown Quincy.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of historic First Parish Church, and George Nolan, president of the Quincy Kiwanis Club, were being relieved at the kettle by Rep.-School Committeeman Ron Mariano and City Auditor-School Committeeman Michael McFarland.

Elva Jury of Speakman St., drove up, leaned out and presented a check.

"I do a lot of walking," she said, "and find a lot of coins. Each year I give to the Salvation Army. This is what I found this year."

The check was for: $100.

Salem At Dry Dock, Undergoing Repairs

After several delays due to hazardous weather conditions, the USS Salem has moved into dry dock at the Boston Ship Repair Inc., South Boston.

The Salem, the last of the Des Moines class heavy cruisers which serves as the centerpiece and current home of the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum, pulled away from its berth at the Fore River Shipyard Dec. 7 at 9:30 a.m. Its journey across Boston Harbor took approximately six hours but strong winds and tides prevented the Salem from maneuvering into dry dock that day.

The ship docked overnight at the Black Falcon Terminal and moved into dry dock the following day.

Shipyard workers spent much of the day settling the Salem onto her blocks and draining the dock. The next few weeks will be spent hydro-blasting the ship's hull and surveying it by ultra sonic testing to determine the density and condition of the steel.

Restoration will be finalized by mid-February 2000. Renovation plans include: inspecting the watertight integrity of the ship's hull, making necessary repairs and painting the exterior of the ship. Other repairs will include modernization of the ship's fire alarm and electrical systems and the installation of modern toilet facilities.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts provided funding for the project.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD view of the Adams School on Abigail Avenue in South Quincy. The second public school was named Adams, it was built in 1913. It was of the same design as the Wollaston School on Beale Street. Sold to private developers in the 1980's, this is now the home of the Academy Park Condominiums. The first city owned Adams School was on Phipps Street next to St. John's Church. One of the first schools in Quincy, it was built of wood in 1855. Then after this new school was built in 1913, it served as the Boy's Industrial School until it was demolished in 1925.

Irked By Vote On Second Athletic Director

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

With all the uproar over the MCAS test scores recently released to the public, few hardly noticed what the Quincy School Committee did at their Dec. 1 meeting.

Despite opposition from many Quincy residents and a city council effort to block funding, the School Committee voted 4-3 to add a second athletic director for the Quincy Public Schools. The position will be paid for with "breakage" funds which is money saved when employees retire and are replaced with folks at lower salaries. This position will however have to be included in the next budget. The job pays a $62,000 salary. This year it will cost about $34,000 because it is already December.

Those who voted for the new position did so statedly because the second athletic director is needed. Outgoing School Committeeman Sean Barry said he believes Quincy sports needs another advocate. Fine, but I wish he and other members supporting this new position told us why we needed it. Will our children be better off because the city has two instead of one athletic director?

However, what really galled me was the fact that Mayor James Sheets in his capacity as an ex-officio member of the Quincy School Committee and also its chairperson voted to break the tie.

I didn't elect Mayor Jim Sheets to sit on the school board, I voted him in as mayor. We already have a strong-mayor weak-city council form of municipal government. Does the mayor have to be everywhere? I feel the mayor's presence on the school board could pressure votes to go one way or the other.

I have nothing against Mayor Sheets. He's done a fine job as mayor. I wouldn't care who the mayor was. I think Mayor James McIntyre was Quincy's Mayor of the 20th Century and I don't think he or any other mayor should serve as chairperson of the school committee with the power to vote on school issues.

Either change the make-up of the school committee to a five-member at-large body or adopt a city-wide/ward format as used by the city council.

We wouldn't want the mayor to be the President of the Quincy City Council and he shouldn't chair the school committee. He's the chief executive of the city, shouldn't that be enough?

A Thank You To Quincy Sons Of Italy

Editor: The Quincy Sun,

We recently held our first official fundraiser at the Quincy Sons of Italy and would like to thank John DeCarli (lodge vice president and charity chairman) and the lodge for their generous donations of $1,000.

With help from people like this, our association will be able to continue to grow and help keep our heritage and culture alive.

The officers and members but most important the children-dancers of the Smith-Houlihan Irish Cultural Association would like to thank the Quincy Sons of Italy for their support.

Thank You, Local Heroes

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

You may not know it, but the communities of the South Shore are full of local heroes. Some provided transportation to patients needing rides to treatment. Some raised money for cancer research. Some advocated for clean, healthy air for everyone. Some supplied office help. Some counseled patients who had recently been diagnosed with cancer, and some pledged their hard-earned cash.

They are the volunteers and donors who gave of their time, their talent, and/or their treasure to the American Cancer Society this past year. Though they didn't often get their names in the paper, through their efforts they brought us and our children one step closer to a cancer-free world.

For such dedication, the words "thank you" hardly seem adequate.

Cancer can strike anyone, regardless of age or race. In the United States, men have a 1 in 2 lifetime risk of developing cancer, while for women the risk is 1 in 3. At one time, a diagnosis of cancer was considered a certain death sentence. Now, thanks to the efforts of so many selfless individuals, the five-year relative survival rate for all types of cancer is 60 percent. Who knows what else the future will hold?

So, to all local heroes in the fight against cancer - thanks for giving to the American Cancer Society.

Record Crowd Of 75,000 Views Christmas Parade

Dec. 16 - 22
1954
45 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

A record crowd of 75,000 viewed the city's third annual Christmas parade which ran for two miles, beginning at Quincy High School and ending at Greenleaf St. This was an increase of 25,000 over last year's crowd.

The crowd also represented the second largest number of people to view a parade in the city, with the record of 100,000 set by the Tercentenary Parade in 1925.

Participating in the parade were 2,500 marchers in 50 units and 1,800 musicians. Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa was the honorary parade marshal with Sgt. Frederick Tighe leading the parade with a contingent of 20 policemen.

PLANS APPROVED FOR TWO NEW SCHOOLS

The school committee approved plans for the new six-room Great Hill School in Houghs Neck and the eight-room school in Germantown. Architects from Gilbert Associates predicted that the Great Hill School could be ready for the opening of classes next fall.

In other business, the committee named Ruth Abiatti as principal at Atherton Hough and transferred Edna Abiatti from the Washington School to the assistant principal's post at Snug Harbor.

EDDIE MORRIS HONORED AT TESTIMONIAL

Edward "Eddie" Morris of East Elm Ave. was honored at a combined 75th birthday and testimonial at the Winfield House.

Morris served in both the House of Representatives and the State Senate from 1915-1917, but was known in recent years as the official announcer for Harvard games for 30 years. While serving as a linesman at Harvard he originated the arm and leg signal system that standardized the system and was adopted by athletic associations across the U.S.

An avid athlete all his life, he was a boxer and baseball player.

Yellow Cake Plus

Over the weekend, I began to bake a favorite recipe of mine of plain yellow cake, but with this cake the addition of lemon or orange can turn the cake into something different. I had both oranges and lemons in the house, but I opted for the lemon and it was so easy and delicious. I used a lemon frosting also.

Yellow Cake Plus

1 1/2 sticks butter or margarine
1 1/4 cups sugar
3 large eggs
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups flour
3/4 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a baking pan sprinkling the bottom with flour. I usually use a nonstick cooking spray.

Soften butter until creamy. Add the sugar and beat until fluffy. Add the eggs one at a time. Add the baking powder, vanilla, salt and beat until blended.

Add half the flour and half the milk and continue to mix. Add the remaining flour and milk until blended.

If you want to make the lemon cake, add 1 1/2 teaspoons grated lemon peel and 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice when adding the eggs. For the orange cake, add 2 1/2 teaspoons grated orange peel and 1/4 cup fresh orange juice when adding the eggs. Reduce milk to 1/2 cup instead of 3/4 cup.

Bake 30-35 minutes, and cool before placing it onto a rack. It will stay for days in the refrigerator. I served it with a side of vanilla ice cream!

Wollaston Glee Club Concert Sunday

Lincoln Hancock Students Visit 'Highway To The Past'

Students from the Lincoln Hancock School in Quincy learned colonial history first-hand recently from a new exhibit at the Commonwealth Museum.

"Archaeology of the Central Artery Project: Highway to the Past" interprets materials recovered from archaeological sites in the path of Boston's "Big Dig" before construction began.

Secretary of the Commonwealth William Francis Galvin has put these state-owned materials on display in the museum because of their unique value for understanding our past. "These artifacts excite students about our history and give them a chance to understand the lives of everyday citizens," remarked Galvin.

The artifacts, found in Charlestown, the North End, Spectacle Island, and South Boston, give insights into daily life during the Colonial Period, Revolutionary War, and Industrial Revolution. The oldest bowling ball in North America, featured in the exhibit, tells about entertainment at the end of the seventeenth century. A wig curler -- for men -- and household utensils give valuable information about how families lived. Glass bottles and objects from South Boston illustrate an emerging Boston industry.

The exhibit highlights four self-sufficient women: a mother who thrived after divorcing her scoundrel husband, two business owners, and a squaw sachem, a Native American leader, from the area now occupied by Charlestown.

Archaeologists in the Massachusetts Historical Commission have developed educational programs and a curriculum to support the exhibit. The Lincoln Hancock students participated in activities designed for students in the museum. Their teacher, Ms. Maureen McKenna, remarked during the visit, "What a wonderful opportunity to look into the past. This exhibit fits in with the Social Studies Frameworks for grade 5." All educational materials are keyed to the Massachusetts Department of Education's curriculum frameworks.

"The collection at the Commonwealth Museum is an incredible asset to students and teachers across the state. I am pleased to see that the Lincoln Hancock School has taken the opportunity to bring students here to support what they are learning in the classroom," said Secretary Galvin.

The Commonwealth Museum is located in the Massachusetts Archives building at Columbia Point in the Dorchester section of Boston. The free exhibit is open weekdays from 9-5 and Saturdays from 9-3. To learn more about the exhibit and educational opportunities, call the Massachusetts Historical Commission at (617) 727-8470.

Sheets Named To National Boating Safety Advisory Council

U.S. Secretary of Transportation, Rodney Slater, has appointed Mayor James Sheets to the National Boating Safety Advisory Council.

Sheets will fill a vacancy in the public sector for a term expiring Dec. 31, 2001.

The council, sponsored by the Coast Guard, consists of 21 members who meet periodically. Since its creation under the Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971, the council has performed the role of advising the Coast Guard concerning development of national policies and regulations that serve to improve recreational boating safety.

The council meets twice each year. Its next meeting will be April 29-May 2, 2000, in Washington D.C. The fall meeting will be held Oct. 21-24, 2000, on the west coast.

The mayor will shortly be assigned to a subcommittee where most of the work is done.

Sheets said he is honored to be appointed by Slater, and looks forward to representing Quincy, Massachusetts and the northeast region on the council.

According to Mayor Sheets, "boating safety is becoming an increasing problem, as the number of pleasure boats increase, and the use of new water sporting boats and equipment proliferates," Sheets said.

He said that what he learns from serving on the council would be beneficial to Quincy and other communities along the northeast coast.

VICTORY SUPERMARKET donated $15,000 to local charities and community projects when it opened its newest store at 475 Hancock St., North Quincy. Shown here are Victory President Arthur (Jay) DiGeronimo, Jr. with Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs, recipient of a $2,500 check; Mayor James Sheets, who cut the ribbon at the grand opening, and Marion Eisenberg, director of Community Programs.

New Fund For Permanent Affordable Housing

cated in Quincy has created permanent housing for 14 formerly homeless veterans.

The McIntyre House came into existence through Father Bill's Place and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services in collaboration with Quincy Veterans Services and Quincy Housing Authority.

According to Yazwinski, this housing program has been a tremendous resource for people who need a safe and affordable place to live. One person who can testify to this is Eddie O'Neil, a former homeless veteran who served as the program's first house manager.

"The Sheila McIntyre House brought back my self esteem," says Eddie. "Without this housing resource I would have been in a homeless shelter for years waiting for an apartment. The housing made it easier for me to get back on my feet.

"I was able to have my daughters come over for dinner to a place I could call home. When I moved in I realized now I had the chance to go back to school and finally work toward my college degree."

This past year, Eddie moved out of the single room house and has an apartment in Quincy. He has completed a certificate program at U-Mass and is now working as a substance abuse counselor at the New England Veterans Shelter in Boston. Eddie is also serving on the United Way Emergency Food and Shelter Board for Norfolk County.

The new permanent housing fund will help provide resources for similar housing programs and projects.

To support this fund and as Eddie says, "give people hope," send contributions to Father Bill's Permanent Housing Fund, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Two Quincy Students Nominated For U.S. Service Academies

Two Quincy residents are among 30 students from the South Shore and Cape Cod area nominated by Congressman William Delahunt for appointment to the United States Service Academies.

Delahunt nominated Richard Loughmiller for both the Military Academy and the Air Force Academy ad Steve Wilkie for the Naval Academy.

"It is a privilege to nominate these accomplished students for such a first-rate education," Delahunt said. "These young people, their families and teachers can take great pride in this opportunity."

Delahunt said dozens of prospective nominees were reviewed by his Congressional Service Academy Selection Committee which included Rosemary Wahlberg, retired director of Quincy Community Action Programs.

The names of the students have been forwarded without preferential listing to the respective academies which will make the final appointment decisions, Delahunt said.

Board Suspends SOI Liquor License For Seven Days

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Violations incurred during a private party on Nov. 27 at The Quincy Sons of Italy has resulted in the suspension of their liquor license for seven days.

The motion to suspend the license was made by police Chief Thomas Frane and seconded by Building Inspector Walter White.

The vote was taken Tuesday when the License Board heard the allegations from Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, the city's liquor inspector.

Perchard said "no one was checking" as to where the liquor was going" that night, and said there was "no one in control" in the absence of the maitre d', a violation of license board rules. That night, Maitre d' Dennis Bertoni was called out on a family emergency. And the lodge's manager Pauline Roy was out of town.

When making the motion to suspend, Frane said the Sons of Italy has been a 'good neighbor to the city" and has contributed medical equipment to the city through the years. However, he continued. the rules and regulations were violated and the absence of the maitre d' contributed somewhat causing the situation to get "out of hand."

Perchard indicated that it's "no secret that the lodge is in financial trouble."

Atty. Thomas Flaherty, representing the Sons of Italy told the board to focus on the one incident, and not the fact that they are "financially in trouble" He said the club which is "trying to do the right thing" is in a much better position this year, than last year when they filed for Chapter 11.

According to Det. William Landergan, the detail officer at the function, the fight, which began about 11:30 p.m. lasted about "10 minutes". Prior to that, he said the family party was attended in the beginning with about 150 guests. But as the night wore on, he was concerned when the crowd "increased dramatically" from 200 and then to about 300 guests. The two bartenders and club members helped when a guest was stabbed with a ball point pen and was taken by ambulance at the Quincy Medical Center.

According to the club's manager Pauline Roy, the sons of Dennis Bertoni, the maitre d' were at a sports event. They are usually picked up by his father-in-law, but that night, he was ill, so Bertoni's wife, who was working, called him and asked him to pick up his sons. Roy, who was out of town on that particular night, said Bertoni was gone about 45 minutes. However, Perchard said when he arrived at 10 p.m. he "never saw Bertoni".

Perchard questioned Roy about the guidelines given to the lodge regarding functions. Roy, who has been manager at the Sons of Italy since January, 1999 said she had never seen the guidelines. However, after the vote was taken, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, who chaired the meeting in the absence of Joseph Shea, said he concurred with Chief Frane's assessment, and said the first thing Roy should have known were the guidelines issued by the license board. The event, a cultural one, was likened to a bar mitzah.

Gorman added that it was "not up to the police officer", but the maitre d' to control the group.

When Roy testified that there were two functions that night, one on the first floor and one on the second floor, Perchard asked why they weren't floor walkers on the bottom floor. That is when Perchard showed Roy the copy of the guidelines sent to the Sons of Italy before Roy's appointment to the club. When Roy looked at the copy, that is when she said she had never seen it.

The Sons of Italy has the right to appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

The suspension will begin when the club and the license board meet as to the best days to close.

by Tony Centorino, Kevin McGroarty and Bill Starkie

BREAKING THE CODE

When the "check engine" light flashes, what does it mean? The answer involves the vehicle's electronic control system. It is made up of a series of sensors (throttle, oxygen, knock, etc.) that monitor the various engine parameters, a computer that monitors the signals from these sensors and calculates any necessary adjustments and a variety of actuators that carry out the adjustments. Typically, if the computer detects an electrical problem, a warning light will come on in the instrument cluster to alert the driver. At the same time, the computer will store in its memory a numeric code that identifies the specific electrical circuit in which the problem lies. By checking this diagnostic code, the technician can quickly identify the problem.

Dashboard warning lights are there to protect your investment. Don't disregard them. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we want you to be well informed about every system in your car. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. We also use the AllData CD-Rom based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Give us a try! We'll earn your trust! We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

HINT: After a repair is completed, the technician will erase the codes from the computer's memory.

BEATING THE BUSHES

A study of the bushmen of the Kalahari desert provides some useful information about blood pressure and aging. Much like other tropical forest populations, the bushmen's mean blood pressure does not rise between the ages of 20 and 83. There were no cases of hypertension or coronary heart disease found in the population and serum cholesterol levels were found to be very low. This latter fact was probably attributable to a diet consisting mainly of nuts and game meat, which is very low in saturated fat. The low blood pressure and low lipid values of the elderly bushmen supports the view that changes in blood pressure are more a function of lifestyle than aging.

It's never too late to modify your lifestyle, although it is always challenging at any age--that's why it's useful to find the right kind of support. Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers numerous living options including 110 private apartments. Our warm, homelike setting brings comfort and peace of mind to our residents. For more information, call 617-770-3264. We're just nearby at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. The elderly bushmen of the Kalahari also followed a low calorie diet.

Marina Place presents a Holiday Program of Christmas Carols by The Opels on Friday, December 17 at 2:00pm. This musical presentation is free and open to the public. Please call 617-770-3264 to reserve your seat.

Safety Tips From NFPA

Home Fires, Deaths Up During Winter Heating Season

When families think of winter, they often think of holiday parties, festive decorations, and glowing fireplaces.

What they may not realize is that December, January and February are the leading months for home fires ad home fire deaths in the U.S.

On average, more than one-third of U.S.home fire deaths occur during the winter months.

The nonprofit National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA) statistics show that heating equipment fires are the second leading cause of fire deaths in American homes, but during the winter, they are the number-one culprit. Tens of thousands of home heating fires kill hundreds of people on average each year.

According to Quincy-based NFPA, home heating fires are most commonly caused by inadequate chimney cleaning, placing things that can burn too close to space and portable heaters, fueling errors involving liquid-or gas-fueled heaters, and flaws in the design, installation or use of heating equipment.

"The good news is that most of these fires are preventable. It's simply a matter of being aware that these hazards exist, and taking the few steps necessary to avoid them," says Sharon Gamache, NFPA's Executive Director of High Risk Outreach.

NFPA, the Quincy Fire Department and Beechwood Community Life Center recommend having all home heating systems and chimneys inspected annually and cleaned, if necessary, before the start of each heating season.

If you use space or portable heaters, keep anything that can burn, including people, pets, and furniture, at least three feet away. When leaving the room or going to sleep, make sure to turn the heaters off.

Beechwood's "SAFE Seniors" Program includes a full range of Fire Prevention programming, information and referral. Fliers, pamphlets and other informational materials are available at the Center. Call 471-5712.

SANDRA FENNELLY of the Quincy office receives the Jack Conway & Co.'s Thanksgiving Award from President Richard Cahill.

Sandra Fennelly Wins Conway Award

Sandra Fennelly recently was awarded Jack Conway & Co.'s annual "Thanksgiving Award" for her work in the Quincy office.

Chairman Jack Conway and President Richard F. Cahill presented the award at the company's annual Thanksgiving breakfast at Plymouth Plantation. Winners from each office received a Thanksgiving turkey in recognition of their efforts throughout the year.

"What makes the Thanksgiving award so special is that the winners are chosen by their colleagues," Conway said. "Each office's sales team selects the person they feel best represents the Conway spirit of cooperation, helpfulness and goodwill."

As part of the event, Conway associates and employees collected nearly $1,000 worth of canned food and other non-perishable goods to benefit MainSpring House, a homeless shelter operated by the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

News To Smile About

(NAPS)—There are more oral care products on the market today then ever. Toothpastes promise to clean, remove stains, help prevent tartar and even whiten teeth. With all the choices, how does a consumer know what to look for in a toothpaste?

According to Dr. Gerard Kugel, Head of the Division of Operative Dentistry at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine, "consumers should look for a toothpaste that provides fluoride, baking soda and peroxide, the ingredients dentists recommend most for the care of teeth and gums."

But many toothpastes available today offer more than just therapeutic benefits. They also offer cosmetic advantages and help consumers achieve a whiter and brighter smile. The consumer desire for whiter teeth is evidenced by the fact that the whitening category has grown by 34 percent in the past year alone, leaving consumers many products to choose from.

There are products available that provide both the health benefits and cosmetic benefits that consumers want and are safe to use everyday. One of the newest whitening toothpastes on the market, Mentadent Advanced Whitening, was proven to be more effective at inhibiting and removing tooth stains than leading whitening toothpastes Aquafresh Whitening and Rembrandt Whitening toothpastes.

In a consumer test, more than one-third of panelists began to see a difference in the whiteness of their teeth after using Mentadent Advanced Whitening after only two weeks. This number jumped to 60 percent after a full two months of brushing with the product.

Dr. Kugel cautions that there are many factors that effect how white your teeth look on any given day and recommends that if you are going to assess your own tooth color, you do it:

- once a week
- at the same time
- in the same lighting conditions
- after your routine oral hygiene regimen.

Holiday Safety Tips From American Red Cross

Use Common Sense This Season

The American Red Cross reminds families to use common safety sense throughout this holiday season, the last before the new millennium.

The following safety tips pinpoint ways to avoid potential dangers:

Be Careful with Holiday Candles - Keep candles away from decorations or other combustible materials. Don't leave children unattended in a room with lit candles. Keep candles, matches and lighters out of the reach of children. Avoid using candles during parties. Never display lighted candles in windows or near exits.

Test Tree Trimmings - When decorating with lights, purchase only those labeled by a testing laboratory. If decorating an outside tree, use only those lights labeled for outdoor use. Don't overload electrical outlets, and always unplug all lights before leaving home or going to bed. Never put electrical lights on a metal Christmas tree.

Keep Christmas Trees Fresh - Choose a fresh Christmas tree and secure it in a sturdy stand. Place the tree away from heat sources and exits, and water it daily. If you purchase an artificial tree, be sure is labeled as fire-retardant.

Prepare for Holiday Parties - Decorate only with flame-retardant or noncombustible materials. If guests will be smoking, provide them with large, deep ashtrays and check them frequently. After the party, check inside and under upholstery and in trash cans for cigarette butts that may be smoldering.

Designate a Driver - When attending a party, designate a non-drinking driver. If you are hosting a holiday gathering, be sure there are non-alcoholic beverages for guests who are driving.

Inspect Fireplaces and Wood Stoves - Have your chimney connections and flues inspected by a professional and cleaned if necessary prior to the start of every heating session. Use a sturdy screen when burning fires. Burn only wood - never burn paper or pine boughs. If purchasing a factory-built fireplace or wood stove, select one listed by a testing laboratory, and have it installed according to local codes. If you plan to hang stockings on your fireplace, do not use the fireplace for fires.

Buckle Up - During the holiday months, people travel more than ever. Wearing a seat belt may prevent injury in a motor vehicle collision. Ensure that all passengers are wearing safety belts. Seat children in the back seat of the care and in approved safety seats if younger than six years old, or according to local law.

Get Your Furry Friends a Special Gift - Pet First Aid, developed by the Red Cross and Humane Society of the United States, is an important guide to help people prevent, prepare for and respond to the emergency needs of their pets.

Enroll in a First Aid & CPR Course - Although these tips can help prevent an emergency, it is also important to be prepared should an emergency situation arise. To enroll in a first aid or CPR course, contact your local American Red Cross.

Prepare a Y2K Plan - As you would in preparation for a storm of any kind, have enough disaster supplies to last several days. You should have:

- Non-perishable foods such as tuna fish, canned fruit and peanut butter
- Bottled water (one gallon per person)
- An ample supply of prescription and nonprescription medications
- Coats and blankets to keep warm
- Flashlights and extra batteries
- Extra cash.

For more information or to enroll in a Red Cross CPR and First Aid class, call 617-375-0700, ext. 221.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Stephen P. Tobias
Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist

"I hear what I want to hear". How would you know? This statement is commonly used by people who have not yet come to terms with their hearing loss! It is painful to hear it, because I know that they are years away from trying to correct their loss. Most people are unaware how an uncorrected hearing loss can affect their lives. The results of a recent survey of over 4000 hearing impaired people and their significant others have been published. Some of the highlights are as follows:

•People with untreated hearing loss register significantly higher levels of depression, anger and frustration, anxiety, and other negative emotions than do people with comparable hearing loss who use hearing aids.

• Nearly half of the hearing aid wearers surveyed reported improvement in their overall quality of life attributable to their use of hearing aids. More than 60% of the family members or close friends reported that hearing aids had improved the lives of users.

You cannot afford to ignore a hearing loss. Live your life to its fullest and be healthy! Now you go and spread the news! Steve

North Quincy Boys' Preview

Stevenson: 'We Should Improve Dramatically'

By CHRIS POISSON

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Missing from last year's North Quincy basketball team is all-purpose standout forward Frank McNamara who graduated in May.

Not to worry, though.

The intensity, passion and desire he brought onto the court remains on Hancock's hardwood as the Red Raiders shift gears into the 1999-2000 season.

"McNamara developed a great intensity in these kids," said Ted Stevenson, who is back for his 13th season as head coach. "It's a great group to work with. They're working hard. Our intensity has been great. I haven't had to really get on them at all in practice about intensity. They just do it."

There's excitement floating around the gym these days. Even with the loss of McNamara, Stevenson believes his kids should improve dramatically on last season's 3-17 record and be a force to reckon with for several years.

"We have a lot of kids with varsity experience," Stevenson said. "We've got seven juniors and all but two of them have experience. And one of our sophomores started as a freshman. I think we'll be very good for the next two or three years."

But with five seniors on the squad now, North Quincy will look to make a run this year in what seems to be a wide-open Old Colony League.

"I think the league is more balanced," said Stevenson, echoing Quincy coach John Franceschini's thoughts on the league. "Bridgewater is a step down. Barnstable is going to be very good and Silver

The objectives include acquainting students with the banking industry and the recent technological advances made in the industry, teaching students the importance and basics of money management, and providing students with a better understanding of the bank's services.

North Quincy Girls Track Experience Could Be Boost

The North Quincy girls' winter track team returns 14 lettermen from a year ago and it hopes the experience can boost it to the top of a leveled Old Colony League.

Coming off of last year's 4-3 record, the Red Raiders are picked to finish fourth by league coaches, behind Bridgewater-Raynham, Silver Lake and Falmouth. Silver Lake won the championship last season.

Even with the even playing field, head coach Geoff Hennessy believes some areas of the team will need to improve if his team is going to make a postseason run.

"We need help in the dash and hurdles, but we're fairly strong in everything else," said Hennessy said, who begins his 12th season.

Indeed, junior long sprinters Colleen Lahar (300) and Kellyrose O'Brien (4th in Class A 600) will be tough to be beat. Senior Genevieve O'Brien is moving up to the 1000 meters to join the powerful crew of seniors Lynda Wilson, Sarah Houghton and Christine Marre, junior Linda Nguyen and sophomore Natalie Caron.

Sophomore Laura Wells has moved from the 1000 meters to the hurdles after a successful campaign last spring and will be assisted by seniors Charlene Cote and Sarah Price.

In the dash, Hennessy will have to fill the gap left by standout Kellie Johnston (UMass-Dartmouth). Senior Liz Leuchte will step into that role.

A six-deep shot-put squad should contribute with the return of senior Lisa DellaCroce, who was out for most of last winter with a blood disorder. State qualifiers Lena Yuen and Ellen Tang, along with junior Jackie Murphy and sophomores Laura Matos and Sherie DeMonte, a transfer from Norwood, accompany DellaCroce.

In the high jump, freshman Krystle Neves joins sophomore veterans Kate Markhard and Sam Chaisson.

North Quincy scrimmaged Newton North last week and opened its season Monday (Dec. 13) in a tri-meet with Silver Lake and Taunton at the Reggie Lewis Center.

North Quincy sends its freshmen team to Brown University today (Thursday) and Friday the JV squad heads to the Lewis Center for an all-JV meet. Sunday, North Quincy's top athletes compete in the Winter Festival at the Lewis Center.

"We have the daunting task of figuring out where to put the 47 girls who came out for the program," Hennessy said. "We've got kids from every fall sport, so there's lost of athleticism. We have great kids, a great staff, good sports medicine support. We'll just work hard and see what develops."

Franceschini: 'League Parody A Plus For Us'

The Old Colony League has been remodeled for the 1999-2000 basketball season.

In the OCL's earlier editions, there was a clear-cut line between the good and the bad. There were no teams that made Cinderella-like, storybook sprints to the state tournament.

Last year, it was Barnstable, Silver Lake, Bridgewater-Raynham and Falmouth floating atop the league. Taunton, Plymouth South, North Quincy and Quincy found themselves grouped together in shallow waters.

But at the high school level, graduation can quickly change the balance of power. And, yes, it has possibly given the league a slight makeover.

"The Old Colony League is not as top-heavy as it has been in years past," said Quincy coach John Franceschini before practice last week. "I think with Bridgewater-Raynham losing a senior-dominated team last year, Falmouth losing a senior-dominated team, and Barnstable losing some key people to injuries, it puts parody in the league."

So where does Quincy fit into this? "It's a plus for us," said Franceschini, who'll be starting his 14th season. "Besides [Silver Lake and Barnstable], I think it's going to be a crapshoot as to where everyone falls."

Silver Lake is picked as the league favorite as it returns everyone from its 10-win, tourney season of a year ago.

Coming off a tough sixth-place finish (6-14) last season, the Presidents will roll the dice and hope it lands them in the upper-echelon of the OCL.

"I think it's going to be a good year for the league," Franceschini said. "I don't think there is a team in our league this year that does not have the capabilities of beating one another. It's one of those years where there is no superstar."

There may be a superstar shortage but Quincy has a pretty darn good player in senior guard Dan Kelly, who's nearing 1,000 points for his career. Unfortunately, Quincy might not

Stevenson: 'We Should Improve Dramatically'

(Cont'd From Page 21)

Lake is the team to beat. But I think both Quincy and us have a shot to be right up there. I really do."

Tri-captains Justin Drysdale, Brian Burke and Matt McCann, along with Dan O'Toole and T.J. Bell make up the strong senior class. Drysdale and O'Toole will start and Burke and Bell will come off the bench. McCann is out with an injury.

"We have real good leadership from our seniors," Stevenson said. "They're making the younger kids work because they want to play. They know these younger kids are good, and they have to work hard."

Drysdale and O'Toole are North Quincy's version of the Spurs' David Robinson-Tim Duncan combo. Drysdale, 6-foot-9, will anchor the defense as he's plugged into the center position. O'Toole, 6-7, a transfer from Archbishop Williams, is his sidekick. Toss in 6-6 junior Matt Mooney off the bench and you have a three-headed beast.

Sophomore Phil McGillicuddy, who led the team in scoring with 12.5 points per game, returns as the other starting forward. He started last year as a freshman and should improve on those numbers. He sprained his ankle in the first scrimmage and was expected back for the season opener, which was Tuesday (Dec. 14) against Norwood.

Junior Joe Holleran is one half of the starting backcourt as the other guard spot is still up for the taking. Juniors Brandon Sleeth, Mike Keddy, Chris Lockhead and sophomores Pat Bregoli and John O'Connell make up a strong bench.

"We have an awful lot of depth," Stevenson said. "It's the most depth I've ever had. We can almost go 15 deep. A lot of guys will play almost every game."

With this depth, the press is well-suited for the club and Stevenson plans on attacking with traps, particularly with Drysdale and O'Toole as safeguards if they are broken.

"Defensively, we plan on pressing a lot, running, trying to wear teams down," Stevenson said. "And even if they beat us, they still have to come down and shoot over 6-7, 6-9 kids. We're going to put a lot of pressure on doubling all over the court, especially the other team's point guard."

Offensively, the Red Raiders should put up huge numbers, as evident of their 44-point, first-half performance in a scrimmage against Hanover.

North Quincy has a deadly inside-outside offensive attack. Drysdale, O'Toole and Mooney are potent paint players that should provide a lot of inside scoring.

If opponents choose to double one of them, North Quincy has plenty of sharpshooters to kick the ball out to. McGillicuddy and Sleeth should get many open looks from beyond the arc.

"We have the capability of scoring a lot this year," Stevenson said. "We have a strong inside game with the big kids, and we have some kids that can really shoot the basketball. McGillicuddy and Sleeth can really drill it. If you leave Sleeth alone at the three-point line, it's almost automatic. He can really bury them."

Although North Quincy picked up only three wins last season, all in the league, it was never really blown out of any games. It also had to face some top non-league opponents in Boston English and South Boston.

This season, with the two Boston powerhouse schools absent from the schedule and the league thinned out, Stevenson feels North Quincy has all the weapons to compete for the OCL crown.

"It's just a matter of getting off to a good start and keeping every body healthy," Stevenson said. "I think we're going to challenge right off the top. We've got so much depth that if someone is not having a good night, someone else can fill in.

"Once they start getting a couple wins under their belt and realize they can win, they'll take right off."

Franceschini: 'League Parody A Plus For Us'

see him until the millennium.

Kelly had his left knee scoped Nov. 29, an injury he sustained during the football season, and will likely miss the first four games.

"Dan Kelly has been our top scorer over the past two seasons," Franceschini said. "He's by far our best player. The kids know it's going to be a bit before he comes back. A lot of times that can hurt you but I think with this group it will help us. It will force some other people to step up."

When Kelly missed a game during the football season, junior Mark Robertson stepped in behind center to direct the team. As of now, it looks like he'll take his spot again and team up with senior guard Chase Clarke in the backcourt while Kelly is out of action.

The Presidents return eight players from last year's squad, three who were starters. Senior Sean Fitzpatrick returns in the middle, leaving the two forward spots up for grabs.

"Fitz is 6-4 and most of the time last year he was dealing with kids three to five inches bigger," Franceschini said. "He's a big kid. He relies on his strength. He's over 200 pounds. He's a football lineman with some very good skills. So like everyone else, he has to use that to keep these big kids off the glass."

Lack of size has been a concern around here for a while. Quincy doesn't have a giant who can camp underneath the boards for easy put-backs, so the team relies heavily on its shooting.

"We don't have a lot of size and we haven't had size here in a while," Franceschini said. "The reason I say that is we're really forced to shoot the ball well. We're going to live and die primarily on how we shoot the ball over the course of the year."

Last year the shooting killed them. Besides Kelly, no one put the ball through the net consistently, and when the fourth quarter rolled around the team collapsed.

"What hurt us a great deal last year was shooting in the clutch," Franceschini said. "Our fourth quarter stats were not good. And a lot of that was decision-making."

Franceschini believes the decision-making should be much improved with a year of varsity experience under their belts, particularly with junior forward Adam Jurewicz, senior Larry Antonellis and Robertson. The trio will be asked to add some offensive punch.

"Those are three guys that played a lot of varsity last year," Franceschini said. "So their roles will continue, but we're looking for a lot more from them on the offensive end."

Derek Rogers, who had moved to Brockton a few years ago, is back in Quincy and should be a reliable offensive spark plug.

The success of this team, however, may come down to the play of three sophomores - Troy Coleman, Adam Vecchione and Michael Lorenzano.

"They're coming up from a real good freshman group," Franceschini said. "They were three of the primary players, and three kids who we hope will give us needed shots in the arm. All three can play both guard and forward for us."

The strength of this team, the back-bone, will be team defense. Quincy will rotate eight to 10 bodies and play man-to-man, in-your-face type pressure defense. If there's any zone it will be a zone press.

The defense is the catalyst to the offense. The defense is what kept them in games last season, where 12 games were decided by less than five points.

"It's a very good defensive team," Franceschini said. "Our defense is going to give us our offense. We'll try to take advantage of applying pressure So the one thing I can guarantee is we're always going to give it on the defensive end."

Quincy will not change a thing from last year and hopes its same style of play will propel them to the top of what looks like to be a refurbished OCL.

Recreation Department, Elks Co-Sponsoring Free Throw Contest

Quincy Recreation and the Quincy Lodge of Elks will co-sponsor the Elks' National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest.

The Quincy competition is the first step in a national contest for boys and girls age 8 to 13. Contestants are assigned to three separate age categories in both boys and girls divisions. Age groups are 8-9, 10-11 and 12-13. Contestant age is determined as of April 1, 2000.

Each participant is awarded points for successful free throws. Boys and girls in the age 8-9 group will shoot from four feet in front of the regulation foul line.

Program will be supervised in neighborhood gymnasiums by Quincy Recreation leaders assigned their regular recreation programs in that area.

The program is free and contestants may participate even if not previously enrolled in the recreation program. Participants may choose any of the various times or sites to compete, however they may only compete in the Quincy qualifier.

"We are pleased that the Quincy Lodge of Elks has once again provided this program for the benefit of our participants," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "Many Quincy residents in the past have enjoyed the benefits of this activity at the local, regional and state level as well as the national championship.

"The Elks devote a great deal of attention to youth programs. Their commitment to our children helps make Quincy a better place to live," Welch added.

Quincy Lodge Hoot Shoot Chairman is Ed Miller, former North Quincy High School basketball player and coach, now the athletic director of Marshfield High School.

The win pushed Quincy's record to 9-1 and earned them a promotion to the "Lower A" division. The Quincy Squirt C team moved up to the B division and also picked up a win over Wellesley. The promotions are a credit to the strong Quincy Youth Hockey program and a tribute to all involved.

Rob DeAngelis and co-captain Joe Canavan also scored for Quincy.

A strong defensive performance by veterans Ted Finnegan and Dave Aruffat, along with netminder Brendan Gavigan, kept the feisty Wellesley offense in check.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

A tradition is defined as an unwritten belief, law or custom. Generally a tradition is an expression or means of implementing a principle or belief, but as time passes frequently the principle is forgotten. Being the creatures of habit that we are, we continue a tradition because others before us did it that way. But, if tradition has replaced or smothered principle, it is time for change . . . There is a story told about a young couple preparing their first Ham dinner. In preparing it the young wife asked her husband to "cut the end off the ham." When asked "why?" she said, "Mother always did it that way." Mother was called and asked why she always did this. Her answer was, "Because Grandma always did it that way." Grandma was then called and asked why . . . Her answer was, "Because the pot was not big enough!"

As we see in this illustration, often times a practice is continued and the reason forgotten. Grandma followed a principle; others just followed Grandma. Granted, it is not wrong to follow. Traditions are not in themselves wrong. But if our actions are not based on principle, if we follow blindly, if we do not seek after knowledge, we can come to a place of confusion or defeat. . .

Historian Seeks Old North Quincy Yearbooks

Joseph Rogers, North Quincy High class of 1935, is making an audio history of the school's early years and could use a little assistance.

Rogers, of Rice Rd., is currently researching the years 1927 to 1935 and needs the loan of any copies of The Manet, the school's yearbook, issued before January 1930. Those copies are missing from the archives at North Quincy High.

Although he is doubtful any 1927 yearbooks exist, the oldest Manet he has reads "Volume 3, No. 1," so Rogers is certain that earlier issues are out there, probably in the corners of attics or at the bottoms of old trunks.

North Quincy High opened its doors Feb. 1, 1927 as a junior high and became NQHS in Sept. of 1931, graduating its first class in 1934.

Those years are special, Rogers says, because some of those students, most notably the classes of 1934 and 1935, spent five or six years at the same school, forging friendships that have lasted a lifetime.

"The closeness of those two classes was extraordinary," Rogers said. "Almost everyone knew each other by their first name. We even had a joint 25th reunion down at Nantasket Beach."

Rogers wants to cover all aspects of school life: the daily classes, the teachers, the sports and clubs, the trade school for boys and the homemakers' courses for girls. "Yes, we had homemakers' courses," Rogers remembers. "Today the girls would laugh them out of existence."

Rogers himself was a member of North Quincy High's first football team of 1932, which posted a 7-2 record playing other high schools and the junior varsity of Quincy High.

The first varsity matchup between the two schools, said Rogers, occurred in 1933 with upstart North Quincy upsetting Quincy 6-0 on a pass from "Bat" Nelson to Walter Joly. A year later, a vengeful Quincy team sought to settle the score but could manage only a 0-0 tie. "It was a moral victory for North Quincy," said Rogers. "Their captain, Vic DiGravio, actually kicked the game-winning field goal but it was called back for offsides."

Rogers also wants to chronicle other high school memories, like old Coleman Stadium.

If anyone has any old Manets or knows where they might be found, contact Rogers at 472-1764.

ANSWERS TO CROSSWORD

Your Horoscope
by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Meditation puts you in touch with the philosophy of your feelings. You realize that your imagination is based on the great ideas that people have pondered in the past.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You feel as if you are dragging more than your fair share of baggage around with you everywhere you go. Learn to maximize your capacity rather than passing it all off onto an unsuspecting person.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your power is most strongly based on your ability to draw from within yourself. A challenge brings your skills to a new level, and you leave the field of competition with respect from all who are involved.

CANCER (June 21 July 22) You may feel a sense of shyness that makes you want to be alone. Know that being alone and being lonely are two separate things. Use the silence to soothe your emotions.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An energy is being exuded from you in wavelengths of incredible frequency. Perhaps you are able to convert the sunlight in your favor. Share your spirit with those around you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The generosity that you contain within could come head-to-head with a certain stinginess. The battle that ensues is enough to knock anyone out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The ability to analyze the unseen allows you to read into the actions of others. The stories you are able to accumulate make for a novel that could hit the best-seller list.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Watch for those who may be plotting and planning against you when you are looking the other way. Do your best not to stoop to their level when you discover their antics.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Creativity bubbles up from the depths of your soul to surprise you in weird and wonderful ways. Go with the flow that is led by your childish and imaginative intuitions.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Probing the unknown leaves you with a bad taste in your mouth. Even the known can be a bit unsettling. Make sure that the light is adequate enough for the job you've undertaken.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The intensity with which you find yourself going through your week almost amazes you. There are extremes in many different areas that are vying for you to apply it toward them.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) If you are standing by the sidelines, people may assume that you are not an active part of the game when that couldn't be further from the truth. The team captain does not necessarily have to be the best player.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to steady the ship even when the sea throws up a storm makes you an extremely desirable shipmate. You have the potential to shine whether you are a deckhand or the captain. The equality with which you treat people is the envy of others.

Businesses In Uproar Over Tax Rate Vote

said. "It will make neighboring towns and sister cities less expensive, and Quincy businesses will have to decide whether to pay or move elsewhere."

Uvanitte said the business community was ready to accept some tax increase to support the bailout of Quincy Medical Center but took issue with Councillor Daniel Raymondi, the sponsor of the 175% amendment, saying that the city already had tax deferments in place to help the families and elderly Raymondi said he was protecting. "But small business has no tax break," he added.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the QCBPA, called the lack of discussion "insulting to the business community" and said the tax rates will hurt business' involvement in other areas. "If donations that used to go to quality of life issues go to pay taxes, there will be a decrease in quality of life contributions for the city," Manning said.

Dean Rizzo, community development manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said the council's decision made him question the real strength of the public/private partnership in the city. Don Fawcett, owner of three Dependable Cleaners in the city, called the decision a "shame" and "an insult." Jay Asher, owner of WJDA radio station, expressed his disappointment that business leaders were not allowed to participate.

Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry, member of the Quincy Partnership, and member of the board of Quincy 2000, was not at the meeting but shared the concern of many city businesses large and small. "The new tax rates are destructive to businesses in the city and I certainly think business owners should have been heard at the meeting," Bertman said.

Council President Kolson, who voted against reconsideration, said that tax rate battles are nothing new to the council. Said Kolson: "All the taxes are high, no matter who you talk to, and that's just a fact of life. Both groups (homeowner and commercial) have to coexist in the structure and it makes it difficult to please everyone. We're not anti-business, but, especially with the hospital situation, we have to help where it's going to hurt the most, and that's with the homeowner."

As to business leaders not getting a chance to speak, Kolson said that he was bound by council procedure. "Those words (against the adjournment) are very elegant in some circles but they do not apply in this setting," Kolson said. "The Robert's Rules apply. When the two articles failed, and when Councillor Raymondi made a motion to adjourn with a second, I had no other option."

Kolson disagreed with Quincy 2000's claim that the tax burden would make Quincy a less attractive business site, saying, "Then Quincy 2000 is going to have to work a little harder and outreach further. With or without the tax increase, they can make Quincy attractive."

Councillor Raymondi said that he understood business leaders' frustration and was ready to discuss the issue but that, quite simply, the motion failed. "It was not a public hearing," Raymondi said. "The first and only item on the agenda failed. If there's no reconsideration, there's nothing to reconsider."

Raymondi said that he already felt comfortable that he had "enough information to render a judgment" on the issue and accepted the fact that, for the next few years, taxes would be high. "On this one, I simply felt that the homeowners, the renters, and the seniors needed the tax break."

The Department of Revenue currently lists ten cities and towns at the 175% tax level. They are: Brookline (rounded), Dighton (rounded), Chelsea, Clinton, Dedham, Fall River, Lynn, Nantucket, Revere, and Medford.

tions."

The mayor also said that running the city from his house for a few weeks "would not be a problem."

Helen Murphy, assistant to the mayor, said that Sheets began experiencing "fogginess" in his vision Monday and that the condition worsened Tuesday morning.

According to Murphy, Mayor Sheets consulted his optometrist who recommended that he see a specialist. The specialist then advised Sheets to schedule an operation to re-attach the retina.

Although Sheets said that the surgery is a serious one, he also pointed out that, in the last two decades, the procedure has become "routine."

Sheets suffered a badly bruised hip and shoulder early November when a ladder he was using at home gave way. That injury required a stay of several days at Quincy Medical Center.

Ayers' Vote Key For Compromise Plan

Highpoint On Way To Reality

After months of controversy and lawsuits, the Highpoint apartment project is on its way to reality.

The City Council was set to flash the green-light on a scaled-down version at a public hearing Tuesday night at the Quincy High School auditorium.

Going into the meeting at the The Sun's press time, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said he would cast his vote — which would be the decisive one — for the compromised plan.

Six votes were needed to approve the compromised project and his was the sixth.

He lined up with City Council President Peter Kolson, Michael D'Amico, Paul Harold, Frank McCauley and Patrick McDermott, who believe it is time to move on with it for the good of the city.

Ayers said he had given careful consideration to the issue but was finally swayed by the legal advice of Atty. Thomas Kiley. Said Ayers:

"The time to have saved this property either by changing the zoning laws or by purchasing the property has come and gone. The legal advice we've received is that this compromise is best for the city and that victory in court (against the 1600 unit Comprehensive Permit Plan) is unlikely. The alternative plan of subsidized housing is not the best option for the city of Quincy. We have no other

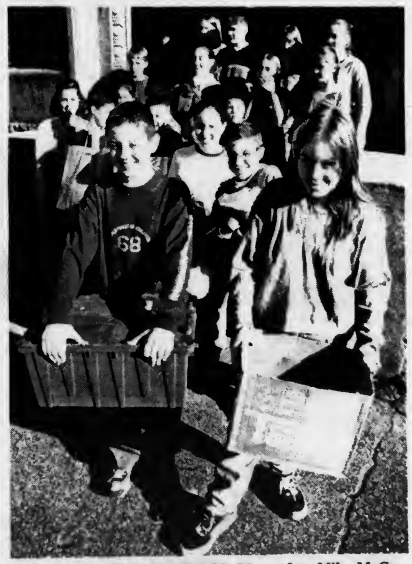
After Heated Debate

City Council Vote Ends Twin Rivers' Expansion

By CRAIG SALTERS

After heated debate and charges of misrepresentation, the city council Monday night voted not to remove an amendment from Twin Rivers Technologies' Tax Increment Financing (TIF) plan, an amendment the company saw as mandating union labor.



The company then promptly rescinded its TIF application and said it would discontinue its $77 million capital expansion at its Quincy Point plant, $25 million of which is already in place.

In November Twin Rivers, a major producer of fatty acid products located at the former Procter & Gamble plant in Quincy Point, received tax incentives which provided local tax relief from the city, estimated at a little more than $1,000 over 10 years, but more importantly allowed the manufacturer to qualify for a five percent investment tax credit from the state which could be worth nearly $4 million over the same period.

At the Nov. 15 meeting Councillor Daniel Raymondi added two amendments, the second of which contained language requiring Twin Rivers to hire contractors and subcontractors who: paid prevailing wage; had an apprentice program; furnished hospital and medical coverage; and provided accident insurance.

Council Approves Compromise Penn, Columbia Sts. Plan

A standing-room-only crowd of South Quincy residents packed Monday night's public hearing and witnessed Councillor Michael D'Amico's compromise traffic plan for Columbia and Penn Streets pass 7 to 1.

The 90-day trial plan calls for Columbia Street to become a dead-end at 41 Columbia St. and for Penn St. to become a northerly one-way where it intersects with Penn St.

Lesser, corresponding mitigation measures for Rodman, Liberty, and Trafford Streets, as well as two speed humps for Penn St., were passed later in the evening.

Councillor Tim Cahill was the lone vote against. Councillor Stephen Durkin was absent due to illness.

The plan will be reviewed after 90 days to decide whether to make the changes permanent, abandon the changes, make Penn St. a dead-end as well, or make any other revisions.

D'Amico thanked Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, DPW Commissioner David Colton, and the people of South Quincy for their input during the many meetings.

D'Amico said his goal was to be "proactive" in lowering South Quincy's ers, said that that language means union labor and that he was told as much by Michael Cheney, a consultant for the South Shore Building Trades Council.

Cheney charged that Mr. Angelico "was not telling the truth" and was supported by Thomas McKay, president of the SSBT.

The motion to strike amendment two was made by Councillor Frank McCauley and seconded by Councillor Cahill.

Councillors McCauley, Cahill, Peter Kolson, and Pat McDermott voted to strike the amendment.

Councillors Bruce Ayers, Michael D'Amico, Paul Harold, and Raymondi voted in the negative.

Councillor Stephen Durkin was absent due to illness.

After the 4-4 defeat, Angelico promptly informed the council that Twin Rivers was no longer seeking its TIF because it was discontinuing its expansion.

At several points during the meeting Angelico made the case that the language restricted Twin Rivers' ability to select contractors, finish its work on time, and compete.

Angelico said that Twin Rivers had a five-year "proven track record" of hiring from both union and open-shop contractors but that it had been unable to work out an agreement with the unions. Angelico pointed to contracts this year where no union contractor bid or where open-shop contractors were added to keep projects on schedule and noted that, with the amendment language, similar actions would be impossible in the future.

Angelico also said that Twin Rivers had no intention of leaving Quincy but that the amendment's language forced Twin Rivers to "revisit" its expansion plans in the city.

"This is not a vote for the exclusion of anyone," Angelico said of the motion to strike amendment two, "but for the inclusion of everyone."

Angelico's remarks met with derision from several union members in attendance and rebuttal from union representatives. McKay addressed the council and pointed to the Deer Island project which, he said, had similar language as amendment two yet had over 100 non-union contractors. McKay also said that Angelico did in fact threaten to move Twin Rivers out of the state at a recent meeting.

Councillor Raymondi, who sponsored both the original TIF agreement and the controversial amendment, made an impassioned defense of what he called the "pro-worker" language of the amendment, noting that the word "union" was not once used in the document.

The four provisions of the amendment, Raymondi explained, were taken verbatim from a 1998 executive order from Mayor James Sheets detailing responsible employer practices for all contractors and subcontractors working on public projects. Responding to Angelico's claim that the amendment mandated union labor, Raymondi pointed to construction projects at the Crane Library and Fore River Bridge which had similar language and yet had non-union labor.

Raymondi discussed each of the four points of the amendment in detail, summarizing that, in this day and age, he did not consider fair wages, proper training, medical coverage, and insurance unreasonable requests for a company with significant safety concerns and that, in most cases, was already providing these benefits.

"Stay true to your beliefs, stay true to your values," Raymondi urged his fellow councilmen. "I don't believe this is a deal breaker at all."

Raymondi's remarks were met almost immediately by a charge from Councillor McCauley that Raymondi was "playing to the gallery."

McCauley said that, in an earlier discussion, Raymondi had admitted that Twin Rivers would never be able to live with the amendment language.

McCauley also emphasized that the Twn Rivers' expansion was not a public project.

Raymondi denied the charge and later said that McCauley had misinterpreted Raymondi's comment that, "This is language they (Twin Rivers) wouldn't want to have."

Councillor Harold asked for clarification from both Angelico and Cheney on whether the amendment actually specified union labor or merely gave union preference. Harold said that he had spoken with several people at the state level who informed him that this was the only TIF of its kind in Massachusetts.

Councillor McDermott said that his no vote was a hard one and a "gut decision" on his part because he was uncomfortable with the precedent of the amendment. McDermott urged the council to come up with a set policy to support local workers in the coming year but said that the amendment sent the wrong message to business.

At one point in the debate Angelico warned that a no vote would kill Twin Rivers' expansion plans, limit local jobs, and decrease local taxes. "What it means is that everyone will lose," Angelico said.

In 1999 80% of Twin Rivers' contracts were awarded to union labor. Although only 35% of total contract dollars went to union labor, Angelico urged that number to be seen "in context," noting that some union work had to be shifted to non-union contractors and that some projects had no union bidders.

Foot Notes

by Dr. Richard A. Hacker

Surgeon-Podiatrist

PATIENTS HAPPY WITH BUNION SURGERY

People who undergo bunion surgery typically report significant improvement after six months, according to a new study by the American Orthopedic Foot and Ankle Society. Patients were asked to evaluate factors such as foot pain and shoe comfort both before surgery and six months after the procedure. The study found that bunion surgery is a highly effective procedure for alleviating pain. A bunion is a bump or bony prominence that forms where the big toe joins the foot. Bunions are usually caused by a misalignment of the big toe, or hallux valgus. Bunions can also occur around the little toe joint. These are called Tailor's bunions or bunionettes, because they are usually smaller than those at the big toe.

Don't be discouraged if surgery is recommended for your bunions or other podiatric problem. Although the problems haven't changed all that much, podiatric procedures have greatly improved over the past few years. If your feet hurt, there's no advantage to putting it off - see your podiatrist. If your don't have a family podiatrist at this time, we are accepting new patients at 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy. Please call 617-472-3466 for an appointment.

P.S. There are many treatments for bunions besides surgery, which should be used as a last resort if pain persists.

Food, Clothing, Gifts, Emergency Fuel Given

They're Putting Merry In Christmas For Many Needy Families

By CRAIG SALTERS

This holiday season six Quincy organizations will help over 1,500 local families in need, with that help coming in the form of food, clothing, gifts, and even emergency energy assistance.

The Salvation Army, the Quincy Lodge of Elks, The Koch Club, Father Bill's Place, The Quincy Crisis Center, and St. John's Church are just a handful of the many organizations working hard to ensure that all families, regardless of income, have something to celebrate.

Father William McCarthy of St. John's reported that, through its St. Vincent DePaul Society, the church will help roughly 1,000 families, providing food, clothing, and toys to such groups as My Brother's Keeper, Father Bill's Place, and Friends of the Unborn. Fr. McCarthy thanked his parishioners for their generosity and for their sponsorship of individuals and even families this Christmas, adding that the Quincy District Court had been extremely helpful this holiday season.

Major Ed Forster, who along with his wife Major Flo Foster commands the Quincy Temple Corps of the Salvation Army, said that 175 needy Quincy families will receive support this year, an increase from 1998. Families will receive food certificates and some families will receive toys thanks to the sponsorship of over 50 companies, groups, and individuals.

Foster said the Salvation Army also runs the Good Neighbor Energy Fund in conjunction with local gas and electric companies. The program, which is nearly a decade old, provides emergency funds up to $250 per family for those who apply and qualify.

Foster said that, although there is high employment, there is the increasing problem of underemployment. "Both people have jobs but both are making minimum wage," Foster said. "There are a lot of those families out there."

This year the Quincy Lodge of Elks distributed food baskets, complete with turkey and trimmings, to 150 local families. A van filled with toys accompanied the basket distribution so that those families who needed toys could help themselves.

Thomas Koch of the Koch Club, an all-volunteer organization started in 1948 and helping families at Christmas since 1952, said that 50 Quincy families received toys and gifts from the organization. The Koch Club gift baskets, Koch said, contained both a turkey and a ham as well as a box of non-perishables and a bag of fruits and vegetables.

Koch thanked those who contributed to the group's Christmas Charity Fund and emphasized that "every dollar that comes in goes out directly to the recipients."

Father Bill's Place will hold its annual Christmas meal from noon to 3 p.m. at the Christ Episcopal Church where Executive Director John Yazwinski estimates a gathering of 150 to 200 people. Yazwinski praised "the tremendous volunteer support" from both individuals and church groups. He made note of the special contributions of Abbadessa's Restaurant of Hingham, Wal-Mart, and AT&T. This year Abbadessa's held a holiday party/fundraiser and raised $2,500. That money went to Wal-Mart, who then provided residents of the shelter with store gift certificates at a discounted rate. Abbadessa's will also cater a New Year's Eve party for shelter residents complete with cooks, food, and a band. AT &T, Yazwinski said, provided 100 phone cards of 15 minutes to residents for both national and international use.

According to Rev. David Wooster, executive director of the Quincy Crisis Center, the center will work with various organizations to directly or indirectly provide food for 200 families. The center, as it does year round, will deliver food to those individuals who can't get to a food pantry, including a good amount of seniors. It will also hold a Christmas meal for the homeless today (Thursday) at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center. Wooster said the meal typically serves 120 but this year's could be scaled down somewhat due to a recent change in location.

In addition, the center is providing help to the Randolph Food Pantry, which has fallen on hard times, and is providing organizational and administrative assistance to Dorchester based "Amis De La Saggesse" (Friends of the Humble), a mostly Haitian food pantry in Codman Square which is only two years old. "Usually we don't cross the river," Wooster explained. "But, because of our strong history, we can do it, so we do."

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER employees with gifts for needy families collected as part of the Dianne DeVanna "Adopt A Family" program. Kneeling are Maryrose Mirick and Tamara Erdley. Standing, Michelle Cox, Jack Doyle, Bill Tringali and Jean Parker.

Council Approves Funds To Buy Marina Bay Property

The city council Monday night voted 8-0 to appropriate $530,000 for the eminent domain purchase of the Dickinson property at 542 East Squantum Street.

However, thanks to a successful Self-Help Grant submitted to the state by the Quincy Park Department, the state will reimburse Quincy for $250,000 of the purchase price.

The five-acre Dickinson parcel is mostly wetlands located at the entrance to Marina Bay. It was a top priority for the Mayor's Open Space Task Force, chaired by Thomas Koch, executive director of Parks, Cemeteries, and Forestry.

The grant application was submitted to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs in May 1999 by the Quincy Park Department. The application received support from Mayor James Sheets, the Quincy City Council, the Quincy Conservation Commission, the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs' Wetlands Restoration & Banking Program, the city of Quincy's Open Space Committee, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, and the Massachusetts Historic Commission.

"This was a widespread effort that would only have been possible with widespread support from the elected officials and agencies on the local and state level," said Koch in a statement released Monday. "As a result of our mutual goal of preserving Quincy's open space, we have guaranteed that this environmentally sensitive area will be protected from development forever."

The current owner of the property is Donald R. Dickinson et al. Trustees -- D & A Realty Trust of Braintree. The site once held a storage warehouse facility which burned down in the mid-1980's.

The parcel is currently zoned Planned Unit Development, with a small portion (0.3 acres) zoned as open space. It is one of the last remaining undeveloped, unprotected sites in the Marina Bay area.

According to Self-Help grant guidelines, the city must agree to protect the land as open space/conservation land in perpetuity.

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 15th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Quincy businessman Robert "Bob" Curry was honored for his long-time volunteer work in worthy civic and charitable causes as a member of many local organizations, including the Quincy Partnership, Quincy Commission on the Family and the Marie A. Curry Foundation which provides free mammograms for individuals not covered by health insurance.

Curry was selected from among 48 nominees submitted by Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final selection.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 23 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Friday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun

1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Shipyard Bond Approval Doesn't Convince Harold

The Massachusetts Development Finance Agency (MDFA) gave preliminary approval for $146 million in bonds for the Fore River Shipyard, but Councillor Paul Harold remains skeptical.

"The agency's rationale is, 'We're in it so deep, we should just pour more money into it,' Harold said Tuesday. "But a wiser course of action would be to resolve the problem and not just paper over it."

Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), owned by Greek national Sotiris Emmanouil, has missed several loan payments in its efforts to revive the Fore River Shipyard. MHI's general contractor, O. Ahlborg & Sons of Cranston, RI, walked off the job in August because of payment disputes. In addition, Harold provided magazine articles at a recent city council meeting showing that Mr. Emmanouil was currently the general manager of the Hellenic Shipyards in Greece.

The new plan would allow MHI to package their existing debt into tax-free bonds, bonds which can only be issued through a public entity such as MDFA. The tax breaks would serve as an incentive for private investors to purchase the bonds and bail out the ailing shipyard.

However, the question, said Harold, is not the tax credit "but the soundness of the underlying investment."

The Inspector General, Harold said, has raised serious questions concerning MHI's ability to complete the shipyard or repay its loans and the fact that there are still no written contracts to build ships.

The shipyard is currently more than a year behind schedule.

Special Praise For Quincy Youth

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As we begin the Christmas season, I would like to share a story with you.

On Oct. 15, my son, Michael Fitzgerald, was in a fatal car accident. For four days he lay in a coma in the Rhode Island Hospital, and passed away on Oct. 19.

Michael was a student at URI. For four days, his friends at URI and his friends from Quincy kept vigil and hung out in the waiting room at the hospital, from morning until late evening. These young people from Quincy traveled daily to Rhode Island, putting aside their lives, work schedules, etc., just to be there for their friends and his family. They unabashedly sobbed and prayed out loud. At any given time there were 30-50 people. I decline from naming them for fear of leaving someone out; they know who they are.

Michael was in a Trauma ICU, visitors to be "immediate family only." The staff allowed everyone, on a daily basis, to visit him. As I left the hospital after Michael's death, I thanked the nurses for bending the rules. The response was something to the effect: "Oh, no problem. They were all such ladies and gentlemen. What a great bunch of kids!" At that particular moment I felt like each one of them was mine. Their presence, compassion, and loyalty will forever remain in my memory, and the vision of that hospital waiting room does serve as some solace.

While our media stories are filled with negatives about young people, I want the City of Quincy to know that we have wonderful young people among us.

What I witnessed and experienced was truly "Peace On Earth And Good Will Towards Men." I am extremely proud and awed knowing these folks were a part of my son's life.

Tax Vote Would Have Been Different

The vote on the tax classification for business would have been different if the two newly elected councillors had taken office.

Both Gregory Hanley and Joseph Newton say they would have voted for Mayor James Sheets' recommendation and not Councillor Dan Raymondi's controversial amendment.

HANLEY

NEWTON

Both feel that the homeowner, although paying a smaller tax bill under Raymondi's amendment, will be hurt in the long-run as businesses become adversely affected and it filters down to the homeowner.

With Hanley and Newton sitting on the council, there would have been a majority five votes for the Sheets' recommendation over the Raymondi amendment which was twice approved on a 4-3 vote with two councillors absent each time.

In January, Hanley will succeed Peter Kolson in Ward 1 and Newton replaces Bruce Ayers in Ward 6.

Both Kolson and Ayers supported the Raymondi amendment.

Hanley and Newton would have joined Paul Harold, Frank McCauley and Patrick McDermott in backing the Sheets' recommendation.

Under Sheets' recommended 169 percent classification for business, the residential rate would have been $16.07 and the commercial $34.04. This would have meant an 83 cent increase for the homeowner and $1.76 for business.

Under the Raymondi amendment, business was classified at the maximum 175 percent.

It makes the residential rate $15.71, an increase of 47 cents and the commercial rate $35.25, a hike of $2.97.

The night Raymondi came up with his surprise amendment, the vote was 4-3 with Tim Cahill, Michael D'Amico and Ayers supporting him. Harold, McCauley and McDermott were opposed.

Kolson and Durkin were absent.

At the special meeting called to reconsider that vote, it again was 4-3 with Raymondi, Ayers, D'Amico and this time Kolson voting not to reconsider. Harold, McCauley and McDermott voted for reconsideration.

Cahill and Durkin were absent. Durkin missed both meetings because of illness.

Compared with Sheets' recommendation, the Raymondi amendment lessens the residential increase by 36 cents and hikes the business rate by $1.21.

The business community feels the council has "socked it to us."

Hanley, who lives in Germantown and has four children ages 1 to 7, says:

"They talk about the homeowner needing help. I know what it's like. I find it a little hard buying diapers and milk."

But he doesn't see the council vote as a good reason for homeowners jumping with joy.

"I'm concerned with the long-range effect," he says. "It will filter down to the homeowner if businesses close. The homeowner will then have to shoulder a heavier tax load and there could be a loss of local jobs."

"I think it will be a real blow to the city," says Newton. "We could lose some of the businesses we now have and not have new ones come in.

"I don't think this makes Quincy attractive to businesses who might have been considering locating here. I think the vote was a shortsighted one."

Both Hanley and Newton also think that non-profit agencies and other local worthy causes could be hurt with businesses being forced to reduce their contributions as a result of their tax bill increases.

It isn't a good picture for the city's future, they feel.

COUNCILLOR BRUCE AYERS who is leaving the City Council at the end of the year, presented his colleagues with a farewell memento after Monday night's meeting.

AYERS

Ayers, closing out his eighth year as Ward 6 councillor to devote needed time to his duties as state representative, presented each with a Quincy wristwatch.

Ayers had the watches, featuring the City Seal as the background of the face, especially made.

In addition to the councillors he gave one to City Clerk Joseph Shea and will present one to Mayor James Sheets.

The watches, he told them in a parting note, were "for all the good time we spent together."

Fore River In Line For Atomic Ship Work

By PAUL HAROLD

Dec. 23 - 29
1955
44 Years Ago

News reports out of Washington this week were that the Fore River Shipyard was in line to build the Navy's first atomic-powered surface vessel.

The proposed vessel would displace 7,500 to 10,000 tons and require four atomic reactors. Fore River was being mentioned as the front-runner for the work for two reasons. First, was the fact that the Quincy yard had been studying atomic surface propulsion for the past year. Second, was the great amount of experience the work force had building cruisers.

SALE OF BROAD MEADOWS LAND OK'd

The city council gave manager Donald Blatt the authorization to sell six acres of land at Broad Meadows to the Navy for the construction of a reserve training center.

The agreed upon price was $14,500, with the land reverting back to the city if it was no longer needed for Naval purposes. The transfer was subject to a lease held the operator of a golf driving range at the Sea St. site.

IDA LYONS WINS COURT COSTS

Ida Lyons of Adams Shore was awarded $250 in court costs by the state's Supreme Court this week. The costs were incurred by her and Democratic State Committee chairman William "Onions" Burke of Hatfield who were ousted from their committee posts when the forces of Sen. John Kennedy overpowered the allies of Congressman John McCormack.

Lyons' removal as secretary and Burke's removal as chairman were still unresolved when the court made its award for legal fees.

Quincy Medical Center's Project Evergreen Honors Loved Ones

The Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary and Foundation Office are offering a special giving program to members of the community called "Project Evergreen."

The program is an opportunity to honor friends and family by placing a personalized ornament in their name on a holiday tree in the hospital's main lobby.

A contribution of $5 or more will memorialize or honor an individual, or recognize a special occasion of choice. In commemoration, a personalized ornament will be placed on the holiday tree that will grace the Quincy Medical Center main lobby throughout the holidays.

Those donating, the honorees and the families of the memorialized will be notified of the remembrance and invited to an appreciation team which will be held in January, 2000. At that time, the commemorative ornaments will be given to the loved one or their family as a remembrance of the holiday season.

Super Seafood Casserole

Over the weekend, we had our adult children (without their little offspring) for dinner. We thought it would be nice to have adult conversation without interruptions.

It was a seafood night, a tradition usually served on Christmas eve.

Today's recipe is for the seafood casserole which I prepared the day before and then baked it the next night.

Super Seafood
1 pound scallops (uncooked)
1 pound cooked shrimp (easier)
3/4 pound haddock (cut up, uncooked)
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons flour
seasoned bread crumbs for topping
2-3 tablespoons cooking sherry

Make a cream sauce by melting the butter, adding the flour and milk and sherry blending until smooth. Add the scallops, shrimp and haddock and stir gently. Do not cook through.

In a slightly greased baking dish, place the seafood mixture and top it with the bread crumbs. Refrigerate if preparing the day before. Otherwise, bake in a 350 degree oven, covered for about 30 minutes or unitl bubbly. Then uncover for the last 10 minutes. Cool and serve. Since I also cooked stuffed squid with linguine, it was great having the casserole already made..

P.S. As far as trying to get a word in, it turned out the adults had more to talk about than ever!

Happy Holidays!

A DINNER AND auction to benefit the Boston Boy Choir was held recently at the Ritz Carlton in Boston. Attending were Beth Joyce of Milton, Susie and Joe Shortsleeve of WBZ Channel 4 News, and Sue and Rich Carr of Quincy.

North Quincy High School Choir Performs At State House Tree Lighting Ceremony

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School Choir and a group of seniors from the Squantum Community Association were recently welcomed to the State House by Sen. Michael Morrissey for its annual tree lighting ceremony. The choir performed last year at the State House during the holiday season and caught the attention of many State House employees, including House Speaker Tom Finneran. The choir was then chosen out of many different groups to perform at this year's tree lighting. "They were only four groups chosen to perform at the tree lighting this year, it is an honor to have North Quincy chosen and represented at such a special occasion," Morrissey said. The seniors group from Squantum enjoyed the evening listening to music and singing, seeing the arrival of Santa and of course the tree lighting. The choir performed several favorite holiday songs and dance numbers on the Grand Staircase while the tree lighting festivities continued inside the State House. After the festivities, the group enjoyed a small get-together with Morrissey and some of his staff. Choir Director Tracy O'Sullivan is greeted by Secretary of State William Galvin (left) and Sen. Morrissey.

ANGELA CURRY, age 10, of Braintree, was the winner of the recent Quincy Medical Center coloring contest for children. The contest was part of the hospital's week-long celebration marking its recent affiliation with Boston Medical Center. Angela won a basket full of Beanie Babies.

Council Approves Compromise Penn, Columbia Sts. Plan

roads to acceptable traffic levels for families and children. He pointed to the development of Crown Colony and the proposed expansions by Harvard Pilgrim, Lincoln Properties, Arbella Insurance, and the Flatley Corporation as reasons why the residents needed such drastic traffic management. "We welcome growth," D'Amico said. "But you can't forget the neighborhoods."

D'Amico also noted that, in the past four months, negotiations with some of the opposing businesses had been productive and resulted in changes in the plan, such as not turning Penn St. into a dead end. However, he dismissed accusations that business was not kept aware of the changes, saying that business only became involved when it realized changes would be made.

More than a dozen residents spoke in favor of D'Amico's proposal. Rosemary Martin of 25 Penn St. spoke of the constant noise of 18-wheeler trucks and urged the council "to do the right thing." Adam Cully of 24 Penn St., age 17, said how dangerous it was to cross the streets and asked the council "to help support what the people want to do." Frank Hopkin of 105 Columbia St. added, "This isn't the best (plan) by any stretch of the imagination, but it might work."

Others spoke of how dangerous it was for the children to walk to school or local parks and how the increased traffic was destroying the neighborhood. "It's like a mini-freeway," Corey Scott of 41 Penn St. said.

Business leaders agreed that traffic was a major problem in the area but wanted more time and more compromise. Leo Cardarelli, a sales manager at W.C. Canniff Co., said the dead end and traffic changes would hurt business. Business leaders Michael Verrochi, Edward Lappen, Jim Mullaney, and Tony Agnitti also spoke, asking for a spirit of compromise and cautioning against what Agnitti called "rash decisions."

Robert Rooney, owner of the property at 100 Penn St., even went so far as to say that if the city adopted another plan which he favored, and if that plan didn't work, he would pay to close Penn St. himself. Rooney also said it was Crown Colony which created the real traffic problem and the only real solution was to "build a damn ramp" for Crown Colony access.

Councillor Frank McCauley, who said he actually went down to Columbia and Penn Streets one day to count the cars, called the traffic plan "an extreme solution" but reluctantly gave his support. Councillor Patrick McDermott also expressed concern but deferred to D'Amico, saying it was his prerogative as ward councillor.

Councillor Tim Cahill, who voted no, called the dead-end "too drastic" and said it wouldn't solve the problem, as drivers would seek other neighborhood roads in search of short cuts. "This plan is not the solution," Cahill said.

D'Amico also disclosed at the hearing that, although he owns property in the area, City Solicitor Stephen McGrath informed him that the decision had no real impact on his property and that he could vote on the issue.

Quincy High School Preparing For Evaluation Report

The faculty and administration of Quincy High School recently met and voted to accept self-assessment reports on the school's adherence to the Standards for Accreditation by the Commission on Public Secondary Schools of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC).

The approval of these reports is another step in preparation for an evaluation visit at the school on May 7-10, 2000.

NEASC, founded in 1885, is the oldest accrediting agency in the country. Recognized by the U.S. Dept. of Education as a reliable agency to award accreditation in the New England area, it is made up of more than 1600 public and independent schools, colleges and universities.

The Commission's qualitative Standards highlight important aspects of the schools in the areas of Mission and Expectations for Student Learning, Curriculum, Instruction, Assessment for Student Learning, Leadership and Organization, School Resources for Learning and Community Resources for Learning.

During the visit in May, about 15 educators will participate and hail from a variety of schools in the New England area. Quincy High Principal Robert Keuther has been notified that the visiting chairman will be Robert Chiappetta, director of Pupil Personnel of Newton Public Schools in Connecticut.

Chiappetta will meet preliminary with Keuther and his Steering Committee early in the new year in order to plan for the evaluation.

The Quincy High School administration, faculty, staff, parents and students have been working towards this evaluation since the spring of 1998. The ultimate goal is to assist the school in its continuing pursuit of a quality education for each student.

Sweeney Brothers Home For Funerals Celebrating 50 Years Of Family Service

Established in 1949 by Quincy brothers, Francis M. Sweeney and Richard T. Sweeney, Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals at 1 Independence Ave., Quincy, is celebrating its 50th anniversary of service.

Located in South Quincy, adjacent to the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the Sweeney Brothers purchased their home from the Barnicoat family. Built in the late 1800's, this beautiful estate was noted for its elegant cupola and the distinguished hard carved granite lions which are still an intricate part of the front entrance.

Through the years, Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals has earned a reputation of providing dependable, dignified and caring service to families in Quincy and throughout the South Shore. Personalized attention to detail and a commitment to community service has helped to build a solid foundation and heritage of sensitive care and compassionate service.

After the passing of Francis in 1959, Richard continued his efforts and was joined by his sons, Richard, Jr. in 1972 and Jeffrey in 1976. Both sons are graduates of Providence College and the New England Institute of Anatomy, Embalming and Funeral Directing. Since Richard T. Sweeney's passing in 1989, Richard Jr., Jeffrey and their staff have carried on and are committed to providing a comfortable, dignified environment in times of sorrow.

SWEENEY BROTHERS
Home for Funerals, Inc.

FOR FIFTY YEARS, the former Barnicoat Estate at 1 Independence Ave. has served as the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals facility dedicated to providing personal service.

The facility itself has seen many changes during the past 50 years, including enlarged parking, a large addition to the main home and most recently, the completion of a handicapped access project.

Richard and Jeffrey Sweeney are proud to carry on the tradition of a family oriented funeral home dedicated to providing personal service. They would like to thank the thousands of families they have assisted through the past 50 years.

Fallon Ambulance Assisting CPR, First Aide Training

Fallon Ambulance will assist the Beechwood Community Life Center in CPR and First Aid training and certification beginning in January.

Beechwood, located at 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, is a child development center serving approximately 250 families with children ranging from eight weeks to 12 years of age.

Approximately 30 staff members will be trained and certified through Fallon Ambulance in current First Aid and CPR.

"Staff training and certification is fairly expensive," said Diane Stacey of the Beechwood Community Center. "It is advantageous to have Fallon Ambulance conduct the seminar and certification because it does relieve some of that cost."

Additionally, Fallon Ambulance with provide a brief medical alert seminar to the seniors at the Senior Center of Beechwood Community Center. The seminar is informative and will alert seniors to important health signals that may indicate a need for medical check-up.

Leaving City Council

Fond Farewells For Kolson And Ayers

Council President Peter Kolson and Councillor Bruce Ayers attended their last meeting Monday night as members of the city council and their fellow councillors made sure the moment did not go unnoticed.

The two were roundly praised for their efforts on behalf of the city and their constituents during Kolson's ten years and Ayers' eight years on the council.

Ayers, who chose to devote all his time to his role as state representative, was praised for his businessman's approach to the job of governing a city as well as his commitment to the physically handicapped.

Kolson, who tried unsuccessfully for at-large seat this November, was singled out for his stands against the proposed Sludge Treatment Plant and rising MWRA rates and for his work to renovate the council chambers, making it one of the hallmarks of the city.

Amidst the joking and fun, councillors made sure that Kolson and Ayers knew how much they would be missed.

Harold, who presented Kolson with a gavel-adorned plaque, praised Kolson for his expertise in municipal government and said that Senators John Kerry and Edward Kennedy sought Kolson's advice on city matters. Councillor Daniel Raymondi drew attention to Kolson's "gentle, fair leadership style" and Councillor Michael D'Amico said that Kolson brought " an element of good government to the city."

PETER KOLSON

BRUCE AYERS

Of Ayers, Councillor Tim Cahill spoke of the bond between Ayers and himself and said that Ayers "served with honor and dignity."

Councillor Pat McDermott recalled seeing both Kolson and Ayers at Marina Bay in 1991 wearing colonial wigs and dumping MWRA crates into the harbor. Although he found it somewhat odd at the time, he said, he praised the two for fighting for what they truly believed in.

Councillor Frank McCauley offered Kolson some words of wisdom, recalling the time in 1967 when he had to empty out his desk after four years on the city council. It was Kolson's turn to watch from the sidelines, McCauley said, but there were always more elections and a comeback was possible.

For their part, Ayers and Kolson reeled off a lengthy string of thankyous but both reserved special praise for Jeanne Reardon, the clerk of committees.

Both men drew numerous standing ovations but it was Kolson's reading of Rudyard Kipling's "If" and his farewell rendition of "Happy Trails" that stood out as final examples of Kolson's deep voice and equally deep sense of showmanship.

The families of both Kolson and Ayers were present during the farewell remarks.

choice."

Ayers also said he was upset that Stratouly was essentially allowed to secure approval because of legal tactics and the threat of a comprehensive permit. "Mr. Stratouly forced the city's hand," Ayers said. "But these decisions should be made at the local level and not by a judge or state bureaucrat."

Councillor Tim Cahill who has been outspoken in his opposition, was expected to again vote "no."

Councillor Stephen Durkin has been ill and it was not certain that he would make the Tuesday meeting. He had not indicated how he would vote if he did attend but it would not matter because of Ayers' vote.

Councillor Dan Raymondi, who owns property near the Highpoint Quarry St. site, has abstained from participating in discussion of the project or voting on it because he feels he would be in conflict.

Cahill, whose parents and in-laws own property near the site, does not consider himself in conflict by discussing or voting on the issue. "I have not personally gained in any way," he has said.

But his participation and voting led to a conflict of interest criminal complaint brought against him by the South Shore Building Trades Council which was later dropped.

The question of a possible conflict is pending, however, before the state Ethics Commission.

The revised plan for the $200 million apartment complex which Congress Group Ventures of Cambridge would build now calls for 1,040 units rather than 1,600-plus originally thought.

The 1,040 units are 50 percent one-bedroom and 50 percent two-bedroom. There would be no three-bedroom apartments, which it was estimated, would mean enough children to require building a new school.

The 1,040 units would be 990 market rental and 60 senior citizen market rental. Affordable housing units would be excluded.

An application filed earlier by Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, sought a special state affordable housing permit to build 1,600 units including 400 affordable housing for low-income families. Approval of the 1,040-unit plan would result in the 1,600-unit plan being dropped.

In the compromised 1,040-unit plan, there would be 10 eight-story buildings on 74 acres of a former granite quarry and landfill.

Even pared down from the original plan, the complex is still seen as the largest rental residential housing project in the South Shore and one of the biggest in the state.

Under the compromise Stratouly would drop a lawsuit against the city, the city would gain 22 acres of land for open space and an estimated $2 million a year in real estate taxes.

NQHS, State Street Celebrate Business-Education Partnership

Supporters of North Quincy High School turned out recently to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the school system's first business-education partnership during a breakfast attended by 150 people.

The audience listened to remarks by school officials, local politicians, and executives from State Street Corp. and Boston Financial Data Services, the companies that started the effort in 1989. Speakers extolled the efforts of educators and business volunteers who nurtured a program from which nearly 80 other business-education initiatives have grown.

"It's the partnership on which all of the others are based," said North Quincy High School Principal Eileen Feeney. "It's the keystone."

State Street has donated $225,000 to the school over the life of the program, as well as installed computer hardware and trained students to use new software. As many as 1,000 students take part each year in various parts of the program.

"Above all, I am very proud of the teachers, administrators and superintendent's commitment of making winners of our kids, who are their students," said George Bowman, vice president of community affairs at State Street.

Bowman has been among the State Street officials who helped broadened the corporation's commitment to the Quincy school system during the last decade.

"Has the partnership been a great experience for State Street?" asked Bowman. "You bet it has, and we look forward to next year."

State Street Corp. is Quincy's largest employer. With $3.5 trillion in assets under custody and $574 billion under management, State Street Corporation is one of the world's leading specialists in serving institutional investors.

FAMILY LITERACY DAY was recently observed at the Clifford Marshall school with eighth grade students from Point Webster Middle School reading to pre-schoolers. Here Jay Newman, 4, of Veronica Bowler's class, listens intently to a story read by Noha Ibarahim.

Christmas Tree Mulching Program In 10th Year

The Quincy Evergreen Program, now in its tenth year, will once again accept Christmas trees for mulching.

Quincy residents can drop off their old Christmas trees at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Center, 1 Merrymount Parkway. The drop-off schedule is weekdays, Dec. 27 to January 14, and Saturdays, Jan. 8 and 15, from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

In exchange residents will receive a coupon entitling them to receive a 10-inch "Millennium Evergreen" Saturday, April 29 or Sunday, April 30.

Used gift wrapping paper may also be exchanged for an evergreen coupon.

The Quincy Evergreen Program consists of Mayor James A. Sheets, Program Chairman Leo Kelly, and Jay Cashman, owner of Jay Cashman Inc., who marks his tenth year as the program's sponsor.

Kelly thanked Sheets and Cashman for their leadership and praised both the DPW and Parks & Recreation for their assistance in the program. He also thanked Margaret Milne for her efforts.

The trees, Kelly said, are broken down into wood chips and then swapped with a Maine company for mulch, which is then used around the city, thus saving the city money and precious landfill space.

"But, more than that, it's just a fun program," Kelly said. "These trees are all over Quincy as wedding gifts, children's birthday gifts, memorials, and some of the older ones are 12 to 15 feet high. It's become a family tradition."

Kelly estimated that over the years close to 20,000 trees had been recycled because of the program. He also said the program expects to add 2,000 new trees to the city when the coupons are redeemed in April.

The program is open to Quincy residents only. For more information, call 376-1251.

Ayers Holds Meeting On Sewer Project

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers recently held an informational neighborhood meeting with DPW Engineer Fred Mirza, and the contractor who will be assisting North Quincy residents with the sewer reduction inflow project.

Ayers noted he had made it his standard practice over the years to hold neighborhood informational meetings prior to construction so residents can hear plans, ask questions and address concerns before final decisions are made and construction commences.

The Sewers Inflow Reduction Project will help to decrease water/sewer rates and will assist with the water quality cleanup. North Quincy residents said they were pleased to have the opportunity to participate.

Construction will begin next year in designated areas. For more information, contact Department of Public Works representatives at 376-1959.

SENIOR LIVING

by Laura Andrus, Director of Marketing

SEARCHING YOUR MEMORY

If you are an older person who has difficulty recalling names, or searches for glasses that are perched on top of your head, these memory lapses are scarcely anything to worry about. Everyone has had the experience of walking into a room and forgetting what he or she had intended to do there. The fact is that your memory may not be as sharp as it once was. Forgetting names and misplacing items, however, should not be interpreted as signs of Alzheimer's disease, which is marked by severe memory loss. Only about 10% of people over age 65 years develop Alzheimer's. Unless you routinely have trouble remembering what day of the week it is or performing a common task, don't worry.

Keeping your mind engaged with your interests and your spirit engaged with those who love you is just one recipe for a fuller, richer life. At Marina Place (617-770-3264), a senior living residence, we urge you to ask about our special program which helps those with dementia and early-stage Alzheimer's get the support they require. Ask us for more information. Stop in and see us at Four Seaport Drive.

P.S. While senility was once thought to be part of the normal aging process, more recent research indicates otherwise.

Keating, Frane, Mayor's Office Meet With Asian Leaders On Domestic Violence

A score of leaders from Quincy's Asian community met with Dist. Atty. William Keating, Police Chief Thomas Frane and representatives from Mayor James Sheets' office and the Asian Task Force Against Domestic Violence last week seeking to build on recent progress.

"Roughly a fifth of the Quincy community is Asian, and there are additional challenges in addressing domestic violence in this part of our community," Keating said after the Quincy Asian-American Domestic Violence Task Force meeting.

"Victims who need our support and protection often feel blocked from reaching out - sometimes because of a language barrier or fear that contact with the police will somehow impact their immigration status."

"We are making progress in communicating that help for battering victims of family violence is available and not something to fear," Keating said, noting that representatives from the Boston-based Asian Task Force report that a good volume of the calls they get are from the South Shore - a fact they linked with the history of education and networking in this area.

Quincy Task Force members also discussed the possibility of pursuing grant money to fund programs that would fight domestic violence in the community. Specifically, leaders said they hoped that a bi-lingual advocate might be added to Quincy District Court - last winter Keating's office won a grant that brought two bilingual prosecutors to the court.

Jonathan Yip, affirmative action officer for the Mayor's Office, Tackey Chan of the Quincy Asian American Assoc., Amanda Le from Quincy Medical Center, Carmen Chan, the Executive Director of the Asian Task Force Against Domestic Violence, and Peace Hui of Beechwood on the Bay were among those attending the meeting.

If I Could Have One Wish Come True . . .

Fifth grade students in Quincy public and parochial schools were invited again this year to submit articles for this special holiday section.

The theme: "If I could have one wish come true this holiday season it would be..."

The Sun is happy to share their young thoughts with you. Publishing these articles has become a tradition all of us at The Sun look forward to each year, and we hope that you do, too.

We want to thank Janet DiTullio, Director of Curriculum, for again coordinating the public schools' participation and the principals and classroom teachers of those schools.

We also thank Sister Catherine Lee, principal, and the teachers of St. Ann's School for their participation and cooperation.

To all who took part we extend warmest season's greetings and wishes for a happy, healthy New Year- and new century.

Thank you all, most sincerely.

First Player To Net 1,000 Career Points

For Audrey Fergason, A Basketball Milestone At Woodward School

By CHRIS POISSON

Moments after the Woodward School basketball team's 51-4 shellacking of the Waring School of Beverly last Wednesday at the National Guard Armory, Audrey Fergason celebrated with her teammates as head coach Bob Giordano chatted with reporters.

When he came upon a question he wasn't sure about, he turned to Fergason like he has done so many times over the past four years:

"Audrey, what's the number of the senior class?," he asked.

"The class of 2000," she said.

"No. The number. How many are in it?

"Oh, 21."

"And this is a National Honor student," he said as he started to laugh.

You have to forgive her, though. The 6-foot-2 center from Weymouth is in the middle of wrapping up her senior season, looking at colleges such as Wellesley, Hamilton, Drake University, Boston University, and about an hour earlier, had reached a personal milestone.

She became the first player in school history to tally 1,000 career points when she scored her fourth point of the game on a post move with 14:40 left in the first half. She finished with 10 points in limited action.

A short stoppage in play followed Fergason's basket as the school honored its superstar.

"There's one thing I want to tell you that brings more meaning about her than anything," said Giordano as he addressed the crowd. "I was talking with her before and I asked her, 'How come everybody is more excited about the 1,000 points than you?' She said and I quote, 'I just wanna play the game. That's what it's about.'"

SENIOR AUDREY FERGASON of Weymouth became the first player in Woodward School's history to score 1,000 career points. She tallied 10 points in last Wednesday's 51-4 win over Waring School of Beverly to reach the milestone.

"I just want to play basketball," Fergason confirmed after the game. "It's nice. It's been four or five years of hard work, but it's not really me.

"I get a lot of the attention, but it's my teammates who do the hard work and get the ball down the court. I get the easy part of putting it in the basket."

It wasn't too long ago when just "putting it in the basket" was as easy as it is now. At one time this bright, gifted basketball player was a young, clumsy girl who couldn't even shoot without traveling.

"When I started I was traveling and I had two hands on the ball," Fergason said. "[Giordano] was like, "You're not going to be able to shoot like that. I'll teach you how.'"

It has been paradise at Woodward ever since. What was once a program resembling the Los Angeles Clippers' franchise is now an annual championship contender.

In fact, the school won only four games in the three years prior to Giordano's arrival as coach and athletic director four years ago.

"We needed a superstar to get going," Giordano said. "Now we have a full team. We have a ton of weapons out there."

After last Wednesday's win, Fergason & Co. improved Woodward's record to 5-0 and are front-runners to repeat as the Independent Girls Conference champs.

For Audrey Fergason, A Basketball Milestone

(Cont'd From Page 27)

Last season they captured the IGC crown with a 12-0 mark, earning a berth to the New England Preparatory School Conference tournament.

"I started in eighth grade and it was horrible," Fergason recalls. "There were six kids on the team and we were put on probation because some of the seniors' actions weren't great.

"Now I just look at it and I'm amazed we came this far in four years. We're champions of our league as opposed to we couldn't even bench a team a couple years ago."

The hoop success has caught the attention of others as more students are starting to join athletics, which has led to the addition of other varsity programs.

There's now JV and freshmen basketball which Fergason coaches, varsity and JV softball, varsity volleyball and soccer, and lacrosse is starting this spring.

"This all happened after basketball just took everybody by storm," Giordano said.

Neither will take credit for being the riders of that storm. Giordano: "She has totally turned it around." Fergason: "Mr. G has been great. He's the one who really turned the program around."

The two have a great player-coach relationship and the truth is, Woodward's first winning season (8-6 in 1996) came when the two were on the hardwood together for the first time. Since their arrival they've gone 34-9.

When Giordano first saw the freshman he knew he had something special.

"Right away," he said. "Audrey is the hardest worker I've ever had as a basketball player. She's there before practice shooting free throws and after practice is over we work on that half-hook shot to get her ready for college."

"He speaks very highly of me, sometimes I think too highly," Fergason said. "And he has that half-hook obsession."

Last Wednesday was a day to remember for Fergason, Giordano and the school. But to Fergason, it was just another day, another game.

"I like playing basketball," she said. "Even if I had two points, I just like playing."

Recreation Activities At Neighborhood Gyms

The Quincy Recreation Department will open neighborhood school gymnasiums for over 250 additional hours of free supervised recreation activities during next week's school vacation period.

According Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, the vacation day schedule will be an addition to the regular evening gym programs that will still be conducted according to their regular schedule.

A variety of gym games, including relays, floor hockey, basketball, and dodge ball are played at each location. Activities vary depending on gym size and program enrollment and are conducted at the following locations: Atherton Hough, Atlantic, Beechwood Knoll, Bernazzani, Merrymount, Montclair, Snug Harbor, Squantum, Marshall and Wollaston.

The schedule at all school locations from Monday, Dec. 27 to Thursday, Dec. 30: 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

On Friday, Dec. 31, the schedule will be 9 a.m. to Noon at all locations.

Welch also notes that the increase of scheduling for the vacation period has been very popular with the participants and working parents who have become more dependent upon the activities during school vacation periods. Programs are free and are for boys and girls age 8 through high school.

The youth attend at different times according to their grade in school:

Elementary age 8 through fifth grade, 9 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.; middle school grades 6, 7, and 8, 10:15 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; high school grades 9, 10, 11, and 12, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Slight variations may occur in this schedule. Changes may be made to accommodate enrollment at each location.

The following gyms will be open evenings from 5-7 p.m. for middle school and 7-9 p.m. for high school age participants:

Monday, Atherton Hough, Montclair, Parker, Snug Harbor, Marshall; Tuesday, Atherton Hough, Merrymount, Snug Harbor, Squantum; Wednesday, Beechwood, Bernazzani, Montclair, Parker, Sterling; Thursday, Bernazzani, Montclair, Squantum.

New Year's Day At St. Mary's To Honor 9 Catholic Churches

The Catholic parishes of Quincy are planning an 11 a.m.. New Year's Day celebration Mass to honor the history of the city's nine churches and pray for their future.

The Mass will be said in St. Mary's Church, the oldest Catholic church on the South Shore. The Mass has been organized by Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point and the city's parochial vicar.

A combined choir representing each of the city's churches will sing and school children from the city's four parochial schools will carry banners from their schools. Children from the various Confraternity of Christian Doctrine programs will also take part in the program.

Priests, deacons, Eucharistic ministers and ministers of the word from throughout the city will also take part.

St. Mary's Church was founded in 1840 because so many Italian immigrant stone cutters had settled in West Quincy to work in the city's granite quarries. The church itself is built with roughewn granite blocks quarried by its parishioners.

The other Quincy churches and their founding dates taking part in the concelebrated Mass are: St. John the Baptist (1863), Sacred Heart (1903), Most Blessed Sacrament (1915), St. Joseph's (1917), St. Ann's (1922), Our Lady of Good Counsel (1938) Star of the Sea (1945) and St. Boniface (1956).

A Thought For The Week

The magic of the Christmas Season has laid its hold upon the land. The tinsel, the lights and decorations, the holly wreaths are all in place and millions of children know that Santa Claus is coming soon in some mysterious way to visit their homes in the shimmering silence of the dark.

This is a time for children and it is a time, too, for all men and women in all lands to remember the wonder of the Christ child's birth on the first Christmas . . . It is the power of this happening that puts magic in this season and lends the light of hope and understanding to all the world's people.

Let this Christmas be for children - may it bring them the warmth of a fire, the smell of a tree, the excitement of waiting for Santa's visit. Let it bring visions of sugar plums on Christmas Eve and above all as the hour approaches, let it bring the warmth of knowing that the Babe born in Bethlehem so very long ago is very close to us all this night.

We at Deware wish everyone a wonderful, magical Christmas.

Answering Your Questions On Prescription Drugs

(NAPS)—Mary Jane Yarrington is a recognized expert in the field of Social Security and Medicare policy. She has been involved in Social Security issues for more than 40 years as a congressional caseworker and a senior policy analyst for the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, the nation's second-largest seniors group.

Q. Why should the government subsidize prescription insurance for people who can afford their own medicines?

Yarrington

A. Originally, Medicare was designed to provide access to health care for all beneficiaries. The issue is that prescription drug coverage has become critical to the well-being of individuals due to advances in health care and the escalating cost of prescription drugs in recent years.

The government should not engage in means-testing prescription drugs. One: it would discriminate against seniors. The government already subsidizes health insurance for persons of working age through tax deductions to employers and self-employed persons. Second: the Medicare Hospital Insurance tax is progressive. High-income workers must pay the Hospital Insurance tax on every dollar of income earners will pay twice in Hospital Insurance payroll taxes what they will use in Hospital Insurance services during retirement.

Q. I heard on C-Span that Federal employees have a great health insurance system. Why can't that be extended to seniors?

A. It could be. The problem is that such a system provides no guarantee of a defined set of benefits. Insurance companies would be permitted to offer plans that differ in terms of the scope and duration of benefits. This would undermine access to benefits for low and middle-income beneficiaries.

Health Hints For Seniors

Are You Threatened By High Blood Pressure?

(NAPS)—Early diagnosis of high blood pressure can save lives. A new program, "Have a Heart: Help yourself and someone else," is designed to raise awareness of the dangers of high blood pressure, or hypertension, and treatment options.

The program, supported by Astra Pharmaceuticals, L.P., was kicked off with the unveiling of a national survey of volunteer blood donors that found that sixty percent of Americans with a diastolic blood pressure of 90 mmHg are unaware they have high blood pressure.

Experts at the National High Blood Pressure Education Program of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute (NHLBI) say the greatest enemy in the fight against heart disease is complacency.

"For many, lack of awareness about high blood pressure has become a health crisis," said Edward Roccella, PhD, MPH, director of the NHLBI.

The number of people with high blood pressure who are being treated has increased from less than 20 percent 20 years ago to as high as 70 percent in some communities.

Athletes with hypertension are teaming up with the program to educate people about the health problem.

Ernie Banks, former Chicago Cubs shortstop, and Deacon Jones, former defensive end of the L.A. Rams, both of whom have hypertension, are working with the "Have a Heart" program in hopes of making an impact on America's most common chronic illness.

"When I learned that my blood pressure was higher than normal, I talked to my doctor about treatment solutions," Banks said. "Now I am managing my blood pressure through proper diet, exercise and medication. If I can do it, anybody can."

The newest class of blood pressure medications to hit the market are called angiotensin receptor blockers (ARBs). They work by inhibiting the effect of angiotensin II, a hormone that constricts blood vessels and leads to hypertension. They can help lower blood pressure without certain side effects.

The newest ARB to hit pharmacy shelves is Atacand, or candesartan, a powerful new medication for once-daily treatment of high blood pressure.

"One of the advantages of a medication like Atacand is that the overall incidence of side effects is similar to placebo. A drug like Atacand may be an improvement for patients concerned about taking high blood pressure medications because of adverse effects," said Alan Gradman, M.D., chief of the division of cardiovascular diseases at Western Pennsylvania Hospital.

In clinical trials, about two percent of patients discontinued the drug because of side effects. The most common reasons were headache and dizziness. As with other drugs that act directly on the renin-angiotensin system, Atacand should not be used by pregnant women, and should be discontinued if pregnancy is detected.

Educating yourself about high blood pressure can be an important step to helping prevent and manage the problem.

4 Residents Claim Compromise Vote Illegal

Suit Filed Against Council On Highpoint

The controversial Highpoint Development issue isn't over yet.

Four residents have filed a registered voter suit against the City Council claiming that the Highpoint compromise voted last week was worked out illegally and should be rescinded.

The suit was filed in Norfolk Superior Court Dec. 24 by:

Paul T. Bonoli of 25 Churchill Rd., William F. Farrell, Jr., of 43 Quarry St., Joseph Coyne of 60 Churchill Rd., and Charles R. McIntyre of 25 Gothland St., a former city councillor and son of late Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre.

They claim that the council's Dec. 3 closed-doors, executive session meeting violated the state's open meeting law because the public had no input at the meeting and no way of knowing how the compromise was being reached.

Councillors Stephen Durkin, Michael D'Amico, Patrick McDermott, Frank McCauley, and Paul Harold attended the meeting. Councillors Daniel Raymondi, Timothy Cahill, Bruce Ayers, and Peter Kolson did

Sheets Sees Open Space Affordable Housing New Year Challanges

Open space preservation, affordable housing and Wollaston Beach restoration are seen by Mayor James Sheets as the main challenges for the city as it moves into the new century.

These issues will be highlighted in his inaugural address Monday, Jan. 3 when he is sworn into an historic sixth term at 10 a.m. ceremonies at North Quincy High School auditorium.

Sheets has been carrying out his mayoral duties at his Furnace Brook Parkway home since undergoing surgery for a detached retina Dec. 15. He will deliver the inaugural address in person.

Paul Harold will be elected City Council president at the inaugural ceremonies, succeeding Peter Kolson, and Jo-Ann Bragg will be elected vice chairman of the School Committee, replacing Linda Stice, who under rules cannot succeed herself. Both Harold and Bragg have sufficient votes already committed to assure their election.

Two new councillors and a new school committeeman will be sworn in.

Gregory Hanley, 33, of Shed St., a sales manager, is the new Ward 1 councillor,

Police, Fire Depts. Ready For Y2K

As the year 2000 fast approaches, both the Quincy Police Department and Fire Department assure residents that they are Y2K compliant.

Chief Thomas Gorman of the QFD said that he foresees no problems come Jan. 1, buoyed by both the city's thorough preparedness and the growing confidence he sees the city's banks and public utilities.

The department has, Gorman said, taken a few simple precautions such as canceling personal days and vacation days for its firefighters during Y2K and putting an extra deputy chief on duty. "And we're telling those that have beepers to stay by their beepers," Gorman said.

Although he expects no breakdown in the city's emergency telephone system, Gorman made note of the city's fire boxes, which run on their own battery power and are therefore immune to the Y2K bug. "The fire boxes would be the next resort," Gorman said, adding that "help will arrive within a matter of minutes."

In a press release issued earlier this week, Chief Thomas Frane of the QPD said:

"During this past year, the Data Processing Department of the City has worked with the Police Department to ensure that public safety in Quincy will not be affected by any Y2K problems. All emergency

Quincy-Weymouth Consortium Recipient

$1 Million HUD Grant To Assist Homeless

Mayor James A. Sheets announces that the Quincy/Weymouth Consortium formed to combat homelessness will receive a total of $1,030,374 in McKinney Homeless Assistance grant funds from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The McKinney Homeless Assistance grant is part of HUD's comprehensive and coordinated approach to attacking homelessness.

Neighborhood Housing Services will receive a grant of $249,438 to develop the Quincy/Weymouth Permanent Supportive Family Housing Program. It will link with an existing and very successful transitional family supportive housing program, facilitating the movement of homeless families through the continuum of care into permanent housing. This program will provide permanent supportive housing opportunities designated specifically for four homeless families with children that have members in recovery from substance abuse and four other low income families.

The Commission on the Family will receive a grant of $239,496 to continue their existing transitional Housing Program. Their primary goal is to stabilize homeless families and to connect them to permanent housing through intervention and case management.

The Quincy Housing Authority will receive a grant of $541,440 for Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC) clients. This program will provide rental assistance to disabled homeless persons through tenant based assistance. QISC will match the rental assistance with an equal dollar amount of support services. This project will house 12 homeless individuals for five years. The program will move individuals directly from shelters into permanent supportive housing and link them to services related to their disabilities.

Joseph Newton, 32, of Glover Ave., an accountant, will take over the Ward 6 seat vacated by Bruce Ayers to devote more time to his duties as state representative.

William Phelan, 41, of Monroe Rd., an attorney, will take his seat on the School Committee succeeding Sean Barry who did not seek re-election.

The City Councillors take their oath from City Clerk Joseph Shea and the school committee members from Mayor Sheets who by virtue of office is also chairman of the School Committee.

Jeanne Reardon is expected to be re-elected clerk of the City Council committees.

An Inaugural Reception will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Galleria at President's Place, Hancock St., Quincy Sq.

and non-emergency systems have been tested and certified that we are fully compliant.

"When the clock turns from 1999 to 2000, Emergency 911 and all other telephone systems will be in full operation. We ask you not to call just to test the system as New Year's Eve is always a very busy night in the Communications Center."

Unnecessary calls, Frane said, will only increase the workload and could crash the system.

However, Frane added that anyone with concerns regarding the updated systems or police preparedness should not hesitate to contact Quincy Police Lt. Thomas Casey directly at 745-5717.

Hospital, Highpoint Top Stories

By TOM HENSHAW

The future of financially ailing Quincy Hospital as a top notch health care facility dominated the news in 1999 as the city-owned institution sought a merger to save it.

"The next three months will be extremely critical," said Mayor James Sheets in his mid-term address. "It is my hope that by the end of the hospital's fiscal year in October, this issue will have been completely resolved."

However, the issue went right down to the wire — and six days beyond — before the bickering bosses of the state legislature came up with a loan of $12.1 million to ensure hospital affiliation with the Boston Medical Center.

The other top issue of the year, the controversial Highpoint development proposed for a Quarry St., former quarry and landfill site, also came down to the wire with a compromised version finally being accepted.

The original plan by developer Dean Stratouly for 1,640 housing units including 400 for affordable housing, was rejected by the city council with Councillor Tim Cahill leading the opposition.

Lawyers from Stratouly fought back with a lawsuit, charging that the council filed its decision 92 days after the planned unit development hearing and not within the 90 days required by law.

The South Shore Building Trades Council for which Highpoint would mean 2,000 construction jobs, brought a criminal complaint against Cahill charging he was in conflict by voting on the proposal because his family owns property near the site. A judge cleared Cahill of the charge and it was dropped by the union.

However, the state Ethics Commission ruling on whether Cahill was in conflict was still awaited as the year wound down.

And on its final vote of the year in December, the council approved the compromised scaled-down 1,040-unit plan for Highpoint.

The new version called for 999 one- and two-bedroom apartments and 50 units for senior citizens. Missing from the plan are three-bedroom units which it was seen could have meant enough children to require building a new school or an addition.

Also missing from the new plan are affordable housing units, triggering criticism from affordable housing advocates who say the city has turned its back on low income families.

After working for 10 months without a contract, teachers accepted a new three-year agreement, retroactive to Sept. 1, 1998, that would give new teachers $29,292 by January 1, 2002.

Mayor Sheets won an historic sixth two-year term as mayor, defeating Robert J. Boussy in the November election. Gregory Hanley and Joseph Newton joined the city's political elite, winning council seats in Wards 1 and 6, respectively.

The council raised hackles of the business community by raising the residential tax rate 47 cents while upping the commercial rate by $2.97, thus placing a higher percentage of the tax burden on businessmen.

The city also lost through death some prominent figures, including Frank Anselmo, 101, a veteran of two world wars and longtime member of the School Committee; Dr. Sidney Cutler, former team dentist for the Boston Celtics; John Herbert, former editor of the Patriot Ledger and retired president of the Quincy Co-operative Bank.

Sheets: 'Finding Hospital Partner 1999 Biggest Challenge'

(Cont'd from page 3)

JANUARY

Mayor James Sheets, in a state of the city midterm address, warned that the biggest challenge of 1999 is to find another health care provider to form a partnership with fiscally ailing Quincy Hospital.

The hospital, which had been operating for the past year at a $9 to $10 million deficit, was forced to close the maternity ward after 108 years of delivering babies, including the Mayor's four children.

"We have made substantial progress in finding another entity with whom we could partner or merge," he said, "and I am confident that we are going to complete an arrangement which should allow Quincy Hospital to retain all of its community services.

"The next three months will be extremely critical. It is my hope that by the end of the hospital's fiscal year in October, this issue will have been completely resolved."

Some 35,000 people celebrated the New Year alcohol- and drug-free at Quincy's annual First Night. The theme of the celebration was Mardi Gras and speakers placed around the Square blared New Orleans jazz to celebrants.

Construction of the $15 million addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library began to take shape visibly with the arrival of some 210 tons of steel beams in seven trailer loads.

Community activist Bob Curry, who owns the Curry ACE Hardware Stores, was voted The Quincy Sun's 14th annual Citizen of the Year. Curry created the Marie A. Curry Foundation at Quincy Hospital shortly after his wife died of breast cancer.

Peter Kolson was elected to serve a second year as president of the city council.

The new Norfolk District Attorney William Keating named Quincy lawyer Dennis Mahoney as his first assistant. Mahoney has worked for four DAs — George Burke, William Delahunt, Jeffrey Locke and Keating.

Quincy Hospital acquired stereotactic equipment worth more than $135,000 to allow a breast biopsy to be done during mammography rather than a surgical procedure.

Mayor Sheets said he is optimistic that a new Fore River Bridge on busy Route 3A will replace the present 65-year-old span and allow larger vessels to be built at a revived shipyard or dock at the Citgo and Braintree Light Plant piers.

Deaths in January included: Evelyn F. Carroll, librarian; Tom Sullivan, retired sports editor of The Quincy Sun; Angus V. "Val" O'Hanley, bank executive; Hugo A. Romano, Boston Municipal Court officer; Paul "Guido" Scibilio, chef at the Anchor House in Plymouth.

THE FIRST 210 tons of steel for the construction of the new $15 million addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library rolled into Quincy in January on seven trailer trucks. Here one of the beams is lifted by a crane for placement.

Ken McPhee Named Schools Security Head

FEBRUARY

Paid professionals such as lawyers and engineers would be required to testify truthfully under penalty of perjury, according to legislation filed by City Councillor Paul Harold and passed by the council. Councillor Dan Raymondi suggested an amendment that councillors themselves be included.

Dana Childs retired after 12 years as treasurer-collector of Quincy. Childs, who was originally named to the post by Mayor Frank McCauley and reappointed by Mayor Sheets, said he had accomplished what he set out to do in reorganizing the department.

The alcoholic license held by the Samoset Pharmacy in Merrymount for many years, the last in the city, was canceled when former owner Norman I. Nisenbaum was unable to transfer it after a year of trying. The pharmacy was purchased by CVS.

Ken McPhee, head coach of football at North Quincy High School for 18 years, was appointed as Coordinator of Security and Transportation succeeding John "Butch" Mahoney. McPhee won 92 games in his years as coach of the Raiders.

Preliminary work on Lot 23 in Squantum, which open space advocates had hoped to preserve as a bird sanctuary, got underway after Administrative Law Judge Mark Silverstein ruled that a section was open to development. Developer Peter O'Connell plans to build

Deaths in February included: Boston Sand and Gravel chairman John F. Hallisey; Francis J. "Frank" Cronin, World War II prisoner of war; William "Wild Bill" Scanlan, one-time stage manager of Scollay Square burlesque houses in Boston; William T. City Council Rejects Highpoint Development

MARCH

The city council rejected the proposed controversial Highpoint development that would have put 1,640 units of housing on Quarry St. and provided jobs for some 2,000 construction workers.

"A project of this size does not fit into the contours of the city," said Councillor Patrick McDermott. "The density would be too great. It would put too many people in one area. It doesn't fit. It just would not work."

But it was not a death sentence for the development.

"The possibility is very clear we are going to be back doing this all over again," said Council President Peter Kolson.

Residents of the Squantum, Houghs Neck and West Quincy sections were up in arms over a new proposed $25 million unidirectional runway at Logan Airport, claiming it would increase noise over their homes.

A marathon mediation session between the School Committee and the Quincy Educational Association failed to settle on a new contract for Quincy teachers, who had been without a contract since August, 1998.

James Chiccino, city personnel director for three years, was named to succeed the retired Dana Childs as treasurer/collector of taxes.

Agents from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and State Police were investigating the explosion at a Wollaston home that claimed the life of Chawki Ibrahim.

All three Quincy state representatives, Bruce Ayers, Stephen Tobin and Ron Mariano, voted to reinstate the death penalty but the legislation failed to pass by a 80-73 vote.

The Revs. Alicia and Peter Corea celebrated their 50th and 52nd anniversaries, respectively, as co-pastors of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Quincy's Pee Wee A team, coached by Al Grazioso, Mark Giordani and Steve McGowan, won the state championship, beating the Starhawks from central Massachusetts, 6-5, in the finals of the hockey tournament.

Deaths in March included: John D. McDonough, retired superintendent of the Metropolitan Police; Esther S. Walp, once the holder of the national women's javelin championship; Guy W. Amrhein, third generation owner of Amrhein's Restaurant in South Boston; former city plumbing inspector Joseph D. Renzi; Mary C. Coletti, former president of the Germantown Garden Club.

Give The Gift Of Hope For A Cancer-Free World

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

During the holiday season, many of us spend long hours and large portions of our paychecks making sure that those we love receive just the right gift. We agonize over the color and size and hope that it will be treasured for many years.

There is, however, another gift - one that will keep on giving long after this holiday season is over - the gift of hope for a cancer-free world.

Amazingly, this "impossible dream" becomes more possible every year. And when you give one or more of the following gifts, we move one step closer.

• The gift of yourself: Volunteer your time to serve cancer patients, educate others, or raise money to fund cancer research and programs.

• The gift of money: Write a check or use a credit card to support the work of the American Cancer Society.

• The gift of learning and following cancer checkup guidelines: By preventing cancers from ever occurring, or diagnosing them early when treatment may be less invasive, you can save lives - maybe even yours.

• A gift in memory of a loved one: Through a memorial contribution, we honor not only those who have passed away, but those who remember them. The American Cancer Society sends a notice to family members acknowledging every contribution.

• The gift of planning today for giving tomorrow: Whether it's stocks, mutual funds, bonds, real estate, life insurance, an automobile, or a mention in your will, every contribution can make a big difference. American Cancer Society planned giving and legacy representatives are available to answer your questions or help you set up your gift. Call them at 800-952-7664, ext. 4827.

As we look to begin a new century, imagine leaving the legacy of a cancer-free world to the generations to come. If everyone takes just one step, together we'll make it.

What You WON'T See In 2000

This is that time of year again when the so-called experts busy themselves predicting what's going to happen in the new year.

This time many of them are working the crystal ball overtime because besides the new year, they also have a new century and millennium to keep them occupied.

But seeing that I'm no expert in the forecasting department, I'm not even going to tell you what to expect in 2000, let alone the 21st century and the new millennium.

I sometimes have trouble trying to figure out tomorrow.

But through the years I have had a pretty fair battling average predicting what won't happen in the new year.

So, once again, I would like to have another go at predicting what you won't see in the year 2000:

You won't see the SS Paul Harold launched at the Fore River shipyard.

You won't see Tim Cahill or Dean Stratouly saying to one another: "What do you say we go out for a cup of coffee. I'll buy."

You won't see Jerry Dacey leaving his hat unguarded.

You might see Jim Sheets deciding to run for a seventh term but you won't see him making the official announcement from a ladder.

You won't see Dan Raymondi as president of Quincy 2000, the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, the Quincy Business Council, the Wollaston Business and Professional Association or the North Quincy Business and Professional Association.

You won't see Police Chief Tom Frane or Fire Chief Tom Gorman saying: "Thank you, for thinking of us in your budget, Mayor, but we really have enough men and equipment this year."

You won't see Fr. Bill McCarthy turning anyone away from the homeless shelter that bears his name.

You won't see Rhonda Merrill complaining if the temperature is 32 for the First Night celebration. Cold but comfortable, it will keep the ice sculptures from melting.

You won't see Bernie Reisberg wondering where to pick up a tux for a black tie affair.

You won't see Jeff Doran unhappy over the affiliation with Boston Medical Center.

You won't see Ted DeCristofaro saying: "You know, now that I've thought it over, the ball really would look great at City Hall. I think I'll have it moved."

You won't see Tom Galvin giving up his search for more historic Quincy postcards. (Keep them coming, Tom. Your fans love them.)

You won't see Frank McCauley being called the Jack Benny of Quincy politics much longer. Not after what he gave Sandra for her last birthday. But he'll still be tightfisted when it comes to spending the taxpayers' money.

You won't see Joe Shea looking for a recount in the next--or any--election.

You won't see Joe Mannarino, Maralin Manning or Tony Agnitti giving a hot retail prospect directions to Braintree.

You won't see Roy Lind hanging up on anyone calling WJDA's "Party Line." There must be a few characters he would like to pull the plug on but he keeps his cool.

And there are a couple of things you won't see again for sure: 1999 and the 20th century.

Wishing you all a happy, HEALTHY New Year and a good happy, healthy chunk of the new century.

Y2K: The Good News From Bank Of Canton

Not everyone is forecasting doom and gloom as a result of the coming change in millennium.

Robert H. Stovall, quoted in Bottom Line/Personal, forecasts that "Y2K will be a nonevent...the economy will grow by 3.2%...inflation will remain at 2.5% or less...[and] profits will stabilize."

He expects the Dow Jones Industrial Average to rise to 13,500 sometime next year. As to Y2K affecting stocks: "I thought Y2K fears would already have a negative psychological impact on the stock market this year - and that hasn't happened yet," he says.

Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Arthur Levitt also predicts smooth sailing for Y2K. "There may be isolated - and I emphasize isolated - problems, but thanks to the tireless efforts of the financial industry, the disasters that some originally predicted will not get even an honorable mention in the history books," he said at a conference sponsored by the President's Council on Year 2000 Conversion.

American business has spent some $50 billion preparing for Y2K. The U.S. Government has spent $8.34 billion. Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said that the chance for cascading failures in the most important computer networks are now "negligible."

But what about your money? Is it safe in the bank? How well prepared is the computer system of your financial institution?

According to Bank of Canton Vice President/Operations Peter Shea, "There is no reason to be concerned about deposits in a bank account." The FDIC has maintained an aggressive and tightly monitored readiness program for its member banks, which includes thorough testing and upgrading of all computer systems, developing contingency plans for use in case of disruption of utilities or communications, and more. He adds, "Deposits in banks that are members of FDIC and DIF are insured in full - even deposits that exceed the FDIC's $100,000 ceiling."

As the SEC's Levitt said, "Those people who do cash out a significant part of their deposits only increase the risk that they will become victims of crime or fraud."

So, relax...and have a happy New Year!

This is the final installment of "Y2K Countdown," a monthly series of informative articles on the many issues and news relating to Y2K, brought to you by The Bank of Canton.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 POSTCARD view of the Adams School on Abigail Avenue in South Quincy. The second public school was named Adams, it was built in 1913. It was of the same design as the Wollaston School on Beale Street. Sold to private developers in the 1980's, this is now the home of the Academy Park Condominiums. The first city owned Adams School was on Phipps Street next to St. John's Church. One of the first schools in Quincy, it was built in 1913, it served as the Boy's Industrial School until it was demolished in 1925.

Non-Union A Non-Issue

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a resident in North Quincy I am getting a little tired of the view on Hancock St. in front of Victory Market: the picketers.

I shop at Stop & Shop. I shopped at Shaws and I shop at Victory. We need to understand that Shaws left us high and dry when they left the city and gave many no place to go, just picked up and left. Shaw's was not the most generous store to the city of Quincy, not like Stop & Shop and Victory. Did Shaws ever think of our seniors and where they would shop?

Victory (Yes, non-union) told us certain things to expect from their market: good food, friendly people, a great atmosphere, and a store with a heart. They have shown that to the community so far. They are community friendly in all ways, not just money donations. They show how they handle their customers, with respect. They go beyond the norm. Seeing the Parker School 4th and 5th graders singing there was touching as well as very unusual. Seeing how the employees mingle with their customers, becoming first name friends. How many new jobs were opened? How many youth are working and off the streets?

I don't find it an issue that Victory is a non-union store. Union is important but let's remember we live in America and we thank God for that every day. We are proud of our supermarkets in Quincy, union or non-union, and feel we need to continue on in our lives and deal with important issues.

Support Low Income Housing Bill

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I want to thank everyone who helped me in my campaign for councillor at-large, especially the senior citizens. I want to thank the people who also voted for the Home Rule Bill for affordable housing and low income tenants who worked so hard to have it put on the ballot, including our city councillors who gave their extra time in putting this together and helping in getting it on the ballot.

I also want to thank Jane Reikard of the tenants grievance for her input. She works for the City of Quincy. She also was a great help.

Now, we have to work on this bill, S.1946, at the State House. It is in Ways and Means Committee. Rep. Paul Haley of Weymouth is the chairman of this committee. This Bill is for the whole state of Massachusetts. It would provide affordable, low income housing, especially to seniors who live on a fixed income as well as disabled people, including our veterans who gave their for the cause of our country, who are elderly and some are homeless today.

What we do today as seniors is important, because what happens with us can fall upon our children. So do your share: call the State House, 617-722-2000, speak to Rep. Paul Haley, Rep. Bruce Ayers, help get this Bill out of committee.

Let's start the year 2000 with concerns. I need your help seniors and the disabled-handicapped. Together we stand, separated we fall.

City Hospital Begins 75th Year

Dec. 30 - Jan. 5
1965
34 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy City Hospital began its 75th year, having grown from 25 beds to a total of 475 with the completion of the new east wing later this year. The new wing was scheduled to open on June 17, the date of the original dedication.

Founded in 1890 by doctors William Rice and John Gordon, it first served quarry workers who were inflicted with silicosis from the stone dust. The budget had grown from $7,500 annually to over $5 million. When it opened the daily cost for a hospital room was $1.88, with current costs at $38.07.

On average, the hospital was treating 150,000 patients annually.

TAXPAYERS GROUP PUSHES REVALUATION

The Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA) resumed its fight for revaluation following a recent meeting at Ships Haven Restaurant. QTA President Arthur Gillis called upon the city council to provide funds for a revaluation of the entire city by an outside professional consultant.

Gillis said the revaluation was needed for two reason: to insure that all property owners paid their fare share and as a way to attract new businesses.

A study by the QTA of 2,141 recent property sales in the city highlighted the need for revaluation. The prices for single family homes ranged from a low of 16 percent of the assessed value to a high of 91 percent of the assessed value.

GOV. SWEARS-IN SERVICE CORPS MEMBERS

Governor Endicott Peabody swore in the first members of Commonwealth Service Corps who would serve on a special Quincy project. They would work at the court house clinic with juvenile offenders. The state program was modeled after President Kennedy's Peace Corps and was nick-named the "baby peace corps."

Sworn in were Edmund Grogan of Grogan Ave., Frank O'Rourke of Pontiac Rd., Jack Silverstein of Adams St. and Meredith Wheeler of Beach St.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Stuffed Calimari

If you like to eat stuffed squid (calimari) and find a restaurant that serves it, it is a rarity. And that is probably why when I prepare it at home, it gets raves Although almost all restaurants have fried squid on the menu

Stuffing squid requires a lot of patience, and a small spoon to stuff them, but in the end, it is worth it. This time, my husband picked up some really large ones, that were easier to stuff. They cook in just a few minutes after they hit the tomato sauce.

Stuffed Squid (Calimari)
3/4 pound squid. (about 10 medium sized)
4-5 slices of bread softened
some basil, parsley and oregano
2 tablespoons grated romano cheese
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
salt and pepper to taste
enough toothpicks to secure the tops

Soak bread in water and squeeze. Place in bowl and add all other ingredients and mix until blended. If it gets too dry, add a bit more of either the sauce or water.

When this is done, the tricky part is in filling the squid. You can either use your fingers or a small baby spoon. Only fill them three quarters full and place a toothpick on the top of each closing it as carefully as you can. Set aside.

Make a quick basic tomato sauce with oil, garlic, basil and any other fav orite herb. I find it easier using a large frying pan for the sauce so the.squid are side by side with chances of breaking very slim.

After you make the sauce and it starts to bubble, carefully place each squid and then cook on low heat turning them gently.

If one of two open during cocking, it's no big deal, the sauce is still edible.

Serve with linguine or a favorite pasta. Guests usually take a whole one, but if they are large, they can be cut in thick slices. Don't forget to remove the toothpicks.!

Central Middle School Student Wins State Essay Contest

Central Middle School seventh grader Terrance O'Connell was one of eight statewide ,winners of Macy's Department stores' "Follow A Leader" essay contest.

O'Connell's winning essay, on Congressman Barney Frank, earned him a $1,000 cash prize and the opportunity to follow Frank for a day, hopefully in Washington D.C.

Students from across the state were invited to submit essays on the person in whose footsteps they most wanted to follow and how education can help them achieve this goal. Selected leaders included Boston Pops Conductor Keith Lockhart, Superintendent of Boston Public Schools Thomas Payzant, and Lieutenant Governor Jane Swift.

All the winning students and family representatives met their heroes for the first time at a recent honorary breakfast hosted by Macy's.

Other Central winners included honorable mention awards for John Dahlquist, Lauren Hamaty, Alan Lau, and Rose Mac.

Seventh grade Language Arts teacher Mary Schiess has taught three finalists since the program's inception.

O'Connell will use his cash prize to continue his education.

McDonald Family Has Millennium Party

John and Ann Erickson recently hosted a McDonald family millennium party "in celebration of family and life" at their home on 78 Grove St., West Quincy.

All seven McDonald siblings and their spouses took part in the festivities, which was just down the road from 104 Grove St. where the McDonald family was raised.

The Ericksons said they just wanted to give thanks that so much of their family was happy and healthy as they entered the year 2000.

Those present included the five McDonald Brothers: George B. McDonald, former Norfolk County Commissioner and Quincy City Councillor and his wife Sheila; Thomas P. McDonald, owner of the Thomas P. McDonald Insurance Agency in West Quincy and his wife Bernice; Jack McDonald and his wife Ann, owners of the Village Food Mart and the Common Market Restaurants; James McDonald and his wife Pauline of West Quincy; and Richard McDonald and his wife Josephine of Oakdale, CT.

Also present were the two McDonald sisters: Noreen McDonald Curtis and her husband Alan, who reside in Braintree; and Elizabeth Ann McDonald Erickson and her husband John.

Richard and Josephine McDonald also used the occasion to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary.

The McDonald family traces is Quincy roots back 125 years.

Abbadessa's Hosts New Year's Party For Residents Of Father Bill's Place

Abbadessa's Restaurant in Hingham is planning a gala celebration for the guests at Father Bill's Place on New Year's Eve.

Mr. James Wells, owner of Abbadessa's, will close his restaurant on New Year's Eve in order to cook and serve a gourmet dinner to the guests at the shelter.

Abbadessa's staff members and friends will serve a soup to nuts dinner, including: shrimp cocktail, chicken wrapped in bacon with Chinese pea pods, croustini for appetizers, choice of two soups, salad, complete rib dinner, and desert. China and silverware have been rented for the evening and Wells hopes to provide entertainment.

The shelter will be decorated for the evening in millennium style by Jim's staff.

This is not the first time that Abbadessa's has helped Father Bill's Place. Earlier this month Abbadessa's had a party to benefit the shelter, raising $2,500. This money went to Walmart who, at a 10% discount, purchased 110 gift certificates for the shelter guests for Christmas.

Melissa Craig Helping United Way Campaign

Quincy resident Melissa Lynn Craig is one of 50 people assisting the United Way of Massachusetts Bay with its annual fund-raising campaign by serving as a Loaned Employee.

From September to December, Loaned Employees are either sponsored by corporations or remain employed by their company while working at the United Way, helping maintain low fund-raising costs.

"Even in today's booming economy, our children and families face issues that threaten their well-being and that of our community," said Marian L. Heard, president and chief executive officer of the United Way of Massachusetts Bay. "That's why we are embarking on our most ambitious fund-raising campaign ever. Loaned Employees are vital to this process.

"Loaned Employees working with corporate volunteers to organize workplace campaigns raise $25 million annually.

Craig is on "loan" from Boston Financial Date Services, where she is a mutual fund line manager.

"I feel that I've been given a unique opportunity to help a wonderful organization and return a little of what I've been given to the community," said Craig.

Highpoint Lawyers Bring Suit Against City

(Cont'd from page 5)

APRIL

Lawyers for Highpoint developer Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures Inc., of Cambridge, summonsed city councillors and all their notes, papers and other materials in Highpoint's lawsuit against the city.

The lawyers charged that the council's decision against the development was filed 92 days and not the required 90 days after the planned unit development hearing, and Councillor Timothy Cahill should not have voted because his relatives own property abutting the site of the proposed project.

Joseph Romano was indicted by a Norfolk County grand jury in the murder of his wife, Katherine, who was reported missing in September and whose body has never been found.

"Although no Massachusetts court has convicted a first degree murderer without the recovery of a victim's remains, two dozen jurisdictions form California to Texas to Maine have won convictions without a body," noted District Attorney William Keating.

The choice of affiliation to rescue Quincy Hospital from its financial troubles was narrowed to two — Boston Medical Center and Lifespan, parent company of New England Medical Center. Deadline for the affiliation was Sept. 30, the end of the hospital's fiscal year.

"We hope to define who we are interested in and are continuing to work within 10 days, by the end of the month," said Mayor Sheets.

Negotiators for the city and its school teachers reached a tentative agreement on a new four-year contract after a 12-hour bargaining session. But the 760 members of the Quincy Education Association voted to reject the pact.

The teachers perceived that the contract reflected little respect for their work, said QEA President Paul Phillips. The teachers had been without a contract since August, 1998.

Deaths in April included: Louise Forsyth, who taught and counseled in the Quincy schools for 40 years; Donald W. Collins, the first Quincy Boy Scout to win a lifesaving medal in 1941; John D. Vecchiola, an Army Air Corps veteran who was shot down and captured by Germans in World War II; Glen H. Woodbury, owner of C. Y. Woodbury Oil Co.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Gerald T. "J.T." McNeill of Quincy testifies before Congress in May in support of more federal funding for research into interstitial cystitis, a disease which affects 700,000 Americans. Joining him at the hearing is U.S. Rep. William Delahunt.

Proposed City Budget Up $7.3 Million

MAY

Mayor Sheets proposed a $165.58 operating budget for fiscal 2000, up 4.6 percent or $7.3 million over the previous year. The mayor's proposal included $53.2 million for the School Department, a $2.6 million increase.

A 5-year-old Quincy boy, Gerald T. "J.T." McNeil III, testified before a House Appropriations Subcommittee in Washington on behalf of a bill that would federally fund research into interstitial cystitis, a disease which affects about 700,000 Americans.

An eye-catching design with the message: "QUINCY — The Next Millennium. A Proud Past...A Strong Future" was chosen as the official logo for the city millennium celebration. It was developed in a contest by Tamara Erdley, who does public relations for Quincy Hospital.

The city council approved a special permit for the CVS Corporation of Woonsocket, R.I. to build a sixth store on the site of the former Quincy Lumber Co. on Southern Artery. If all goes to plan, the new facility will be opened in October or November.

The 17th annual Quincy Senior Olympics drew 175 competitors who won more than 250 medals in the games. The oldest participants included George Conway, 90, of Milton and Lillian McLaughlin, 93, of Cohasset. Organizers called the games "the best ever."

City Councillor Patrick McDermott discovered 27 abandoned shopping carts during a stroll around his Ward 3 neighborhood and proposed an ordinance prohibiting the removal of carts from store property under penalty of fine to the retail establishment and the shopper.

The Building and Construction Trades Council sought a criminal complaint against Councillor Timothy Cahill alleging an ethical conflict of interest in his council vote against the controversial Highpoint. Members of his family own property near the proposed development.

Lincoln Property Company, owners of Presidential Place, disclosed plans to construct a $24 million, five-story office and retail building on an adjoining lot on Coddington St. that had been vacant for close to 14 years.

Deaths in May included: John R. Herbert, former editor of the Patriot Ledger and Boston Herald and retired president of the Quincy Cooperative Bank; Nora Cosbee, 103, last living member of the Reynolds Relief Corps of the Grand Army of the Republic in Weymouth; J. Ernest Aristide, retired nursing home administrator who was known as the "Mayor of Southwest Quincy"; Vicker DiGravio, former owner of the Spotlight Tavern in Quincy.

Thomas Clasby Named Council On Aging Director

Mayor James Sheets has appointed Thomas F. Clasby, Jr. as Director of the Council on Aging, effective Jan. 3.

Clasby will replace outgoing Director Brian Buckley, who will be the athletic director at North Quincy High School.

Clasby has worked for the Council on Aging since 1997, when he was appointed by Sheets to manage the new Elder Services Trans Van Program. Under his direction, the Trans Van Program has grown to include a fleet of 12 vehicles and a staff of 12. The program provides approximately 100 trips per day for medical, shopping and personal appointments. In excess of 800 seniors are enrolled and participate in the program.

THOMAS CLASBY, JR.

Clasby has assisted the Council on Aging with its Senior Olympics, the Senior Conference, and the development of senior housing at Naval Terrace and Squantum Gardens.

Clasby is a life long resident of Quincy, a graduate of North Quincy High School, Quincy College, and the Franciscan University of Ohio. He lives in Squantum.

"Brian Buckley did an outstanding job as Director of the Council on Aging and will be missed," said Sheets. "However, the City and its seniors are very fortunate to have someone of Tom Clasby's caliber ready to assume the director's position. Tom has outstanding organizational and leadership skills, and also deals extremely well with people.

I look forward to working with Tom to continue our efforts to provide quality services and programs for our seniors."

Union Congregational Church Available As Emergency Shelter

In the event of a power outage, Union Congregational Church, Beach St. and Rawson Rd., will be available to the community.

As a shelter, the church parlor has a working fire place, and the room could accommodate 20 to 30 people. In an emergency the churches third floor which also has a fireplace could accommodate about the same number. Church moderator Mark Doolittle and Rev. Swanson, pastor have offered the Church to the city Emergency Management Director Tony Siciliano as a shelter.

Let's tuck it to the businesses and get out of here - quick

Quincy City Councillors Ayers, Raymondi, D'Amico, Kolson

The assault on the businesses and citizens of Quincy lasted only seven minutes. It was government at its worst. It was a disgrace and a disgusting expression of indifference by four cowardly Quincy city Councillors: Ayers, Raymondi, D'Amico and Kolson.

Next time, you, the average resident of Quincy, could be the victim.

On Monday, December 13, 1999 the Quincy City Council refused to hear a single word from part of the citizenry that it pretends to represent. The issue was reconsideration the ratio of business property taxes to homeowner property taxes.

To their credit, Councillors Harold, McCauley and McDermott objected to this "Taxation without representation!" (If those words seem familiar, you'll remember that the war for American independence was fought for that very reason.)

Quincy businesses do not object to paying their fair share of taxes. In fact, for many years, businesses have picked up a major part of the tax load. And, if it were the vote of the Quincy City Council that businesses pay an increased share . . . then, businesses would dutifully and reluctantly accept it.

But, on Monday evening, with representatives of the Quincy business community present at the meeting, four of the seven councillors voted to adjourn their meeting without hearing a word from the business people present. Then they "ran" for the exits according to the Patriot Ledger.

Paying a tax rate double to the homeowner rate is a burden. Paying more than that is exceptionally difficult. To be prevented from stating businesses' side of the issue is appalling on the surface and totalitarian by its nature.

Next time, the Quincy City Council may decide that what you have to say may not be worth listening to either! -My personal opinion

City Petitions To Affiliate With Boston Medical

(Cont'd from page 12)

JUNE

The city of Quincy filed a petition with the legislature allowing the transfer of the 282-bed Quincy Hospital to a nonprofit affiliate of Boston Medical Center. Still needed to close the deal by Sept. 30, the end of the hospital's fiscal year, were state and federal funding.

To make the offer more attractive to Boston Medical Center, union employees at the hospital agreed to a 10-percent cut in labor costs and benefits for its 1,180 workers, including a $1 million reduction in health insurance costs.

Mayor James Sheets announced that he will run for reelection to a sixth term in November, which, if he is successful, would make him the longest serving mayor under Plan A in the city's history.

Councillor Paul Harold took off nomination papers to run for reelection to the city council, ending speculation that he planned to run for mayor against Sheets.

Despite the financial problems of the city-owned Quincy Hospital, both Moody's and Standard & Poor gave the city an "A" credit rating, enabling it to issue $18,750,000 in general obligation bonds to pay for capital projects.

Rosemary Wahlberg retired after 25 years as executive director of Quincy Community Action, but she wasn't through with public life. She announced that she would be a candidate for the city council from Ward 1. A week later she withdrew from the race for personal reasons.

Teachers, by a 538-77 vote, accepted a new three-year contract that would raise the salary of new teachers in increments to $29,292 by Jan. 1, 2002. Raises were retroactive to Sept. 1, 1998, when the old contract expired.

The city council unanimously approved a $165.58 operating budget for fiscal 2000, but the $1.4 million allotted to pay for teachers' raises was not enough and would have to be covered by a supplemental budget.

Deaths in June included: Katherine H. Gaughan, a senior at Notre Dame Academy and volunteer for charitable causes; Dr. Norman L. Wilson, former chief urologist at Quincy Hospital; Samuel A. Tuttle, a member of the Planning Board for many years.

OLD GLORY AND Quincy Rotarians made a perfect patriotic match in the 48th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade in June. Leading the marchers is Past President Lynne Houghton. (Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble)

Gorman: Fire Stations Need Updating

JULY

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman warned the city council that Quincy needs to address the capital requirements of the Fire Department. The city had eight stations, many of which could not physically accommodate new apparatus.

"The stations were built in the horse-and-buggy days," said the chief. "Over the next 10 years the city will have to take a hard look at the locations (of the stations) and the building themselves."

After draining about 150 million gallons of water from Granite Rail Quarry in the past year, District Attorney William Keating said there was no indication of a body that had been reported sighted. About a foot of water remained when the pumps were withdrawn.

Filing deadline for the Sept. 14 preliminary election passed, leaving the city with seven city council and school committee seats up for grabs. Mayor Sheets, seeking a sixth two-year term, had opposition in the person of Robert Boussy.

Modernization work on the Fore River Shipyard was 10 months behind schedule and the new owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries Inc., had fallen behind in repayment of a $55 million loan from the Fleet National Bank. The federal Maritime Administration was urged to reassess the finances of MHI.

Brockton scored 4-3 and 4-0 victories over the Morrisette Post in the sectional finals of the American Legion baseball tournament, ending the Quincy team's late season winning streak at 10 games.

Deaths in July included: Elaine A. Zoia, a member of the North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame; Allen M. Kelly, owner of South Shore Printing and a decorated World War II veteran; Angelo M. LoCicero, teacher and sports standout.

Happy New Year!

Happy New Millennium!

New Year's Eve, 1999, will be a special time. We will be ending the 1000 Millennium and beginning the 2000 Millennium.

A millennium is a period of one thousand (1,000) years. For almost one thousand years our date has begun with a one — 1999. Soon it will begin with a two — 2000. It will begin on Jan. 1, 2000 — or the "short way," 1/1/00

New Year's Eve, going from Dec. 31, 1999 to Jan. 1, 2000, will be an exciting event. People are already making special plans for it. Many hotels, resorts and cruise ships are sold out for New Year's Eve 1999.

According to the calendar we use, the Gregorian Calendar or the Christian Calendar, the first millennium began with the year of Christ's birth and ended in the year 999. The second millennium is from the years 1000 to 1999. We will soon be entering the third millennium, the years 2000 to 2999.

Do you think there was anything special about the beginning of millennium, almost one thousand years ago? Probably not. People were using all kinds of calendars. Each culture used their own calendar. Christians had their calendar, but it was not used worldwide as it is now. Jews and Hindus and Muslims each had their own calendars. Years started on different dates.

Try to imagine what the world was like in the year 1000, the beginning of this millennium:

- Our country, America, hadn't been discovered.
- Many people thought the earth was flat.
- There was no electricity — and therefore no electric lights or television.
- There were no automobiles or airplanes.
- People did not travel far from their hometown.
- There were about 800 million (800,000,000) people in the world. Now there are over 5 billion (5,000,000,000).

How will you begin the new millennium? Try to think of a way to observe the beginning of the new millennium so that you will remember it all your life.

Maybe you and your family could make a time capsule of the year 2000. Think about what it could contain to help you remember what life was like at the beginning of the new millennium. Your children and your grandchildren and your great-grandchildren would love to look through you time capsule and get a glimpse of what your life was like in the year 2000.

What could the time capsule contain?

- The newspaper of Jan. 1, 2000.
- The Television Guide from your newspaper for the first week of the new millennium.
- A few pages of your homework.
- A list of your favorite meals or foods.
- A shopping catalog — showing styles and prices of household goods and clothing.
- A supermarket flyer listing the prices of food.
- A letter to your children and grandchildren telling them about yourself. Tell them what you hope for them.
- Something from you place of worship — a newsletter, Order of Worship.
- Your family tree, going back a few generations.
- A list of your favorite things.
- A picture of you and your family.

And you can thing of many more things.

Select a special container for your time capsule, label it, and put it in a safe place. Every once in a while (maybe every New Year's Day) get it out and look through the treasures you have gathered for the generations to come after you.

Happy New Millennium!

KEEPING THE FAITH

Regular attendance at religious services may do as much good for the health of older individuals as for their souls. This is the finding of a six-year study involving nearly 4,000 elderly North Carolina residents. According to a Duke University researchers' report in the Journal of Gerontology, those who attended religious services once a week or more were 28% more likely to survive during the study than those who went less often. This finding came after accounting for such factors as age, education, health habits and medical problems. It lead gerontologists to conclude that regular attendance at religious services provides older worshippers with greater social connections and support, better coping skills in times of stress and a tendency toward healthier lifestyles.

Belonging to a community--whether it's church or family, a circle of friends or a hobby club, provides essential support for one's well-being. Marina Place, a senior living residence, offers independent and assisted living. We encourage our residents to live full, autonomous lives, and we also offer options if you should need help with daily activities. For more information call us at 617-770-3264 (Four Seaport Drive).

P.S. The findings of the study mentioned above are bolstered by similar findings in other studies.

Wollaston Beach Flats Open To Clam Digging

(Cont'd from page 14)

AUGUST

The clam flats at Wollaston Beach were opened to commercial diggers for the first time in 10 years. About 40 diggers came away with some 10,000 pounds of clams which were to be taken to the purification plant in Newburyport.

Robert E. Foy III announced his retirement after more than 17 years as city auditor to be effective as soon as his successor could be appointed. Foy served under five mayors starting with Walter Hannon.

Members of the Fatherhood Coalition picketed Quincy District Court on behalf of the Rev. Harry Stewart, a divorced father who was sentenced to six months for violating a restraining order by opening a foyer door.

Beth Ann Strollo, associate director for 12 years, was named to succeed Rosemary Wahlberg as executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs.

A Capital Supplemental Budget passed by the legislature contained $78 million for a major rehabilitation of the Fore River Bridge designed to promote structural safety and traffic flow on the busy gateway to the far South Shore.

Bob Noble, assistant coach for 14 years, was named interim head coach of football at Quincy High, succeeding Peter Chella who was appointed principal at the new Point-Webster School.

Gov. Paul Cellucci vetoed a one-time $291,000 state appropriation to repair the historic United First Parish Church but Senate President Thomas Birmingham said he has the votes to override the veto.

Semi-pro football returned to Quincy for the first time in 39 years when the Quincy Granite was formed and entered the New England Football League. The Granite won their first game, 25-0, over the South Shore Stars of Hingham.

District Attorney Keating said the Granite Rail Quarry in West Quincy, where investigators spent $2 million on a two-year unsuccessful search for a body, should be filled in because it is a death trap.

Building Trades Council President Tom McKay said the union is dropping its charge of criminal conflict of interest against Councillor Tim Cahill but Cahill said he plans to continue his defense.

"The reason we are dropping the complaint is that we now know the Ethics Commission has conducted an investigation and we feel confident that they will find Cahill guilty and take appropriate action," said McKay.

Deaths in August included: Kirstie Aho, wife of the pastor of the West Quincy Congregational Church; Margaret Djerf, wife of the late Dr. Charles Djerf, pediatrician and longtime school committee member; Dr. Sidney Cutler, a dentist in Quincy for 54 years and former team dentist for the Boston Celtics.

19 New Police Officers Sworn In SEPTEMBER

Gregory Hanley and Russell C. Patten III in Ward 1 and Joseph J. Newton and James Stamos in Ward 6 won the preliminary election and will run for the vacant city council seats in the November election.

A total of 19 new police officers, 18 men and one woman, were sworn in by Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallsen, achieving Mayor Sheets' goal of a 167-member force.

City Councillor Frank McCauley denounced School Supt. Eugene Creedon's plan to hire a second athletic director for the schools. He suggested the schools might instead want to eliminate the fees charged to students to participate in athletics rather than spend $61,000 on a new administrator.

Michael McFarland, former executive secretary to Mayor Sheets and a member of the school committee, was chosen by the city council to replace the retired Robert Foy as city auditor, effective Oct. 4.

Deaths in September included: Louis Cassis, a hair stylist for 60 years; Joseph A. Donahue, distinguished architect and World War II diarist; Thomas F. Hurlebaus, longtime library trustee and former commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

Friday Deadline For Sun 'Citizen Of Year' Ballots

Olin Taylor for helping others, especially veterans, ill-children and the less fortunate as his "labor of love," 1996.

Robert Derbes for his volunteer work and many contributions to the community during a "life-long love affair" with his native Quincy, 1997.

Many Staying Close To Home

Y2K May Increase First Night Turnout Friday

Quincy's eighth First Night Celebration Friday is expected to go off without a hitch from any Y2K glitch.

In fact, says Rhonda Merrill, City Director of Special Events and Tourism, the Y2K could make this year's turnout the largest so far.

"A lot of people are staying close to home this New Year's Eve and a lot them are attending local events," she notes.

"First Night is a family oriented local event and I think it will draw as large a crowd as last year and maybe even a larger one.

"We are ready to put the big show on and expect to have a lot of people there to see it."

Last year's event drew an estimated 35,000.

Highlights of this year's celebration include a fireworks display at 6:15 p.m., a Festival of Lights Parade at 6:30 p.m. and a Laser Light Show at 7 p.m.

The fireworks were moved to an earlier time so that the entire family can enjoy it, Merrill said. They will be displayed over Faxon Field on Coddington St. behind the Center for Technical Education.

Following the fireworks, the Festival of Lights Parade will proceed down Hancock St. in Quincy Center with many vehicles decked out in a variety of colorful lights.

The Laser Light Show will be shown on the facade of Presidents Place in Quincy Center.

A new feature to the laser show will be "Millennium Wishes" allowing people to share their wishes for the new millennium with the thousands of others attending First Night.

First Night will climax with a laser light countdown to 2000 shortly before midnight.

First Night will also feature more than 200 entertainers at 20 separate locations, all within walking distance of one another.

The acts include Dixieland music, children's folk music, theater groups, talent show, an Octoberfest band, video dance party, jazz singers, an art and photography show, harp players, reggae music, comedic singers and other entertainment.

"First Night Quincy provides a family-oriented alcohol free environment in which to celebrate the New Year," said Merrill.

"Through the support of the city of Quincy, our sponsors in the Quincy business community and our dedicated volunteers we are able to provide countless opportunities for everyone in the family to safely enjoy New Year's Eve.

"The fireworks display, Festival of Lights Parade, laser light show, international food court, and the variety of entertainment ensures activities for every member of the family to enjoy."

There will be free parking at the Ross parking garage on Granite St., the Hancock Parking lot on Chestnut St., the Presidents Place parking garage and the Stop & Shop garage on Burgin Parkway. All of these parking facilities are within easy walking distance to all the First Night activities.

Below is the schedule of activities which begin at 4 p.m.:

THE QUINCY MILLENNIUM Committee float that appeared in the Christmas parade will return for the Festival of Lights Parade at the First Night Celebration Friday. Tamara Erdley, show here, designed the Quincy Millennium logo.

The five:

Parkingway, off Granite St., Ross parking garage and a lot in the Presidents Place parking garage on Hancock St., the Stop & Shop UDAG garage on Burgin Parkway and the Hancock parking lot across from Quincy District Court.

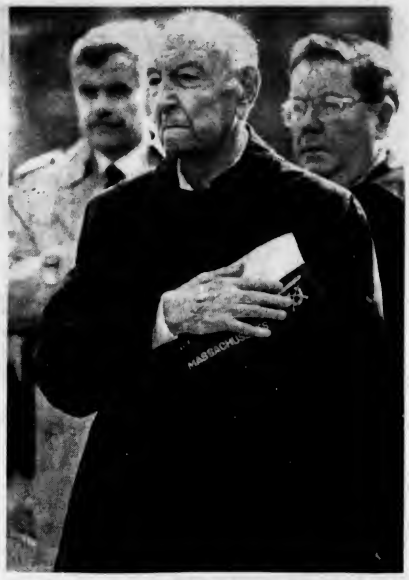
Cellucci Signs $12.1 Million Loan For Quincy Hospital

(Cont'd from page 16)

OCTOBER

Gov. Paul Cellucci came to Quincy to sign legislation approving a state loan of $12.1 million to smooth the way for Quincy Hospital's affiliation with the Boston Medical Center. The loan was passed by the legislature Oct. 6, six days beyond the deadline due to a stalemate between the house and senate.

Site preparation work was underway for a 240,000 square foot office building at Crown Colony office park and work was set to begin on a 460-room hotel in another section of the park.



Councillor Stephen Durkin, chairman of the Mayor's Wollaston Beach Task Force, announced that the quality of water at Wollaston Beach is "clearly improving" from a grade of "C" in 1998 to "B" in 1999.

A $2.4 million bond issue was approved for school renovations, including work on the Adams Shore Library and the Broad Meadows, Atherton Hough and Atlantic schools. It was the second phase of a $73 million program that includes a new Quincy High School.

Councillor Daniel Raymondi proposed an ordinance that would penalize landlords whose tenants overburden police with frequent telephone calls. The landlords would have to pay for extra police details assigned to watch their properties.

Deaths in October included: Frank Anselmo, 101, a veteran of World Wars I and II and a 30-year member of the School Committee; David Rowell, former Quincy chief of detectives and police chief of Pelham, N.H.; Dr. Peter J. Angelo, retired anesthesiologist and general practitioner at Quincy Hospital.

Sheets Wins Historic Sixth Term

(Cont'd from page 20)

NOVEMBER

Gregory Hanley and Joseph Newton won vacant seats on the city council in Ward 1 and 6, respectively, in the general election. Mayor Sheets won an historic sixth term as chief executive by trouncing Robert J. Boussy.

Quincy Medical Center, formerly Quincy Hospital, received a check for $12.1 million from the state in a non-interest loan to facilitate its affiliation with the Boston Medical Center.

Massachusetts Heavy Industries Inc. announced that it is seeking a $145 million commercial refinancing of the Fore River Shipyard but a suspicious City Councillor Paul Harold said he will continue his plan to revoke the yard's tax breaks.

Fire gutted the College Bookstore on Hancock St., a building that once housed the Quincy town hall. Firefighter Richard Sullivan suffered a broken hand, bruised hip and lacerations of the head when he fell 10 feet while fighting the fire.

Quincy High School defeated North Quincy, 21-13, in the 67th renewal of the annual Thanksgiving Day football rivalry, ending a losing streak that extended to 20 games over two seasons.

John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging, was the grand marshal of the 47th annual Christmas Festival Parade featuring nearly 100 marching and specialty units and 26 floats constructed on the theme "Christmas Memories of the 20th Century."

Mayor James Sheets suffered injuries to his hip and shoulder in a seven-foot fall when an attic ladder in his home gave way. The mayor spent a week recuperating at his home with his feet propped up tending to city business.

The city council appropriated an additional $500,000 to continue work on the addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library, bringing the estimated cost to $15 million. The project is expected to be finished by the summer of 2000.

Deaths in November included: Vincent Solimini, retired barber and father of seven sons and seven daughters; Ronald J. Christensen, an artist whose work is featured in collections in Boston, New York and Naples.

Council Votes Heavier Tax Burden On Business

DECEMBER

The city council voted to increase both the residential and business tax rates and place a higher percentage of the tax burden on city businesses. The new residential rate is $15.71 per $1000 value, up 47 cents; and the business rate is $35.25 per $1000, up $2.97. The business rate was set at 175 percent of valuation, the highest permitted by the state.

The council met briefly to reaffirm by a 4-3 vote their earlier vote, but the decision didn't sit well with the business community, particularly since the businessmen were not given an opportunity to present their case during the five-minute meeting.

"A slap in the face to the business community," Councillor Frank McCauley called it.

"An embarrassment to the council and to the city," said Councillor Patrick McDermott.

Highpoint Resolved --But Is It?

(Cont'd from page 22)

At its last meeting of the year the council voted 6-1 to approve a compromise Highpoint Plan. The new development offered a 1,040 unit project with 990 one- and-two-bedroom apartments and 50 units for senior citizens.

Other parts of the deal were: the waiving of $1.3 million in builder's fees by the city; the deeding of 22 acres to the city for open space; and an agreement that the developer would pay the lion's share of environmental clean-up costs.

The real prize, however, was that Congress Group Ventures President Dean Stratouly would withdraw his application for a comprehensive permit, which would have allowed him to build a 1,641 unit version of the project which included subsidized housing.

So, after months of bitter wrangling and name-calling and lawsuits, the Highpoint Issue appeared to have finally been resolved. But was it?

On Christmas Eve four Quincy residents led by former City Councillor Charles McIntyre filed a registered voter suit against the body of the council for violating the state's open meeting laws. The details of the Highpoint compromise, the suit contends, were worked out in a closed-door, executive session Dec. 3 with no public input. The suit wants the Dec. 21 vote rescinded as an illegal result of the executive session.

The new lawsuit could affect Stratouly's decision to withdraw his comprehensive permit, thus assuring that Highpoint stays in the headlines for a little while longer.

Deaths in December included: Bernard O'Donnell, retired administrator of the State Department of Public Works; Giaviannino "John" Falcione, guard/interpreter at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Defeat Randolph 57-46

North Boys Break Into Win Column

BASKETBALL

The North Quincy boys' basketball team received an early present last week — its first win of the season.

After three straight setbacks to start the year, despite playing well in each game, North Quincy finally put one in the win column with a 57-46 win over Randolph at home last Thursday.

North Quincy played Boston Latin Tuesday in a two-day Christmas tournament held at Stoughton. It's next game is Jan. 4 at home against Taunton.

It was sweet revenge for North Quincy (1-3, 0-1), which blew a 13-point lead at Randolph Dec. 17 en route to a 59-55 loss.

In that game the Red Raiders played like the Boston Celtics, unable to put a team away in the second half.

Head coach Ted Stevenson said he was "very disappointed" with that loss and that Randolph is a "team they should beat."

North Quincy has come full-circle since, and it put it all together in the rematch.

"We played very smart in the second half unlike the first game," Stevenson said. "We played our game and not their game."

Senior center Dan O'Toole, a transfer from Archbishop Williams, tallied a double-double with a team-high 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Sophomore guard Phil McGillicuddy, who led the team in scoring last season with 12.5 points per game, chipped in with 14 points.

Michael Christian paced Randolph's attack with 13 points.

Last Tuesday, North Quincy took on league powerhouse Silver Lake and played the Lakers close before falling, 67-58.

"It showed we can play with anyone in the league," Stevenson said. "It's a question of us learning how to win down the stretch."

The Red Raiders trailed by 14 points, 17-3, early in the first half but battled back to tie it at 45-45 in the second half.

They had a chance to win down the stretch as they were only down three, 55-52, with two minutes left in the game. But Silver Lake couldn't miss from the foul line, hitting 14 of 16 second-half free throw attempts.

McGillicuddy netted 18 points and junior guard Brandon Sleeth scored 11.

Junior co-captain Chris Conroy powered Silver Lake with 18 points. Dennis McCall had 15 points and senior co-captain Bob Kniffen dumped in 14.

In the first meeting with Randolph, North Quincy shot 46% in the first half but went stone-cold in the second, shooting 37% and blowing a 13-point lead.

"We just panicked a little," Stevenson said. "We couldn't handle the pressure. We forced up quick shots and didn't take time off the clock."

The back-breaker came with under a minute to play when Randolph hit a three-pointer that bounced high off the rim, off the top of the backboard and into the bottom of the net for a two-point lead. North Quincy never came back.

McGillicuddy led the team with 15 points followed by senior forward Matt McCann's 14. Junior guard Adam Woo, who Stevenson called a "real consistent player," scored 11 points and O'Toole nine.

North Quincy suffered a 15-point loss, 60-45, to Norwood in the season opener but Stevenson was pleased with his team's performance.

"Actually, I was pleased with how we played in the first game," Stevenson said. "Norwood is a very good team. We were in a position to win it."

Despite the final score, North Quincy only trailed by five points with about 1:30 left in the game. But Norwood converted a three-point play to seal the game.

McGillicuddy, who was coming off an ankle injury and had only practiced once, poured in a team-high 18 points and he also dished out seven assists.

Woo scored 10 points and O'Toole added nine points and eight rebounds.

Former Quincy Man Honored As Hero By Celtics

A former Quincy man was honored as a local hero by the Boston Celtics as part of the team's "Heroes Among Us" program before a recent game against the Denver Nuggets at the FleetCenter.

John W. Kennedy of Scituate, son of the late Quincy School Committeeman Christopher Kennedy, helped save a man's life. Kennedy heard gunshots in the street, went down to the scene and grabbed the gun from the assailant and proceeded to help the man who was shot.

Kennedy, a physical therapist for Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy in downtown Boston, is married with four children.

"Heroes Among Us" is a program designed to honor and recognize members of society that stand tall in their commitment to community. Positively affecting the lives of others is a mission and focus of the Boston Celtics and at each home game this season, the Celtics would like to recognize an individual who has made a special contribution.

JOHN W. KENNEDY (center) joins Boston Celtics forward Antoine Walker and Denver Nuggets forward Antonio McDyess on the famed parquet floor before a recent game at the FleetCenter. Kennedy was honored as a local hero as part of the team's "Heroes Among Us" program.

Sylvia Sees Sluggish Victory

Quincy Looks Better On Paper Than On Ice

HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

Looking at the margin of victory in the first two games of the season ,10-3, you'd think the Quincy hockey team skated figure eights around its opponents.

Last Tuesday, Quincy (2-0) opened its season with, what looks like on paper, a convincing 6-1 win over Rockland. But head coach Bob Sylvia saw a different team on the ice — a sluggish one.

"We didn't get off to a good start," Sylvia said. "We were sloppy, both mentally and physically. Even though we won, we didn't play like we were capable off."

In just 24 hours the Presidents underwent a complete makeover, knocking off Franklin, one of the top Division I schools in the state, 4-2, at home.

"The Quincy team played like we should play against Franklin," Sylvia said. "We rose to the occasion 24 hours later. We took a positive step forward."

Quincy received strong performances from the two units that will carry the team this season: offense and goaltending.

Senior Brian Nolan, sophomores Bill McKeon and Dave Germaine and Paul Campbell found the cage to pace the Presidents' scoring attack.

They're part of the first two lines that will be looked upon to provide most of the scoring early on. McKeon and Germaine join junior Scott Mattson for one group, and Nolan centers the other unit with senior Mike Sullivan and sophomore Brian Scott.

"The first two lines are our meat and potatoes," Sylvia said. "Those lines have to get us goals. But the key for us scoring goals this year will be how fast the third line develops."

Senior Ryan Kreuger is the No. 1 goaltender with a pair of talented sophomores, Tom Shruhan and Shawn Flaherty, waiting in the wings but who should see some time this year.

Kreuger was between the pipes for the first two games.

"I can't think of any other time that I've had three good goaltenders. It's our most solid position.," Sylvia said.

Quincy traveled to Winthrop Tuesday and its next game is at Taunton Jan. 5.

Quincy Wins First At Taunton, 51-46

The Quincy boys' basketball team picked up its first win of the season last week after opening the year with a pair of non-league losses.

Playing without senior guard Dan Kelly who's nursing a knee injury, Quincy (1-3, 1-0) traveled to Taunton last Tuesday and escaped with a 51-46 victory.

Senior guard Larry Antonellis scored 15 points and junior guard David Centrella 12. Senior center Sean Fitzpatrick and senior guard Chase Clarke played well.

Last Thursday, the Presidents were blown out by Nauset, 64-46, in a non-league match-up.

Fitzpatrick tallied a team-high 15 points.

In the season opener Dec. 14, Quincy was no match for Catholic Memorial, which cruised to a 73-42 win.

Tim Cannon led Catholic Memorial with 15 points and Derek Rogers scored a team-high 12 points for Quincy.

Quincy played better in the second game of the season but the result was the same: a loss. This time, 48-37, to Marshfield.

Kathleen Burke Scores 17 At Wheaton

Kathleen Burke of Quincy finished tied for fifth on the Wheaton College women's soccer team in scoring with 17 points.

The sophomore forward was one of nine players to post double-figure scoring for the Lyons this season.

Wheaton shocked the soccer world as it captured the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) championship, finishing with the ninth highest winning percentage in the country (92%) at 23-2-0 and a No. 22 national ranking.

"We attained various goals that we set out to accomplish before the season," said Luis Reis, the NSCAA New England Division III Regional Coach of the Year. "We had a fantastic season even though we fell short of our No. 1 goal of earning a bid into the NCAA tournament."

Wheaton came up one game short of a trip to the tourney when it dropped a 1-0 decision to Wellesley College in the New England Women's and Men's Athletic Conference (NEWMAC) finals.

TRACK

The North Quincy girls' track team dropped a close meet to powerful Bridgewater-Raynham last Wednesday but bounced back later in the day to blow out Barnstable for a split at the Reggie Lewis Center.

The Red Raiders fell to the Trojans, 52-48, and then cruised to a 67-33 win over the Cape Red Raiders.

North Quincy (2-2) competed in the Auerbach Freshman-Sophomore meet Monday and the Brown Invitational Tuesday.

In the dash, senior Liz Leuchte finished third against B-R and second against Barnstable. In the hurdles sophomore Laura Wells was third against B-R but second against Barnstable, running a personal best of 10.0.

The tandem of senior Lynda Wilson and sophomore Natalie Caron finished 1-2 against both schools in the mile. Senior Geneveive O'Brien won it all in the 1000 meters with sophomore Beth Houghton taking third against Barnstable.

In the 600 meters junior Kellyrose O'Brien grabbed first place against B-R and took second against Barnstable. Freshman Jessica Jacques was third against Barnstable.

Junior Colleen Lahar finished second against both schools in the 300 meters. Senior Sarah Houghton and junior Linda Nguyen finished 1-2 against both in the two mile.

In the high jump, sophomore Katie Markhard won with a PR of 4'10", qualifying for the states for the first time. Freshman Krystle Neves finished second against both schools.

In the shot-put seniors Lisa Dellacroce and Lena Yuen were 2-3 against B-R but added senior Ellen Tang to sweep Barnstable. In the long jump Lahar was second against Barnstable and third against B-R.

The 4 x 200 relay of Leuchte, senior Charlene Cote, junior Melissa McKenna and Kellyrose O'Brien won against Barnstable, and the 4 x 400 relay of Wells, Lahar, Caron and Geneveive O'Brien won against both schools, just missing the state qualifying mark by 0.8 seconds.

At the Brown University Freshmen meet two North Quincy members dominated. Matt Francis took first in the dash, high jump and 400 meters, while George Phipps took the shot-put and finished second in the dash.

The varsity boys' shot-put relay of junior Kyle Piazza and seniors Brian Deptula and Paul Wise traveled to the Brown Invitational Monday.

LOUIS DIBONA (right) contributed $2,000 to the Quincy Retired Teachers Association Scholarship Fund to be awarded to a NQHS Student/Athlete, male or female, at school's end in June. DiBona and his wife Elizabeth, who live in San Jose, CA, have contributed to the QRTA for the past several years. Accepting the award are, from left, Louis Ioanilli, current assistant principal and newly appointed NQHS principal; Stephen Moynihan, assistant treasurer of the QRTA, and Eileen Feeney, current principal of NQHS who will retire Dec. 31. DiBona and Moynihan are both members of the NQHS Class of 1948.

Helpful Hints On The Sweet Uses Of Honey

(NAPS)—A growing number of people have a sweet idea on how to treat bumps, cuts and other "ouches." They're using honey.

A spoonful of honey can dry those tears and maybe even bring a smile, but did you know that a dab of honey applied once the injury has been cleaned will also aid in healing? A recent review of medical research documents honey's effectiveness as an antimicrobial agent. Antimicrobials inhibit the growth of certain bacteria and help prevent infection.

The Ancient Healer

The ancient Egyptians used honey to treat cataracts, cuts and burns. Hippocrates, the Greek physician, prepared honey-based cures for skin disorders and ulcers. Even in modern times, honey was used as a healer. During World War I, German doctors used honey mixed with cod liver oil to surgically dress soldiers' wounds.

The Latest Scientific Buzz

A recent review of scientific literature by Richard F. Stier, microbiologist and independent researcher, has indicated that honey is an effective antimicrobial agent.

"Honey is antimicrobial for many reasons," Stier says, "including its high sugar content, which limits the amount of water available to microorganisms for growth and its low protein content, which deprives bacteria of nitrogen needed for growth. The presence in honey of hydrogen peroxide and the antioxidants in honey also help inhibit bacterial growth."

At the same time, honey has other properties that help promote healing and prevent scarring. Honey is hygroscopic, which means it can draw moisture from the air.

"When used on minor skin injuries, honey's hygroscopic nature promotes healing, helps prevent scarring and keeps the injured area from adhering to the bandage," Stier says.

Sweet Relief

Scrapes and abrasions happen often in an active family, but good home treatment can reduce scarring and help prevent infection. While honey is a useful treatment for minor scrapes or burns, serious wounds should always receive professional treatment. For the everyday bumps and scrapes, a few steps will bring relief:

- For scrapes, wash the area with soap and water to remove any dirt. For burns, hold the injured area under cold running water until it feels better.
- Apply honey directly to the scrape or burn to help prevent infection.
- Use a bandage to cover the area.
- Reapply honey and bandage for several days. Honey's hygroscopic nature will help prevent scarring and keep the injured area from adhering to the bandage.

Honey's ability to attract and retain moisture also makes it an effective ingredient in skin and hair-care products. A leaflet of information on honey's use in cosmetics, and "recipes" for honey beauty treatments, is available free from the National Honey Board. To get a copy of the Bright & Beautiful, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: National Honey Board, BBMAT, 390 Lashley St., Longmont, CO 80501. Allow six to eight weeks for delivery.

When you hear soft sounds better, you can understand speech better because you can hear the very quiet sounds like "p, b, t, k, sh, th and more. There is nothing better than Mother Nature's normal, natural hearing. The next best thing is a digital hearing aid. Sure, they are more expensive; quality always is. Analog hearing aids are still available, but they have always fallen short and many have ended up in the drawer. Find out if you're a candidate with a free hearing test! Foot Notes
by Dr. Richard A. Hacker
Surgeon-Podiatrist

ONYCHOMYCOSIS

Onychomycosis is a fungal infection of the nails that is difficult to cure. It is commonly acquired as part of an athlete's foot infection. Trauma or damage to the nail may predispose a person to developing onychomycosis. Mild infections cause little or no symptoms. In serious cases, the nail turns whitish, thickens and detaches from the nail bed, and debris from the nail usually collects under its edge. Treatment depends on the severity of symptoms. Removal of the nail does not cure onychomycosis. Antifungal medications taken orally may alleviate symptoms and eventually cure the infection, but they cause side effects. Nails should be trimmed very short to minimize discomfort. Rubbing clotrimazole cream into the nail daily may control the infection.

Proper care for fungal infections and other foot conditions is vital to your program of overall good health. We have taken special attention to provide comprehensive care to manage foot and ankle problems as well as prevent them before they occur. At 110 West Squantum St., No. Quincy, we specialize in the evaluation and treatment of many symptoms affecting the lower extremities. If you are experiencing any type of foot discomfort, we hope you'll call us at 617-472-3466 for help.

P.S. Terbinafine is a new medication that is now available to treat fungal infections of the nail with few side effects.

A Thought For The Week

DO YOU HAVE A 2000 FLIGHT PLAN?

On your Flight Plan you will be writing a record, a chapter each day. The pages before you are blank. But every thought, word and deed will be recorded upon them. This is the day of beginning again - the first day of the rest of your life.

The New Year does not remain "new" very long. Soon it is on the way to becoming an old year. But the dreams that are new at the beginning of 2000 can be fresh every morning ... 2000 is an occasion to check your course, question your causes, measure your concerns ... then ... to proceed in the path which you find to be worthwhile. It is a time to give yourself new encouragement, to lay aside past failures, forget unmet goals and set yourself to living the present in a faithful and meaningful way ... Yes, 2000 will be mostly what you plan it to be and what you work for it to become...

Let us forget the things that are past, the old failures, disappointments, prejudices and hates. Let us stretch forward to the future and enter 2000 with courage, hope, humility and faith ...

Your Horoscope by Natasha

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Not all the problems that arise at work can be solved. Do the best you can. Try not to let distractions throw you off course. Weekend celebrating is appropriate.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep the lines of communication open between you and a partner. Try not to let little things get in the way of harmony. A career matter is happily resolved.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be inconsistent in the way you handle your money, particularly in light of the celebration you have planned. Resist penny-wise, pound-foolish behavior. Don't let a friend's negative thinking get you down.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You could get conflicting advice about a financial concern. Double-check schedules to avert holiday travel mix-ups. Accent positive thinking this weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Minor delays in business could test your patience. Getting upset won't do anything to further your progress. Make allowances for others' shortcomings.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There could be a mix-up in holiday party schedules. You might have too much to do at home to feel comfortable really whooping it up. An in-law asks for advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You're likely to have ambivalent feelings about socializing. Part of you would prefer to be by yourself when the New Year rings in. Don't dwell on a past matter. Let bygones be bygones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Concentration might not be at its best on the job. Unexpected developments could throw you off course, but this is temporary. Try not to let a domestic concern upset you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Overall, it is not the best week for financial dealings. Everyone's mind is on the approaching new millennium and the celebration. Innocent expenditures could easily mount up.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Take care you don't misplace something of value. You might not be ready to make up your mind about a financial matter. Delays at work are likely due to the holiday.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You'll enjoy the company of surprise visitors, but you might fall behind on some projects. With partners, there's a need to be cooperative.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Business comes before partying. A child could be temperamental. There are some loose ends at work you'll want to tie up before relaxing for the holiday.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK are an original thinker who is visionary in outlook. You have much nervous energy and need time alone to keep yourself on an even keel. Your ideals are high and you seek a job that reflects this.

Eastern Nazarene On Top TeacherEducation List

Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) has been included in the list of 18 educator preparation institutions that achieved cumulative passing rates of 80 percent or more for their candidates who took and passed all of the Massachusetts Educator Certification Tests (MECT).

Tests are given Communication and Literacy Skills, and in individual subject matter, and in each area there are skills subtests.

Of the 53 institutions of higher education who sent five or more candidates for the tests, only the following 18 schools achieved a cumulative 80 percent pass rate for all tests: Boston College, Boston University, Brandeis University, Clark University, Eastern Nazarene College, Elms College, Emerson College, Gordon College, Harvard Graduate School of Education, Lesley College, Massachusetts General Hospital Institute of Health Professions, Massachusetts College of Art, Mount Holyoke College, Shady Hill School, Simmons College, Smith College, Tufts University, and Wellesly College.

ENC Certification Officer, Dr. Loren Ranstrom noted, "The success of ENC's students on the MECT is a reflection of a total faculty effort in fulfilling our responsibility to produce quality teachers for the public schools."

A total of 12,519 candidates took some part of the MECT this past program year. Comparison of the results for program year two (1998-1999) with program year one (1997-1998) shows that the state's cumulative passing rate for candidates who took and passed all tests has increased from 55 percent to 70 percent.

Dr. Ranstrom said, "This Massachusetts increase reflects the efforts made by teacher preparation institutions to develop teachers who are able to meet the many demands placed upon them teaching in the public schools of the Commonwealth."

It would be to have a bike. I want a bike so that I can go places faster. I could also ride to the mall to buy things or take it to a friends house. My final reason for wanting a bike is that I won't fall as much as when I'm on my roller blades.

It would be that Pokemon was never invented because of the violence. I wish that children wouldn't buy Pokemon cards and would spend their Christmas money on gifts for their family or people who don't have much of anything.

Suit Filed Against Council On Highpoint

not. However, the suit does not name individuals but charges all nine councillors as a body.

The suit points out that Dean Stratouly, president of Congress Group Ventures, was present at the meeting along with his attorney, Richard Rudman of Hill & Barlow, P.C. but that the council's attorney on the issue, Thomas Kiley of Cosgrove, Eisenberg, and Kiley, P.C., was not present. It also states that, at the Dec. 21 special meeting in which the council voted to approve the compromise plan, there was no presentation by the developer or any of its representatives of the new plan.

"It's illegal, plain and simple," said McIntyre. "The dec. 21 vote was a done deal, a fait accompli. What we want is that Dec. 21 vote rescinded so that we can have a public hearing, an open and frank debate about those issues which were discussed on Dec. 3. We don't know what those issues are nor does anybody else who wasn't there."

On Dec. 21 the council voted 6-1 to approve a compromise Highpoint plan of 1,040 units with 990 one-and-two bedroom apartments and 50 units for senior citizens with the city agreeing to waive fees and the developer agreeing to deed 22 acres of the land to the city for open space and pay for most of the environmental clean-up of the property.

Neither side was thrilled with the compromise but it appeared to put an end to the months of lawsuits and arguments that have plagued the development since the council rejected an earlier plan in March. Most importantly for the city, Stratouly had agreed to drop an application for a comprehensive permit for 1,641 units, which included subsidized housing, once construction started.

Although the lawsuit might affect Stratouly's decision to drop the comprehensive permit, McIntyre does not see that as the most important issue. "I'm more interested in holding elected officials to their oaths than some personal fight against Mr. Stratouly. Personally I've never met the man."

The suit allows 10 days to be served and 20 days for an answer. A hearing date will be set by the court.

Handicap Parking Fine Raised To $100

At its last meeting of the year the city council passed a handicap parking fine increase from $50 to $100.

The funds will go directly to the Quincy Commission on Disabilities for capital improvement use and other programs geared to make the city more handicap accessible and create an awareness for the disabled.

The idea for the increase passed with the support of the Commission On Disabilities, the city council, and the mayor.

"No one should park in a handicap parking spot and deprive someone with disabilities and violators will be punished," said Councillor Bruce Ayers, who at the same meeting was lauded for his continued leadership on handicap issues.

Ayers also praised the Commission On Disabilities for their many accomplishments and for working with him over the years.
